BUSINESS

Charlevoix Camera Shop under new ownership

By Laurie Lounsbury

Fairy tale stories usually involve knights on dark horses and castles on a windy hill. Marell Staffel's story involves nights in a darkroom and cameras on the windowsill. Through years of hard work and determination, Staffel has created her own fairy tale. She bought the Charlevoix Camera Shop July 30 after working there as an employee for eight years.

As the only child of Bonnie and Bill Staffel, owners of Staffel's Pottery, Marell spent her childhood summers in Charlevoix. She was always interested in photography, and bought her first camera at the Charlevoix Camera Shop. Staffel was already well equipped with an artistic background, thanks to her parents.

Staffel returned to Charlevoix in 1980 with her two daughters, Heather and Shannon, after having lived in the Detroit area for many years. She enrolled in North Central Michigan College to earn an associate's degree in business while she worked at the Grey Gables as a dinner waitress. After graduating from NCMC, Staffel took a part time job at the Charlevoix Camera Shop to earn extra income. The job grew to a full time position as Staffel learned new skills in photo processing, matting, cutting and custom framing.

Rayders rally to beat Boyne City 20-14

By L. Scott Swanson

Under the direction of Charlevoix High School alumni Pat Klooster, Boyne City has been rebuilding its varsity football program in recent years. Friday evening Charlevoix found out just how far that program has come - almost, but not quite, far enough to beat the Rayders. The term hard-fought is overused in describing high school football games, but it also happens to perfectly describe Charlevoix's 20-14 win over their cross county rivals. The game was in question right up until Rayder defensive back Keith Carey intercepted a Boyne City pass with 30 seconds left to play.

The game featured a fascinating contrast in offensive styles. Boyne City ran a power offense with fullback Kevin Smith breaking numerous tackles and bulging down the field. The Ramblers mixed in just enough option pitches to the outside to keep the Rayder defense off balance. Charlevoix, on the other hand, had only limited success on the ground. But junior quarterback Don Jess and a variety of receivers put on an aerial display that would have made the flying Wallendas proud.

Charlevoix's evening started off on a down note with Boyne City's first drive. On the third play from scrimmage Rayder defensive back and running back Chris Pease racked up his knee and much to his displeasure was forced to call it a night. Things picked up for the Rayders scant seconds later when Brandon Webb intercepted a Boyne City pass to stop the Ramblers' first drive and initiate the Rayders' first scoring drive of the night.

In a clock-eating first quarter drive the Rayders went 70 yards on 13 plays. The key play in the drive was a 35-yard pass from Jess to senior end Vince Voisin. The drive concluded with a 16-yard touchdown pass from Jess to Voisin on a fourth and 11 play. That passing combination's success on fourth and 11 was to prove an omen of things to come. The touchdown came with 3:06 left in the first quarter. Voisin kicked the extra point to give the Rayders a 7-0 lead.

Boyne City didn't mope. They immediately came back with a drive of their own and scored with 18 seconds left in the first quarter. However, the attempted two-point conversion attempt failed and Charlevoix took a 10-0 lead into the second quarter.

making yards between the tackles. Charlevoix would-be tacklers were hitting him high and he simply didn't fall when that happened. Although Smith didn't score the go-ahead touchdown, he played a key role in it. On a counter play, Boyne City faked to Smith and then pitched to the halfback who went around the opposite end for a 25-yard touchdown run. As the halfback crossed the goal line, three Charlevoix linemen unspooled off the Boyne City fullback. Boyne City successfully converted on the two-point extra point attempt and led 14-7 with 4:49 left in the half.

Now it was Charlevoix's turn to answer a challenge. And they did, with a seven-play drive covering 70 yards. The key play in the drive was a well-executed middle screen from Jess to fullback Jodi McGlinch. McGlinch received the ball with a convoy of offensive linemen in front of him. At the end of the run, Carey, whose family ties are MSU, took a page out of the U of M playbook. U of M is known for having receivers who take blocking seriously and will throw blocks downfield. Near the end of McGlinch's run off the screen pass, a Boyne City defender was pursuing the play, apparently harboring some notion of making a tackle. Call it fate, but Carey, at that particular instant, just happened to be coming back upfield, looking for a way to be useful. Bang! The best hit of the night.

Moments later the Rayders scored on an 18 yard pass from Jess to running back Brandon Webb. Webb was running a route toward the corner of the endzone when Jess put the ball over his inside shoulder. Webb turned, came open, found the ball and made the reception. Voisin kicked the extra point to tie the game 14-14 going into halftime.

Both defenses held in a scoreless third quarter and the game entered the final quarter still dead even. Charlevoix's first break came with 10:37 left in the game. Boyne City was driving, but at the end of a long run the Rayder defenders stripped the ball from the Rambler running back and the Rayders recovered at their own 30 yard line. But instead of taking advantage of the opportunity and going forward the Rayder offense went backwards with a penalty and a sack. Charlevoix punted and Boyne City took over at the 20 yard line. Charlevoix's defense was tight and held the Rayders to a field goal.

Rayders again with another Boyne City fumble. Charlevoix recovered on its own 37-yard line and began a 63-yard drive which was two steps forward and one step back.

With just less than 3:30 left in the game Charlevoix found itself on the 23-yard line facing a critical fourth and 11. Remember something about a fourth and 11 in the first quarter. Well, de'ja'vu! Jess found Voisin open again, this time picking up 15 yards and giving Charlevoix a first and goal at the eight yard line. Two plays later, McGlinch scored the winning touchdown on a six yard run. A two-point conversion attempt failed.

Boyne City got the ball back with slightly more than two minutes left in the game. Their final drive ended when Carey intercepted a pass with half a minute left in the game. Charlevoix's offense let the clock run down without snapping the ball.

Statistically speaking, for Charlevoix - Jess finished the night completing 18 of 23 passes for a total of 314 yards; Voisin caught five passes for 88 yards; Carey caught six passes for 60 yards; Webb caught two passes for 55 yards; McGlinch ran for 115 yards on 16 carries. Defensively, David Skeel had nine solo tackles and one assist; Ben Whitley had seven solos and five assists.

Charlevoix is now 2-0 on the season and 1-0 in league play. This Friday evening the Rayders will host Mancelona. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Charlevoix's Matt Smith won the Class C race at the Ludington Invitational Saturday, while Mike Bush placed third, Zach Pajtas fourth and Matt Dickinson sixth. As a team, the Rayders won the meet with 28 points. They were 33 points better than second place Benzie Central, which finished with a team total of 61.

Smith won the 5K (3.1 mile) race in a course record time of 16:24. Bush finished in 17:38; Pajtas in 17:42 and Dickinson in 18:11. The other three Charlevoix runners competing in the varsity race, Josh Scheels, Eric Dickinson and Gary Arnold placed 14th, 15th and 16th with respective times of 19:10, 19:11 and 19:13.

The meet was attended by 22 teams, five of them Class C teams. There were 138 finishers in the boys' race.

In the girls' race Charlevoix placed third in Class C behind Whitehall and Benzie Central. Elsa Conlan was Charlevoix's top runner, placing 62nd in a time of 23:54. Other Rayders running for the girls' varsity team were: Becca Chamberlin, 76th in 24:51; Laura Kelly, 77th in 24:52; Nicole Moore, 80th in 25:43; Nancy Dammann, 82nd in 25:50; Laura Loder, 99th in 27:59 and Julie Gengle, 116th in 32:36.

In the junior varsity races Charlevoix's girls placed second while the boys' team placed third. Two members of the boys' team finished in the top ten, Erik Hess placed second with a time of 18:38 while Paul Henne finished eighth with a time of 19:16.

Charlevoix's next meet is Tuesday, Sept. 22 at East Jordan.

Basketball team falls to 1-2

A cold spell by Charlevoix or a hot streak by Petoskey, depending on how you look at it, in the last minutes of the game sent the Rayders to a 50-41 defeat in Petoskey last Thursday night.

Charlevoix lead by as many as 10 points early in the game, but a dismal slump late in the second and early in the third quarter allowed Petoskey to come back.

Charlevoix led 10-4 after the first quarter and 18-14 at the half. They trailed 31-30 entering the final quarter.

Liz Grunch led Charlevoix in scoring with 17 points. Mary Jane Grunch had eight points and Jamie Doan six.

This Thursday evening the Rayders will host Traverse City St. Francis in what could turn out to be an important league match up.

Chinese restaurant opens on south Bridge

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, September 16, 1992 - PAGE 19

By Ralph McRae

Centuries ago, in China, fuel for cooking meals was in short supply. To conserve it, they devised a way to cook a full meal in one pot in less than five minutes. They came up with the wok. A wok requires a very small fire that produces a very hot heat. The secret of Chinese cooking is how the food is prepared. It is cut into thin pieces, both the meat and the vegetables. To prevent it from scorching, all of the ingredients must be constantly moved, or stir fried. With the meal quickly cooked, the fire can be extinguished and fuel saved for another day.

Each area of China had its own dialect, customs and foods. Here in America, we mostly recognize only the Cantonese and Mandarin kinds of Chinese food.

This prologue is just a simple way of introducing Charlevoix's newest eatery - the Chee Peng, Chinese restaurant on south Bridge Street (in the building that used to be the A & W). Before the announced grand opening, weeks were spent completely renovating and refurbishing the interior of the building. The building had been closed for several years.

The building seems to have something of a pagoda architectural style and is surrounded by an ample parking area. On the inside there are Chinese lighting fixtures and many wall hangings typical of Oriental restaurants. Most of the Chinese style furnishings were brought in from New York or San Francisco.

The basic food ingredients at any Chinese restaurant are beef, chicken, pork and shrimp. To these four common elements are added various American and Chinese vegetables and other items including water chestnuts, bamboo shoots, bean sprouts, cashew nuts, pineapple and various sauces. These can be mixed in a wide variety of combinations. The Chee Peng restaurant has a menu listing an amazing number of items, all cooked quickly and served very hot.

One can request that no salt be used and also that they not use MSG (mono sodium glutamate). Rolls, muffins and other baked goods such as cakes and pies are not served in a Chinese restaurant. The restaurant also does not serve breakfast.

The most interesting facet of the new restaurant is not so much the food, but the owners. Like many Chinese businesses, this restaurant is strictly a family enterprise. The Charlevoix restaurant is owned by brothers Naolue and Sykua Hang and managed by their cousin, Chang Hang. Five people prepare the food and work the woks. Seven women take orders and serve customers. All of them are wives, nieces, nephews or children of the various Hangs.

Each brother has four children. The youngest brother, Sykua, has three children, one in each of Charlevoix's three school buildings. Each of the two brothers has four children. A few months ago the grandmother of the two brothers was killed in an automobile accident. The tragedy set back the opening of the Charlevoix restaurant.

The Hangs are Chinese people from the city of Kunming in the province of Yunnan. This province of China adjoins the country of Laos. The Hangs arrived in the United States in 1976. The father and two sons initially worked for the Borg Warner factory in Ottawa, Ill. Some of the Hangs came to Petoskey to open the restaurant there. Other members of the family moved to Alma, Cheboygan, Grayling and Traverse City.

The Hang family, some of them now fourth generation Michigan residents have reunions in Northern Michigan. The owners and manager of the local restaurant speak very highly of the city's cooperation in their start-up process. They appreciated Bob Kern's efforts in assisting with the real estate transaction and Terry Left's help in modernizing the kitchen.

...Camera Shop

As the new owner of the business, Staffel now works more than full time. She often works nights and Sundays to fill customer orders. Staffel says she doesn't mind putting long hours into the business. She likes the clientele she has and is happy to put in overtime for them. "I really enjoy the people who come in here," she said. "That's one of the reasons I decided to do this. I enjoy working with the regulars."

Staffel is assisted in the shop by Tricia Sutton, who does a great deal of the photo processing. "I'm lucky to have her," Staffel said. "She is willing to come in at six in the morning to help fill customer's orders during busy times."

As Staffel discusses her plans for the business, she stays in constant motion, deftly working on a custom frame for a painting. Staffel will continue to offer one hour in-house processing for film, custom matting and framing, and will sell new camera equipment and darkroom supplies. She plans to remodel the inside of the store in the near future.

Even with Staffel's busy work schedule, she manages to give time to community activities. She is the treasurer for Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), is a member of the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix where she plays in the bell choir and is a former co-chairman of the Venetian Parade.

Staffel stresses that the most important aspect of her business will continue to be service. "Service really is what it's all about, isn't it," Staffel said.

The Charlevoix Camera Shop hours will continue to be Monday through Friday from 9:30 to 5:30, and Saturday from 9:30 to 4:00.

...contamination found downtown

When contacted by phone, property owner Dennis Kusina declined to comment on the soil contamination and said he is referring callers to his attorney, Scott Beatty. Beatty's only comment on the contamination was, "There are some slight problems that are being remedied."

Bob Wagner from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) office in Gaylord said that, as of last week, his office had nothing on record regarding specific contaminant found at the site. He said that in the past he had been made aware of oil drums stored in the building which faced Mason Street. He added that if oil had caused soil contamination, whether or not DNR notification was required would depend on the chemicals in the oil. Wagner said that rather than dealing with generic terms such as oil, the Critical Materials list (the list governing soil contamination) specifies chemical compounds and threshold levels for those compounds.

Wagner said that it is not unusual for people to discover a small soil contamination problem, take care of it and then send the DNR a package explaining what the problem was and how it was handled. He noted that in recent years the DNR has put out more guidance information explaining appropriate actions for people to take in response to soil contamination.

This year's city budget includes $89,000 for removal of two of the three buildings on the site and the construction of a new 40-car parking lot. However, city manager Mike Wiesner said it's gotten too late to build the lot this year, but construction is likely to begin in the spring.

Wiesner said that prior to the property purchase being completed he anticipates that rather than receiving a detailed list of contaminant found at the site, the city will simply receive a document indicating the site has a clean bill of health.

A scrapbook picture of the Hamilton boatyard prompted many readers to respond with more information about the location. This photo shows the same boatyard from a different angle. The sailboats left their sails up to dry. Notice the gondola in the lower right hand corner. The gondola was given to the city in the 1940s to be used in the Venetian boat parade. It carried the Venetian Queen and her court. The gondola was used for three or four years until it deteriorated beyond repair. This Bob Miles photo was used for a Christmas card from Ray and Frances Hamilton. Photo courtesy of Virginia Emrey

Home and school are same place for some students

By Laurie Lounsbury

This is a story without pictures, a story without names. It's the story of the many children in Charlevoix County that are being home school educated. These kids don't ride a school bus and sit in a classroom with lots of other children. They usually sit side by side at the kitchen table with their mother to receive their lessons.

The home school families choose to remain anonymous for personal reasons. They also choose to remain anonymous to escape legal conflict with the Michigan State Department of Education. If home schools don't meet the state's requirements, then the family will be charged with truancy. If the families don't make an effort to correct the situation after being charged with truancy, they can be charged with neglect. In some cases, the children will be placed in foster homes. It's the fear of being charged with truancy that causes home school families to keep a low profile. As one home school mother said, "I know I'm legal, and I meet the state requirements for home schooling. I'd like to speak out as an advocate of home schooling, but I don't want to draw attention to myself because of my friends that might not meet the state requirements."

Educating children in the State of Michigan is compulsory from the ages of six to 16. The state allows children to be educated in a "state complete a nonpublic school membership form and send it in to the board of education," and have a bachelor's degree. The form is based on the honor system, asking parents to verify that they are teaching an acceptable curriculum and that they spend at least 180 days a year teaching their children. If the home schooling parent complies with these two requirements, they will receive a Michigan teaching permit to home school their children.

Some home schooling families in Charlevoix want to remain anonymous because they don't meet the state's requirements of having a bachelor's degree, so they legally cannot teach their children at home. Since 1980, increasing numbers of parents have chosen to educate their children in the home. Some do it for religious reasons, wanting their children to have a Christian based education. Others do it because their children were slipping through the educational cracks in the public schools. Some parents home school their children because of special needs, such as learning or physical disabilities. Some feel their children are academically talented and require special education.

"I know I'm legal, and I meet the state requirements for home schooling. I'd like to speak out as an advocate of home schooling, but I don't want to draw attention to myself because of my friends that might not meet the state requirements."

An area mother who teaches her children at home approved nonpublic school." The state will recognize a home as a nonpublic school as long as certain criteria are met. The parent must

While the reasons for choosing to home school children may vary, one belief is commonly held by all home school parents. They all share the conviction that their children will be better educated at home than in the public schools.

Most home school parents have the best intentions for their children, and they work diligently and responsibly to educate their children. There are a few who abuse the home school option. They keep their children home to help babysit younger children, or they have a child who is a chronic truant. But they seem to be the exception.

A Charlevoix woman with three children, ages nine, seven, and five, home schools her kids. She has a teacher's certificate and graduated at the top of her own high school class. While her religious convictions played a part in her decision to home school her children, she said that her main reason for home schooling was to provide her children with a quality education. "I'm not going to settle for average grades with my children," she said. This woman gives her children the Stanford Achievement Test every

Salary to be $60,000

By L. Scott Swanson

The city council has agreed to hire Roger Westenbrook as the city's electrical consultant at a salary of $60,000 per year. The contract calls for Westenbrook to be paid through Nov. 17, 1995 regardless of whether he remains able to work during that time period.

City manager Mike Wiesner

and city electrical superintendent Ed Whitley presented the contract to the council Monday evening.

In a memo to the council Wiesner wrote, "Roger Westenbrook has been providing engineering services for the City, at no cost since 1985. Roger is currently on disability under Social Security due to health problems. He is able to provide us services on his own timetable, when he feels able, but because of his health problems he is not able to meet a regimented time schedule nor able to guarantee that he will be available for meet year to make sure they are performing at the proper grade level. She complies, perhaps even more than complies, with the state requirement to school her children 180 days a year. "This is not just a nine to three o'clock process for us, five days a week. Saturdays can be good days too," she said.

She and her children completed a full year's curriculum by the first of March last year. They continued with studies, and moved into extracurricular topics such as computer skills and piano lessons. Her older son is working at a grade level two and a half grades higher than his age level. "When you're working one on one with children, the quality of teaching is much better," his mother said. She explained how with home schooling she has the flexibility to stay with one topic until the child completely understands it. In a public school setting, teachers have to stick to a schedule, and some children can't keep up with that schedule, so they fall behind and may never catch up.

This mother uses Beka books and curriculum, one of hundreds of curriculum resources available to home schoolers. She teams up with five other home school families for field trips and educational excursions. She also gives the Stanford Achievement tests to the children of these five women, because they are unable to do so themselves. Only a certified teacher can give the test, and these women are not certified teachers. They also don't have college degrees. One of these women has a 15-year-old she has home schooled since second grade. Her child had been attending an area elementary school, and still didn't know how to read in second grade. When the mother started working with her child at home, she was shocked to discover her child didn't know the sounds that letters make. With one-on-one instruction from the mother, the child made up for lost time and tested at the proper grade level within half a year. At 15, the home schooled teenager is doing very well. As course curriculum grew more complex, the mother found alternatives to help educate her teen. She purchased an instructional video program from Beka that teaches Algebra Two, a class the mother was unable to teach herself. They can watch the video together, help one another, and both learn in the process.

Another Charlevoix woman has home schooled her daughter for eight years. She wanted her daughter to have a strong Christian education. "God was calling us to do it," the mother said. She went on to say that the public school system is "ultimately tampering with the moral values of children." She feels that the Michigan Model, which teaches sex education and relevant health topics is inappropriate in the school system. "Our country is becoming very socialistic. There is more government control, and the state is becoming the parent," she said. This mother spends six hours a day instructing her daughter in a curriculum comparable to the curriculum being used in the public schools. While it is not required by the state, the mother tests her daughter annually to make sure she is keeping up with the proper grade level.

One common question asked of home school families is how their children are faring with their socialization skills. "That's the least of the problems," one mother responded. Several mothers said the children are involved with church activities, city and county sports programs, and various club activities. They say their children are well adjusted socially.

Home-school legal questions are currently in court

The legal rights of families to home school their children is a growing issue in Michigan. There are two key legal cases that haven't yet been decided where the state has charged parents with truancy because they failed to meet the state's requirements for home schooling. The defendants in one case claim they have the right to educate their children at home, as it is their right given to them by God. The defendant argues that allowing the state to certify his children's teachers is tantamount to permitting the state to usurp God's authority. Submitting to state requirements, in his opinion, constitutes a sin.

Another legal issue that will soon be decided in the courts is whether or not the requirement of a bachelor's degree or a teaching certificate of the home instructor is a valid requirement.

One family in another court case had four children enrolled in the public school system. When they became dissatisfied, they instructed their children at home with the Clonlara Home Based Education Program. Clonlara provided books, instructional materials, and individualized curriculum for each child. Clonlara employed a certified teacher that could confer with parents on occasion. Clonlara also made bimonthly visits to the home where they would review the children's work and instruct the parents with teaching techniques.

Many home school parents consider Clonlara an acceptable legal alternative when the parents themselves don't have a teaching degree. The state disagrees. This case has yet to be decided.

Locally, the Charlevoix Emmet Intermediate School District (ISD) is working to keep peace between the home school parents and the board of education. Twenty-nine families in the intermediate school district have met the state guidelines for home schooling. It's not known how many families are home schooling without meeting the state guidelines, but it could be twice as many. Bill Coaster, the Planner/Monitor for ISD says that locally they're caught between a rock and a hard place. ISD wants to respect the families' rights to home school their children, yet they have an obligation to the state to make sure state requirements are met. "We have to think about the kids' rights too," Coaster said. All children have the right to an education, and if some people are abusing the home school program and not educating their children, then the children's rights are being neglected. We have to consider the possibility of an adult coming to us years from now and saying, "I didn't get an education in the home. Why didn't you protect my rights?" Coaster said.

ISD is waiting to see how the two aforementioned court cases are decided before they aggressively pursue truancy charges against some home school families. If the families fill out the paperwork and are affiliated with a home based education program, then the Char-Em ISD will be satisfied until a court ruling has been made.

OPINIONS

EDITH

Do we really need to raise taxes to improve the health care system or are there ways to cut paperwork instead of services? There's much talk on all sides of the political spectrum about streamlining our national policy on health care. What are the facts on controlling costs?

Let's take a look at the health care scene in our own backyard.

Do you know how many Charlevoix County residents have no health insurance? How many are on Medicaid? Or what losses the Charlevoix Area Hospital incurs annually due to "adjustments" on Medicare, Medicaid and Blue Cross policies, which in the end you and I pay for one way or another?

The Michigan Department of Health estimates that on the low side there are 1700 uninsured residents in Charlevoix County, medium estimate is 2200 and high estimate is 2700 people. Many uninsured are young couples with children, and then there are those who can't get insurance because of pre-existing conditions.

According to the Social Service Department there are 1,265 people now on Medicaid. When the program first went into place, it took care of about 70 percent of the poor, now it only covers about 38-40 percent of the poor, a marked decrease.

The figures gathered from the Hospital are as follows: total revenue annual budget — $9,656,446; bad debts — $101,000; charity cases for about 25 or 30 people — $52,837; and about $2,500,000 of the "adjustments" on Medicare, Medicaid and Blue Cross bills. The "adjustment" figure means monies that have not been reimbursed to the hospital for patient care. In business, it's called a loss, but it still comes out of our pocket in the form of higher charges and contributions.

There are no figures on the paperwork involved in tracking the above statistics, but I do know that there are only 5 bookkeepers in a major Canadian hospital compared to 50 bookkeepers in a U.S. hospital of the same size. In Canada there is only one bill sent to the Government, whereas in the U.S. there may be 195 different companies that can be billed. (On top of that, how many mailings do you get from Blue Cross marked "this is not a bill"?) It doesn't take a Philadelphia lawyer to figure out that what we are paying for is not health care for patients but salaries to accountants for paperwork — those initials stand for SAP!

And speaking of Philadelphia lawyers, a public forum with a panel of experts was held recently in Potosky, sponsored by Northern Michigan "Hospital" and the Healthshare Group. Among other things, we were told that a $19 million legal settlement was awarded this year in the State of Michigan, and that this amount would have provided immunization for every infant in the state. A cap in litigation does not seem out of order. "We need to reform the tort system so that health care is delivered by doctors and not lawyers," said Catherine Lessard Virkus, director of legislative policy, Michigan Department of Public Health.

The practice of defensive medicine by physicians who feel compelled to order unnecessary tests and perform unnecessary procedures to guard against malpractice suits has helped drive up health costs by $12 to $14 billion dollars according to the American Medical Association. On the other side of the coin we hear that the insurance companies do zippo when it comes to preventive medicine. The cost of annual physicals are not included in their policies, for example.

Change is inevitable. We cannot sustain the status quo in the health care system, and there are no simple solutions," says Ellen Pryga, director of health policy for the American Hospital Association.

Canada has found solutions and it doesn't hurt to look across the border at the progress our neighbors have made. It's been my privilege to show a 25-minute video called, CANADA'S NATIONAL HEALTH PROGRAM, to a number of fraternal organizations in Charlevoix. It has been well received and many have called it thought provoking. Produced by my sister, Margot and her husband, Robert Purdy, it has been shown on more than 600 PBS stations this year.

Whether we adopt the Canadian Health Care program or modify it slightly to meet our special needs, it was Victor Hugo who said, "There is one thing stronger than all the armies of the world, and that is an idea whose time has come." Let's not use a bandaid on a system that needs major surgery. Today there are only two countries in the industrialized world that don't have health insurance for everyone, the United States and South Africa. The idea of health reform is certainly in the air. Let's hope its time has come.

Honesty appreciated

Editor,

I would like to publicly thank one of your community members for showing me the honest and truthful side of the human race.

Upon finishing the Mackinac Bridge Walk on Labor Day I accidentally left my very expensive 35 mm camera on the ground. When I arrived home and realized what I had done I called the bridge authority and they in turn directed me to the State Police who said that it had been found and turned into their office.

I sincerely want to thank Linda Moore for turning my camera in to the authorities when perhaps someone else might not have done so.

Again your town is lucky to have people like her.

Sincerely,
Kathy Albon

Golf tournament a success

Editor,

A short note of appreciation to the many participants and generous donors who helped make the 2nd Annual Vacation Properties Network golf benefit, held Sept. 10, an overwhelming success. Thanks to the efforts of everyone at Antrim Dells, the host course for the event, playing conditions were superb, and all 68 golfers had to great time while generating more than $1,100 for this year's non-profit beneficiary, Charlevoix Hospital Building Fund. This type of success is not possible without many donations of both time and prizes by many individuals and businesses. Our sincere gratitude to all as we look forward to next year's benefit. Thank you!

Sincerely,
Greg Smith

9-1-1 systems have some drawbacks

Editor,

9-1-1 got beat this Spring, but it's one of those things that just won't go away. I didn't think it would be back on the ballot so soon, however. Ah, the power of vested interests! I'm what you would call a commissioner for a small county in downstate Illinois, and have a few observations.

1) 9-1-1 doesn't happen overnight. It will take a year - maybe two - to start up. Our county voted a telephone line fee almost two years ago. The fee for our 20,000 telephones is far less than you propose, but still brings in over a quarter million dollars per year at $1.20 per line. There was no "millage" charge for startup, since the line charge will be more than enough for the purpose. Our "expanded" 9-1-1 is still probably more than a year from startup.

2) You will have to get cooperation among all the local dispatching services and all the regional telephone companies to make it work. Each will have conflicting priorities, and you will end up with a board of appointees (probably paid a nominal fee) to administer the system. These people end up responsible only to those who appoint them - certainly not to the end users.

3) You can bet that the new 9-1-1 system requires a huge database of information. Ideally, the database will provide routing directions to emergency vehicles and alert them of potential medical and/or hazardous material problems at the emergency site. The data are only as good as their current information. In practice, the data age quickly and cannot be relied upon for more than the initial year or two. Even so, you should plan 18 months or so to gather and verify the initial input.

5) Although Charlevoix County already has a grid addressing system, reasons will be found to change some rural addresses to suit the computer. It's a fact of life.

As I remember the Charlevoix County costs, the high line charge on the county's 30,000 telephones would bring around half a million dollars per year. Call it whatever you would like, but it is simply a tax masquerading with another name. You need to look at that number and make sure there's no better use for the money.

9-1-1 was sold to our voters with a promise of fast emergency response time. In fact, General Telephone, our provider, claimed a maximum of 25 SECONDS improvement. I have yet to find an EMT who will claim that he could have saved a life if he got there 25 seconds sooner.

But then, what about emergency calls where the caller is unable to give his address? Telephone companies now have "Caller I.D." service that will show the caller's telephone number. It would cost each dispatch service about $20 per month. With the phone number it is a simple matter to find the caller's address with the reverse directory that most services already have at a cost of about $250/year.

And then there is the ultimate question - that of servicing those who can't look up or remember emergency telephone numbers.

This is a legitimate concern - you may not get satisfactory service by dialing the operator. In quantities of 10,000 and up, it should be possible to buy pre-programmed telephone dialers for $10-$15 each. These fit between the telephone handset and its wall connection, and would have buttons for FIRE, POLICE, and AMBULANCE. In Charlevoix, maybe you would also need COAST GUARD. These could literally be given away with a one-year millage tax less than the ANNUAL cost of 9-1-1.

To sum it all up, I think your proposed 9-1-1 line charge is excessive. That number needs to be reviewed. Those who would like to impose millage to buy equipment now simply have no understanding of the problem. There will be newer, possibly cheaper, equipment later on. Maybe these folks would like to set up a widget factory, just in case somebody might buy widgets before they become obsolete.

Sincerely,
Scripps Downing

Dennis and Monte (Withers) Gruse were two of the thousands of people caught up in Hurricane Andrew. Dennis Gruse is Managing Editor of the Hammond, La. Daily Star. In a column written in the aftermath of the storm, he explained some of the difficulty people are having getting their homes back in order while also keeping things going at work. Gruse described a tree which fell against his home and took days to remove and also described having to stop the car on the way to work, wade through water on the roadway and roll a large limb off of the roadway and into the ditch. Although Hurricane Andrew has made even normally routine tasks an ordeal, the Gruses and other residents of Hammond are coping. Despite the hurricane, the Daily Star has continued to be published. The Gruses are the daughter and son-in-law of Millie Withers and the late Bob Withers of Charlevoix.

Sam Bingham, a 1992 graduate of Charlevoix High School and now a freshman at Wabash College in Crawfordsville, Indiana, is listed as a midfielder on the Wabash soccer team. Another Charlevoix resident is also mentioned in the 1992 Wabash Soccer Media Guide. Hagen Manker is listed as a three-time letter winner, 1970 team MVP and 1972 team co-captain.

Charlevoix High School student Nancy Dammann is among 15,000 students from across the United States who have been named semifinalists in the 1993 national Merit Scholarship Program. There will be approximately 6,500 scholarships awarded through the program.

The feeling of success.

Weight Watchers showed me how to eat right and feel great!

Food was always on my mind. All morning I'd think about lunch. Before 1983, I'd wait just one more snack. I tried controlling it on my own, but nothing worked.

Then I joined Weight Watchers.

Every step of the way, they gave me the support and encouragement I needed to succeed. But best of all, they gave me a plan I could live with. Now I know how to survive stressful days, eating out, and parties, all without giving up my favorite foods.

I've learned how to eat right, and I feel really great. Since joining Weight Watchers, this is the best I've ever looked. The only thing I crave now is more success.

Fr. Eugene R. Fox

The funeral Mass for Father Eugene R. Fox was celebrated Friday, Sept. 18 at St. John the Baptist Church in Hubbardston, Michigan, the parish Fr. Fox served as pastor for 47 years. The 89-year-old priest died in his sleep at Villa Elizabeth in Grand Rapids early Tuesday morning, September 15. He had been in failing health for some time.

Fr. Fox was born Dec. 16, 1902 in Avoca, Michigan, in St. Clair County. His parents, William and Julia (Byrne) Fox, were Irish immigrants from south Dublin. His early education was obtained at the Oatman country school, while he attended St. Andrew's School in Grand Rapids for the latter primary grades. Fr. Fox was enrolled at St. Joseph Seminary, Grand Rapids and studied philosophy and theology at the Grand Seminary in Montreal.

On Feb. 9, 1930, he was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Joseph G. Pinter at the Cathedral of St. Andrew, Grand Rapids.

In 1935 he was named administrator of Holy Cross Church on Beaver Island, where he served until 1938, when he was appointed pastor of St. John the Baptist, Hubbardston. Fr. Fox retired in 1985, but continued to reside at the parish rectory until his move to Villa Elizabeth this past spring.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

I love a good book. I read not just for ideas in my sermon writing. I read for fun too. If books ever were a disappointment, it might be in that so few of them start off with Snoopy's favorite line, "It was a dark and stormy night."

I love a good plot that pulls me into the lives of the story's characters. A really good author will have me thinking and feeling so much for the hero or heroine that it gets to me when they are in trouble. If the word picture is really heart wrenching enough, I may even chisel a bit and do something most devoted novel readers would never consider.

I mean how would you feel if someone that began to really mean something to you was threatened by the bad guys? Has your heart ever gone pitter patter as a crisis approached over whether or not they would survive? When a writer hooks me that hard, there are times that I can't stand it. I have to take a quick peak at the end of the story to make sure the hero gets through okay.

The purists out there may say that's terrible. After all, what do you buy the book for if not to get enthralled by the plot? Why are you reading it if not to have your pulse rise with every twist and turn? True, all true. Except that somehow, I can read reassured and comforted through every dark valley or ridiculous disaster if I know everything is going to turn out all right in the end.

Speaking of books, with winter coming on, have I got a book for you. It is filled with mystery and suspense finer than Agatha Christie. It has romance that could teach Barbara Cartland a thing or two. Tom Clancy has a lot to learn on the subject of political intrigue from this text. It has been a best seller for so long that it probably has the record for being in print for the longest amount of time.

What is even nicer about this book is that you don't have to feel guilty if you want to sneak to the end of it and see how everything turns out. In fact, its coordinating editor encourages you to wander through its pages. He even offers personal advice on how to get the most out of your literary pilgrimage. And one thing more, the more times you read it, the more you will be surprised at just how many new things you will discover in it.

You've guessed by now haven't you? It is the Book for all seasons. It is the Book for all ages. It is the perfect volume to curl up with for whatever mood you find yourself in. The Bible will thrill you and comfort you. It will challenge you and bless you. God's Spirit takes great pleasure in guiding every seeking soul who wants to get the most out of its pages. Get reacquainted with The Good Book today.

Chip Counseling Center grows to serve area needs

By Ralph McRae

Chips Counseling Center is one of our community's outstanding do-good organizations. Initiated by long-time Bevedere Association residents Christina and Woodbury Ransom, it was founded in memory of their young son, the late Charles Allen Ransom. Charles was called "Chip" by his family and friends.

The Ransoms set up a trust fund for the organization. The First Congregational Church and other community groups and citizens contributed additional financial support. The Chips organization was founded in 1976. It has expanded a great deal in the past eight years under the leadership of its Executive Director, Preston Greene. He is confident that in coming years the organization will continue to grow.

In addition to the central Charlevoix office, Chips has three outreach offices in Petoskey, Bellaire and Cheboygan. Much of the information for this story came from Greene and prevention specialist supervisor, Celia Partida Kelly. Monetary information was provided by financial officer, Jan Spurgeon. The office manager is Penny Thompson.

The main office at 14695 Park Avenue in Charlevoix houses an administrative staff of eight people and two mental health specialists, Sandy Jones and Jim Marshall, Jr. Each of the centers has its own counselors and prevention specialists. The Chip Counseling Center program is governed by an 11-member board of directors. Kaye Beatty of Charlevoix is the chairman of the board which has representatives from all of the communities where the Chip offices are located.

From a modest beginning, the Chips program now requires an annual budget of $500,000. Much of its money, 60 percent, comes from the State under contract agreements and substance abuse treatment grants. A certain percentage of state liquor tax revenues also are designated for agencies such as Chips. United Way groups in each of the four counties also give generous amounts each year.

The main thrust and greatest efforts of the organization are directed toward the control of substance abuse problems. In one way or another, most of the actions within the centers are related to this issue.

Primary attention is focused on prevention. The organization works with school students of all ages, conducting educational seminars on alcohol and other drugs. Chips adheres to the philosophy that prevention is the most effective and cheapest way to combat substance abuse.

An estimated breakdown of local abuse problems indicate that 90 percent of abuse problems are with alcohol, 7 percent with marijuana and 3 percent with cocaine. However, cocaine use is difficult to detect and could be higher. A recent national survey indicates that almost 50 percent of high school students drink alcohol, 25 percent smoke cigarettes and 10 percent use marijuana.

Chip centers work closely with other area organizations dealing with alcohol and other drug dependency problems. The centers are involved with many cases of children who have had problems with alcohol. Referrals in these cases come from pastors, teachers, friends and the courts.

In a court referral a first time offender between the ages of 13 and 21 would typically receive counseling and the parents would attend two hours of education on preventive measures.

Sixty percent of the adults the Chips Center works with on substance abuse problems are between 30 and 40 years old. Many of these people are not necessarily alcoholic themselves, but indirectly suffer as the wife, husband or child of an alcoholic.

Much attention is given to addiction education - matters such as biological, psychological and social factors in addiction. Recovery recommendations and relapse prevention are also covered.

In addition to substance abuse conditions, the center also works with people who have other difficulties - problems such as uncontrollable anger, prolonged grief or various forms of marital problems. Various approaches are used in dealing with these problems. For example there are one on one dis-

Chips has an accredited staff and since 1980 has been licensed by the State to provide substance abuse prevention services and outpatient treatment services.

Regardless of their reason for utilizing Chips, all people registering for services are referred to as clients. All of the clients are billed for services at a rate of $70. The amount the clients themselves pay is based on income. Those unable to pay the full amount are subsidized either by the State, Medicaid or private insurance companies.

Of all the cases handled by the center, 70 percent of them have successful endings. To fully cover all of the methods, practices and services offered by Chips would take several thousand more words. For additional information about the Chips Counseling Center, phone 547-6551.

Information sought about missing plane

Information is being sought about a plane which has been missing since Sept. 12 and is presumed to have crashed in Lake Michigan. The plane was piloted by H. Paul Miller, 74, of Cadillac. He is the father of Patricia Moore of Charlevoix.

Miller, a pilot for more than 30 years, took off from the Cadillac airport and was sighted over Lake Michigan in the Manistee-Frankfort area. The last radio contact indicated that he had dropped to a lower altitude to get a closer look at something he saw in the lake when the plane began to have engine trouble. Thus far, searches have not found anything.

The missing plane is a high-wing Cessna 150. It is white with copper trim. The identification number on the side is N6759S. Anyone who finds anything along the Lake Michigan shoreline which may be related to the missing plane is asked to mark the spot and call the Coast Guard or Patricia Moore at 547-9334.

Health Department says beware of influenza

Fall is the transition season between summer and winter. It is also a time to immunize against the upcoming flu season. Influenza (or flu) is a viral infection of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs that can make someone of any age ill. Usually the flu occurs from November to April with January, February, and March the worst months.

If you get the flu, you usually have an abrupt onset of fever, sore throat, chills, cough, and soreness and aching in your back, arms, and legs. Although most people recover in three to seven days, some individuals become seriously ill and require hospitalization. Thousands of people die each year in the U.S. from the flu or related complications such as pneumonia.

There is a vaccine and a medication which can prevent and control influenza. Medication is not a substitute for vaccination and is recommended for use under specific circumstances such as unimmunized high risk person. The vaccine is recommended for use in the elderly and people with other health problems who may become seriously ill or die from flu or its complications. Medical staff and individuals (family) who provide care to high risk persons at home or in health care facilities should also receive the vaccine. The vaccine may be useful for any individual who doesn't want to get the flu or be off work due to illness. The elderly and persons with high risk medical conditions embarking on foreign travel should consider influenza vaccination. High risk groups include:

1. Adults and children with long term heart or lung problems which cause them to see a doctor regularly.
2. Residents of nursing homes and other institutions housing persons of any age with serious long term health problems.
3. Healthy people age 65 years or older.
4. People of any age who during the past year have regularly seen a doctor for treatment of illnesses such as kidney disease, cystic fibrosis, diabetes, anemia ("low Blood"), or severe asthma.

5. People who have a type of cancer or immunological disorder (or use certain types of medicines) that lowers the body's normal resistance to infections.

6. Children and teenagers (6 months through 18 years of age) on long term treatment with aspirin who, if they catch the flu, may be at risk of getting Reye's Syndrome.

The influenza vaccine for adults is a single flu injection. Children less than 9 years of age may need two injections. The vaccine may not protect against all types of flu or other illnesses that resemble the flu and does not begin to provide protection until 1-2 weeks after the injections.

Most people have no side effects from recent influenza vaccine and the vaccine does not cause influenza. A common side effect is soreness for a day or two at the injection site. Occasionally fever and achiness for one or two days may occur. Allergic or more serious reactions could occur following the immunization but are infrequent.

Individuals with a history of allergic reactions to influenza vaccine, chicken egg, or to any component of the vaccine, should first consult a physician for allergy evaluation and possible desensitization. Do not receive the immunization until the evaluation is completed. Individuals who have been paralyzed with Guillain-Barre Syndrome, are pregnant, or are ill with fever should consult a physician before requesting the vaccine.

Enrollment increases at high school by 17

Girls outnumber boys by 2 to 1 in senior class

The number of students in the high school is up from last year although that doesn't necessarily indicate a trend toward increasing enrollment according to school officials.

At Monday evening's school board meeting, high school principal Dave Smith said that as of Monday there were 421 students in the high school as opposed to 404 students at the end of the past school year. Smith said there are 104 seniors, 95 juniors, 105 sophomores and 117 freshmen.

Smith also noted that the senior class is unevenly divided with only 33 boys as compared to 71 girls. The junior class is also unevenly divided with 44 boys and 51 girls.

Elementary school principal Vane Smith said there are 580 students in the kindergarten through fifth grades. He and board president Max Novak speculated that a shortage of affordable housing in Charlevoix may play in role in stagnant or declining enrollment. Smith said that he often will take people who are moving to Charlevoix through the K-5 building in the spring and although they like what they see, their children will still be enrolled elsewhere in the fall. He said that may be because the people are coming from areas where a 15 or 20 mile drive to work is not unusual, therefore even if they work in Charlevoix, they end up living in Boyne City or Petoskey where there is more available housing.

Area 4-H members participate in archery shoot

Several Charlevoix County 4-H members placed well in the annual Michigan 4-H Shooting Sports Tournament held Aug. 29 at the Alpena Sportsman's Club in Alpena, Michigan.

Cliff Gregware of Boyne City, Ted Rosencrans of Boyne Falls, and Nathaniel Plumm of Boyne City, placed 7th, 8th and 9th respectively in the 10-14 year old division of Instinctive event for 12-19 year olds. Joshua and Dominic Greenman, both of Petoskey, placed 7th and 8th in the state respectively. Also competing in the State 4-H Shooting Sports Tournament in Archery were Butch Gregware, a past state champion, Brandon Gregware, and Margaret Gregware all of Boyne City.

The Charlevoix county 4-H Archery team made up of Joshua Greenman, Dominic Greenman, Brandon Gregware, and Margaret Gregware placed 8th in the State. The 1992 tournament was Charlevoix County's third appearance at the state level and standings have improved each year.

The tournament included BB gun, trapshooting, skeet, archery, bowhunting, muzzleloading, 22 rifle, and air rifle divisions. This year over 400 4-H youth from 23 Michigan counties participated. Many families attended a pig roast following the tournament.

The Michigan 4-H Shooting Sports Program is coordinated by the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife of Michigan State University and Michigan 4-H Youth Programs. To start or join a 4-H Shooting sports club in your area, contact Todd Kesner at the Charlevoix County Extension office, in Boyne City at 582-6232.

Soil results to be made public if City purchases property

By L. Scott Swanson

The results of soil contamination tests done at a downtown site will become public if the City purchases the site. The site is the former Kusina Motors property between Mason and Antrim Streets. The city has agreed to purchase the property for $365,000, provided that it has an environmentally clean bill of health.

Environmental tests have been done on the property. Two wells are visible near Mason Street and soil has been hauled away. The purchase agreement between property owner Dennis Kusina and the City's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) calls for environmental testing, but also contains a clause saying the test results will be kept confidential. The contract calls for Kusina to initially pay the full cost of the assessment. However, if the city goes ahead with the purchase, then the city will reimburse Kusina for 50 percent of the assessment cost.

The Courier questioned city officials about the propriety of the confidentiality clause in a public purchase. City manager Mike Wiesner discussed the matter with city attorney Jim Young and had Young contact the Courier. Young said that in negotiations for the property purchase, the property owner wanted the confidentiality clause. He said his research indicates that the clause is legal and does not violate the state Open Meetings Act or federal Freedom of Information Act.

When asked what the parameters of the confidentiality were and who among the city staff members would be able to see the information before it became fully public, Young explained that the information would be available to members of the DDA board and staff members working under the board's direction.

Young said that although the purchase agreement doesn't directly address the question of the information being released if the city does go through with the property purchase, his initial inclination is that once the transaction is completed and Kusina is reimbursed for a portion of the assessment cost, then the assessment results become public information.

Kusina's attorney, Scott Beatty, was asked by the Courier if that is also his understanding of the matter. Beatty essentially agreed with Young's assessment, saying that once the deal for the property is closed then the release of the assessment results becomes the city's call.

Earlier, in describing contamination at the site, Beatty said, "There are some slight problems that are being remedied."

Basketball team rallies to beat St. Francis

By L. Scott Swanson

Traverse City St. Francis opened the second half of Thursday evening's basketball game with a full court press. Charlevoix promptly ripped it to shreds and rode the momentum to a 55-44 homecourt win.

In one instance during the first half, Charlevoix failed to handle double team pressure in the back court and incurred the wrath of coach Toni Feller. Two St. Francis defenders double teamed Rayder sophomore Liz Grunch. Grunch held the ball and looked around while her teammates stood around doing nothing particularly useful. The result was a Rayder turnover. Feller sprung from the bench hollering - Liz, when you're double-teamed, that means somebody's open somewhere. And the rest of you, don't just stand around, get open and let her know you're open.

Apparently the message hit home. When St. Francis pressed in the second half, Charlevoix handled it aggressively. Typical of the run was a basket in which the ball was inbounded to Liz Grunch, who was immediately double teamed and responded by passing downcourt to Mary Jane Grunch who quickly bounced the ball to Jamie Doan who finished the break with a lay-up. The St. Francis coach abandoned the press within minutes, but by that time the Rayders had established a lead which they never relinquished.

Entering the game, Charlevoix looked to be facing an uphill battle. Traverse City St. Francis, along with Elk Rapids, is considered to be the cream of the Lake Michigan Division of the Great Northern Conference. Even at full strength, the Rayders spot St. Francis a height advantage and Thursday evening Charlevoix was without Marianne Pfister. Pfister, one of the team's more aggressive rebounders, is temporarily out with a foot injury.

Charlevoix started well in the game, holding a 15-9 lead at the end of the first quarter. The Rayders compensated for the Gladiators' height advantage by being more aggressive and quicker to the ball. Becky Bragg and Jodi Allison simply outlasted their opponents for rebounding position and with the assistance of Liz Grunch, scraped up any available trash rebounds. Offensively, Charlevoix scored primarily from the perimeter. The Rayders worked the ball inside and when the Gladiator defense collapsed on the ball, the Rayders kicked it back out for open shots from the perimeter. Mary Jane Grunch had seven points in the quarter, including one three-point shot. Liz Grunch had six points in the quarter on two three-point shots.

For as well as Charlevoix's offense functioned in the first quarter, it was every bit as dismal in the second quarter. Anyone looking to build a fireplace could have collected the bricks that the Rayders were heaving at the basket in the second quarter and constructed a dandy. The Rayders mustered just a single basket for the entire quarter and went into halftime trailing 17-15.

Fortunately for the Rayders they left the second quarter in the locker room at halftime. They came out in the second half looking like an entirely different team. Doan, a junior forward, worked with Liz and Mary Jane Grunch to form a combination which St. Francis never found a way to shut down. Doan and Liz Grunch each had six points in the quarter while Mary Jane Grunch had five. Entering the final quarter, the Rayders led 38-31.

The Rayders held their momentum in the fourth quarter. Doan scored six more points in the first three minutes of the quarter. With about five and a half minutes left in the quarter, Doan stole the ball and went the length of the court for a basket. St. Francis brought the ball back upcourt, but just as they crossed halfcourt, Rayder guard Carrie Cunningham got in the face of a St. Francis player causing her to throw the ball out of bounds.

With 5:19 to play, St. Francis trailed 47-37 and called a time-out to stop the bleeding. The time-out slowed the Rayders, but only temporarily. With 3:18 left and Charlevoix leading 47-39, Mary Jane Grunch hit another three-point shot, this one off an inbounds play, and it was time for Traverse City to warm up the team bus.

Liz Grunch, Mary Jane Grunch and Doan combined for 47 of the Rayders' points. Liz Grunch had 18, Mary Jane Grunch 15 and Doan 14. Bragg led the team in rebounds with 13. Liz Grunch and Sheila Siegwart each had five assists.

Charlevoix lost the junior varsity game 38-22. Charlevoix will play at Mancelona, Thursday, Sept. 24.

Football team moves to 3-0

Mancelona beaten 24-16

Charlevoix's varsity football team ran its season record to 3-0 Friday evening with a 24-16 win against Mancelona. The Rayders and Traverse City St. Francis are now the only remaining undefeated teams in the Lake Michigan Division of the Great Northern Conference.

Charlevoix found that beating the visiting Ironmen this season was no easy task. Mancelona featured some tough defensive linemen and a defensive scheme which forced the Rayders to run at those linemen.

The first quarter was scoreless and Mancelona drew first blood in the second quarter. But falling behind 8-0 motivated the Rayders. Brandon Webb returned the Mancelona kickoff to the Ironmen 39 yard line. Nine plays later Jody McGlinch scored on a six-yard run. Don Jess passed to Vince Voisin for the two-point conversion to tie the game.

Charlevoix took the lead on the opening drive of the second half on a 13-play, 70-yard drive. Early on, the drive stalled at the Rayder 43 yard line, but a roughing the punter call on a fourth and 12 play resurrected the drive. The drive concluded on another fourth down play when Jess found Keith Carey on a 19-yard touchdown pass. Jess passed to McGlinch on the point after to give Charlevoix a 16-8 lead.

But Mancelona did not fold. They answered with a 65-yard drive of their own to knot the game at 16-16.

Charlevoix again rose to the occasion. And again they had a key fourth down play. With 3:26 left to play and Charlevoix with a fourth and six near midfield, the Rayders faked a punt. The ball was snapped to Jodi McGlinch, the up-man in punt formation. McGlinch burst through the line for a 10-yard gain and a first down. Two plays later Jess passed to Voisin for a 13-yard touchdown. Jess passed to Carey for the two-point conversion.

Even then, the game remained in question as Mancelona drove to the Rayder 15-yard line where Webb intercepted a pass with six seconds left in the game.

A cross country meet? Well, what a surprise

The bird hunting story proved to be merely a decoy. Charlevoix cross country coach Ken Plude lured former coach Pete Spieles out to the site of a covert cross country meet by telling Spieles they were going out to look at a bird hunting site. When they arrived at the end of Wickersham Road, Spieles found out there was a cross country meet being run in his honor. The race, called the Repeat Invitational, was run on a European style course at the Golden I farm. The course contained hay bale hurdles and some water.

The runners enjoyed the course and took off from the starting line whooping and hollering.

Matt Smith of Charlevoix was the individual winner in the boys' junior and senior race with a time of 17:36. Elsa Conlan was the top Rayder finisher in the girls' race, placing eighth in a time of 24:16.

Suttons Bay was the top team in the boys race followed by Walled Lake Western and Charlevoix. Walled Lake Western won the girls' race while Charlevoix placed fifth.

A number of Charlevoix alumni runners participated in an open race.

yards on 17 carries. David Skeel accumulated 63 yards on 11 carries. Most of their yardage was gained behind the center of the Rayders' offensive line, manned by center Keith Parrish and guards Gregg Holmes and Bill Dreyer. By air, Jess completed five of 16 passes for 39 yards and two touchdowns.

Defensively, Ben Whitley had 10 solo tackles and five assists. Webb had seven solo tackles and two assists.

This Friday evening Charlevoix will travel to Grayling for a non-division game. Grayling is also 3-0 this season.

J.V. loses 18-6

Charlevoix's junior varsity football team fell to 0-2-1 on the season with an 18-6 loss to Mancelona Sept. 17.

The Rayders trailed 12-6 and were driving late in the game when they were stopped on the 20-yard line. Mancelona then scored on an 80-yard run.

Neither team scored in the first half. Mancelona scored early in the third quarter. Charlevoix tied the game on a six-yard run by Casey Crain later in the quarter. Mancelona scored again midway through the fourth quarter and scored the final touchdown with about a minute left to play.

This Thursday evening Charlevoix hosts Grayling.

ings, etc., if he were working on a full time basis.

"We have done exhaustive research in ways which we can compensate Roger for his services. We have arrived at the conclusion that while he is under Social Security benefits, we cannot pay him anything for his services, without risking his Social Security disability. As a result, we are proposing the attached contract, which would cause Roger to no longer be eligible for Social Security disability, but we feel the contract would benefit the City and Roger.

"Funding for his salary will be paid out of the electric bonding proceeds during the current fiscal year and a combination of bond proceeds and income from rates for future years of the contract.

"I am recommending that the contract be approved as presented."

In a similar memo, Whiteley estimated that since 1985, Westernbrock has voluntarily provided services to the City which otherwise would have cost at least $567,810. Whiteley said there are several projects that the city will be using Westernbrock on in within the next three years including: financial and purchasing arrangements to purchase power through the Michigan Public Power Pool; revising city electrical rate schedules to pay off money borrowed through bonding for system improvements; developing a service policy; more accurately forecasting load levels (i.e. the amount of electricity the city will use) for the more economical purchase of power; Whiteley noted that although employing Westernbrock will not eliminate the city's need to hire outside consultants, it will significantly diminish that need.

Charles Papineau, a resident of the first ward, questioned the hiring. He said that before the council enters into any contract, they should sit down and determine exactly what services they want provided. He said people know what Westernbrock has done for the city, but that has been done voluntarily and the City should not become "the benevolent, protective order of taxpayers."

The $60,000 salary would make Westernbrock the city's highest paid employee by base salary. Former city council member Bob Timms noted that although Westernbrock's base salary is less, fringe benefits bring his total compensation package to more than $60,000.

In addition to the $60,000 base salary, Westernbrock will receive life and health insurance coverage as well as mileage and meeting expenses. The City will also provide at its own discretion, clerical support for typing, filing, etc., an office; telephone access; computers; duplication equipment; and normal office supplies. Westernbrock will also an increase or decrease in salary each April 1 according to the average percentage of increase or decrease given to other non-union City employees.

Mayor says personal problems won't affect public service

At the beginning of Monday evening's council meeting Mayor Dave Novotny issued a brief statement regarding a Sept. 15 incident in which police were called to his home. Neither Novotny nor police are offering details in regard to the incident.

"I had some personal problems, which should not be considered part of my public life," Novotny said. What happened has nothing to do with my ability to perform the duties of the Office of Mayor.

"There have been rumors about what happened. I can assure you that I was not arrested and no criminal activity occurred at my house. What happened at my home was purely a family matter. I would hope that no one would take any action or say anything that would cause further embarrassment to my family.

Nothing else was said of the issue during the council meeting.

Crooked Tree Arts Council presents one-man Chopin

Frederic Chopin's approach to composing music was highly individual. In the same way, ROBERT GURALNIK, the noted pianist and actor, has taken an individual and original approach in developing his program called "CHOPIN LIVES!" Costumed in elegant 19th Century garb, he portrays the composer in his one-man show to be presented Sunday afternoon, Sept. 27, 4 p.m., at McCune Arts Center in Petoskey.

Just as Chopin needed new forms to compose his music, so Guralnik had to create a new form to perform the way he wanted. For a number of years, Robert Guralnik toured the United States and Europe building a reputation as one of America's finest pianists. After his Carnegie Hall concert, the New York Times music critic wrote, "if technique to burn would set a theatre afire, Robert Guralnik would be an arsonist of dangerous proportions."

But Guralnik wanted to do something different, something more personal. He needed to express himself not only with the piano, but more completely with himself, so he set about to develop a new theatrical and musical form that would create a more exciting experience for his audiences as well as himself. CHOPIN LIVES! is the result. Now, the audience experiences Chopin the man, as well as his music.

Ticket Sales for the three-concert series which also features THE GREAT LAKES QUARTET Oct. 25 and the world-class DANIEL STRING QUARTET March 9, 1993 are presently on sale through the CTAC office. High school looks at new schedule

By Laurie Lounsbury

A small group of concerned parents, teachers, and administrators have set the wheels in motion on a project which could eventually lead to a progressive, innovative high school schedule and curriculum. The STB Committee, (scheduling, time, and bus committee) met last week at Charlevoix High School to go over a list of suggestions and solutions to expand the high school curriculum. The list compiled 26 ideas that had been presented to the committee. The ideas that drew the most attention from committee members were:

*Block scheduling: Block scheduling would extend the length of classtime to 90 minutes. Instead of students taking six short classes for a year, they could take four longer block classes in a semester, so that over the course of a year they would be able to take a total of eight classes. Some classes, such as physical education, would require only half of the block of time, so an additional optional course could fill the other half of the block time.

*Waiving classes with mastery: For students wanting to take accelerated classes, they could take an exam and, if they pass, waive the fundamental class.

*Adding supervised study: Rather than have a traditional study hall, have a certain time set aside every day for students to interact with their teachers. This could tie in with the block scheduling concept.

*More options for non-college bound students: Committee members agreed that more vocational education classes should be available for students who don't plan to attend college.

*Flexible Scheduling: In order to accommodate a longer school day,

BE ON THE LOOK OUT... Drivers running bus lights are endangering children

By L. Scott Swanson

A lesson in colors for drivers of vehicles approaching school buses. Flashing yellow lights mean the bus is slowing down to stop. You should too. Red lights mean the bus is stopped. You should also be stopped.

That seems simple enough, but at a meeting Monday morning, Charlevoix school transportation director Gordon Russell was asked how often Charlevoix school buses have their warning lights ignored. It averages about one a day, he answered.

School transportation directors from Boyne City and East Jordan said that's about the way it is in their school districts too. Just about every school day, three times in Charlevoix County drivers blow past a school bus which is either in or about to be in, the process of loading or unloading school children. Fortunately, bus drivers normally see the vehicles coming and stop children before they venture out into the street and are hit. But if the lights continue to be neglected, it's probably only a matter of time. Gamble long enough and the odds catch up.

In recent weeks the Charlevoix Elementary Parent Teacher Organization (PTO) has been trying to correct the problem, before a tragedy results. Monday morning PTO officers Kathy Reid and Kim Simpson met with Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater, School Business Manager Rich Kelly and the three school transportation directors to discuss the problem and ways that it can be corrected.

A variety of possible solutions were discussed. To begin with, they hope media attention directed to the effort will help heighten public awareness of the problem. Simpson has also drafted a letter to District Court Judge Harvey C. Varnum asking for tougher penalties to be imposed on drivers running school bus lights. Representatives of the East Jordan and Boyne City schools were going to approach their parent-teacher organizations and ask them to draft similar letters. Lasater said he's willing to work with the Court on the matter. Another option discussed was having deputies occasionally ride on school buses or have police cars posted at bus stops which frequently have problems. Mechanical arms which have a stop sign at the end and swing down from the side of Youths need not have run away from home to receive services. Any youth or family experiencing family conflict, school problems or other crisis situations including running away is welcome to contact the program for free and confidential assistance.

Third Level has provided services to youths and families since 1976. Currently, Third Level RYS counselors provide weekly on-site counseling at 25 schools in five counties. They also provide counseling and crisis intervention at the Traverse City office and will maintain a satellite office in Petoskey.

have students and teachers start school at different times. Some could start an hour later and stay an hour later, others could start early and leave early. Other ideas discussed included having summer school and evening classes, having a part-time teaching staff for community members who might want to teach one or two classes, and lengthening the school year.

High School Principal Dave Smith led the committee's discussion. Smith spoke in favor of block scheduling as did Gale Sheldon, a Boyne City teacher. Sheldon cited the town of Colorado Springs as an example of successful block scheduling. Attendance is higher, SAT scores are higher and students do better in their work with block scheduling.

Smith stressed the importance of concentrating on quality in education. "Quality is not just for students. It's for teachers too," he said. With block scheduling, teachers would have fewer classes to prepare for so the quality of their prep work and the time they have to devote to prep work is better.

Smith spoke of the importance of including the needs of all students, not just the high achieving students, in plans for a different curriculum. Smith said having vocational education classes available to students in their early high school years is important. "You have to get them into vocational ed classes early or they get bored with core classes and don't stay in school," Smith said.

The question of available bus transportation was brought up with the discussion of a longer school day and flexible scheduling. Smith said in response, "Busing is only as limited as our imaginations." Another question raised with the discussion of a longer school day was the possible conflict with teacher's contracts. "Do we try to build a school to accommodate the people using it, or do we build a school around contractual agreements?" Smith said.

Smith spoke openly of problems in education and the need to correct them internally, without waiting for a national educational reform plan. He said that when legislation has imposed changes on school systems in the past, the changes have usually failed. "I can tell you that right now, one third of the kids that attend this school will do well, one third will do just ok, and one third will do poorly. Would you go to a doctor that has one third of his patients do well, one third that do ok, and one third that die? Of course not. That's why it's time for change."

One parent said that perhaps the middle school should also be considering changes in their curriculum to coincide with changes at the high school level. Smith responded to that by saying, "We can be the leaders, and the other schools can follow our lead."

The STB committee will send the compiled list of ideas for change to the strategic planning committee for their revisions. The STB committee plans to be able to make a recommendation to the board of education by November 1st.

City police investigate B&E

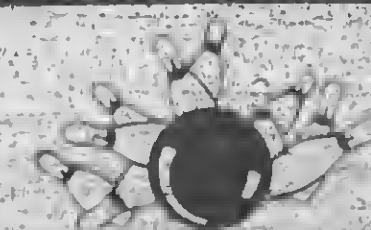

Charlevoix City Police are investigating a breaking and entering which took place at the Mariner Laundry and Dry Cleaning shop in the Captains Corner shopping center sometime between 9 p.m. Sept. 24 and 7 a.m. Sept. 25. A large amount of change was taken.

The theft was discovered by the morning clerk. Police are investigating, but as of yet have made no arrests. Anyone with information which may be helpful in solving the crime is asked to notify officer Scott Hankins or police chief Dennis Halverson.

Library to close for computer training

The Charlevoix Public Library will be closed from Tuesday, Oct. 6 through Friday, Oct. 9 so that the staff may receive on-line computer training. During the time the library is closed, people may still return books at the library drop box.

OPINIONS

Letters to the editor

Candidate critical of Chamber publication

Editor,
Just a few words to straighten out the editor of the Bridge Beat, a news-letter from the Chamber of Commerce.

I did answer Executive Director, Jacquie Merta of the Chamber verbally. Only verbally, because on August 18, 1992 at a Chamber of Commerce-Business People meeting at the Flight Deck Bar, Jacquie Merta welcomed all the business people, gave a little speech and promptly told all of them to vote for Bill Haggard.

I think a person in Public Office, representing the City should represent all the people and not a select few. As for the answers to the Chamber Director, I told her I would vote the way the people of Charlevoix wanted me to and if it was good for them, that is the way I would vote.

We in the first ward have not been represented equally in the past several years.

I will see that all the people in the City of Charlevoix are represented if I am elected the "councilman" from the First Ward.

"Bridge Beat" is a good newsletter, but let's get things right before you print it.

Just ask Jacquie Merta.

Hopefully, your next First Ward Councilman,

Donald B. Meggison

Let's all get out and "VOTE" November 3rd, 1992.

Bridge Beat carried Bill Haggard's response to our questionnaire on downtown issues, which council candidate Meggison did not answer. The readers of Bridge Beat have the advantage of knowing where Mr. Haggard stands on the issues. Unfortunately, they don't know where council candidate Meggison stands on those issues, or whether or not he will vote the way the people of Charlevoix want him to.

Sincerely,
Rod Benson, Editor

Turn down 9-1-1 proposal

The 9-1-1 proposal which will appear on the Nov. 3 ballot is ill-conceived. It is the equivalent of buying a car when you don't have the money to put gas in it. If county commissioners want voters to consider funding a 9-1-1 system, then they should put before the voters a funding package which includes both start-up and operational costs.

Charlevoix County voters should flatly reject the county 9-1-1 proposal which will appear on the Nov. 3 election ballot. The proposal on the ballot asks voters to pay to construct a 9-1-1 system while there are no provisions in place to pay for the long-term operational costs of the system. In plain and simple terms, the proposal asks voters to paint themselves into a corner.

If the 9-1-1 proposal on the Nov. 3 ballot passes, more than a million dollars will be spent to update emergency service department radios and construct a 9-1-1 system. For the first year or two the county will fund operations with money that is already available. But after that, operational funding is at best a question mark.

Obviously, the most likely scenario is that in a couple of years the county commissioners will be back before the voters saying, "we've got this million dollar 9-1-1 system, you can either write the million dollars off as a bad investment or you can fork over more money to keep the system running."

That's just not a situation voters should allow themselves to be placed in. They can avoid it by voting no on 9-1-1 Nov. 3.

...school bus lights are being ignored by area drivers

school buses were also discussed. All of the solutions had their strong points and weak points.

The problem with imposing tougher penalties is that in order to penalize someone, first you have to catch them. The transportation directors said that when a car runs a bus light, the bus driver is normally paying attention to the kids and making sure they're safe and consequently often does not get a license plate number, let alone a description of the car's driver. Lasater noted that given the problems of identifying drivers, the sheriff's department is only able to write from half a dozen to a dozen tickets countywide in any given year for people running school bus lights. Lasater also said that if harsher court sentences, including community service, are to be imposed, then the community service should be something related to the issue of the safety of school children.

A lighter form of enforcement option discussed was sending letters to the owner of the vehicle running the school bus lights. Although a warning letter is short of a legal action, it would not require the specific driver to be identified and it would create a paper trail in case that vehicle ran school bus lights more than once.

Have police cars posted at specific bus stops is likely to diminish problems at that stop, but perhaps only on a temporary basis. And the number of patrol cars available is limited. Charlevoix has 16 bus routes, Boyne City 11 and East Jordan 12 with each bus making several stops. Even if you add all of the city police departments to the sheriff's department, the number of patrol cars pales in comparison to the number of bus stops made each day.

Safety studies by the AAA insurance company indicate that ine-chanical stop arms which swing down from the side of school buses are the most effective safety apparatus which can be used on school buses. The safety arms cost about $250 per school bus.

Two years ago the state mandated additional yellow warning lights on school buses as a safety measure. Many bus drivers feel the yellow lights have been counterproductive. The theory behind the yellow lights is that a school bus will begin flashing its yellow lights 200 feet before it stops as a warning to drivers to prepare to stop. That's the theory. Unfortunately, in practice, many drivers see the yellow flashing lights and speed up so they can get past the bus before its lights turn red.

In addition to that, according to the law, the bus' red lights are wired to the bus' door and don't come on until the driver opens the door. Consequently, some bus drivers will crack the door, giving them red lights, but still keeping the kids on the bus until they can check to make sure traffic is safe. Even with the problems letting kids off the bus, the transportation directors noted that a bus driver has more control when he's letting kids off the bus than when they are getting on the bus.

Many bus drivers also train the kids to watch the driver and only cross the road when the bus driver signals that it is safe.

Despite these precautions, there are still bizarre circumstances in which kids have nearly been hit. One transportation director told of an instance where a car passed a slowing school bus on the right-hand side within a few feet, if not inches, of the school bus door. Another transportation director told about a car which initially stopped and then started again and had to weave between kids crossing the road.

The school officials present tioned only two instances in recent years where children have been hit by cars while getting off a school bus. In one instance, a car passed several cars which were stopped and in the other instance the child getting off the bus had forgotten something on the bus and was coming back across the street.

All in all the number of accidents occurring with children getting on and off area school buses have been quite minimal. But caution on the part of area drivers is the only thing close to a guarantee that things will stay that way.

DeVries - Clark

Kathy Jo DeVries and Terry Clark were married August 22 in an afternoon ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Henry DeVries of Charlevoix and Phyllis Eisenhauer of Kingsley. The groom is the son of Janice Clark of Lincoln Park, Mi.

The couple was married in a double ring ceremony performed by Pastor Merlin Wellhouser before 150 guests at Bethany Lutheran Church in Charlevoix.

The church was decorated with freshly picked combinations of different white flowers.

The bride was given in marriage her father, Henry DeVries.

For her wedding dress, the bride chose a satin gown with a hand-beaded wedding band collar and a reverse dropped basque bodice adorned with lace and studded pearls. Her gown also featured leg-of-mutton sleeves, an open back with draped pearls, and a scalloped cathedral train of sequins and lace. The bride wore a floral headband of white silk flowers and leaves, trimmed with pearl sprays, silk bells, and a double finger-tip veil. She carried a silk armspray assortment of white and peach lilies, roses, and wildflowers.

Irene Shooks and Jennifer Veenstra provided the organ and piano accompaniment. They performed "I'll Be There" and "We've Only Just Begun."

Kathy Elliott served as the maid of honor, with Anita Holton, Luann DeKraker, Sherri Free, and Barb Brodin acting as bridesmaids.

They wore peach, tea-length dresses accented with a flattering scoopback, highlighted with cascades of simulated pearls. Bows trimmed the puff sleeves and back of the dresses. They carried an armspray assortment of flowers similar to that of the bride.

The flower girl was Bethany Brodin who wore a white satin tea length dress accented with lace and pearl neckline and a princess waistline.

The ringbearer was Colton Free and the best man was Scott Elliott. Acting as groomsmen were Bob Denise, Garry DeKraker, John Tonton and Bill Brodin. The ushers were Keith Free and Jeff Lewis.

In lieu of a rehearsal dinner, the bride and groom brought pizza and pop to the reception hall where the wedding party helped with decorations.

Blood Drive is a voluntary effort for life

By Ralph McRae

On the day the American Red Cross Blood Mobile comes to our town, you might call the efforts of volunteers and donors an outpouring of compassion and concern. Blood donors give a part of their life, their own blood, so that others may live. Thursday, Sept. 24, there were 77 donors who took the time to give a pint of blood. Between noon and 8 p.m. these people took approximately 40 minutes out of their day. They walked out of the American Legion Hall 16 ounces lighter, but feeling proud.

Earlier Thursday, volunteers from the Charlevoix Lions Club and two high school students set up the processing equipment which included 12 waist high tables and a variety of other furnishings. The equipment took up most of the hall. Years ago blood collection used to take place at several churches on the same day. However in recent years the American Legion has served as the collection point. It is ideal in that it is the right size, in a good location and has ample parking.

Giving blood is a multi-step procedure. First, in the entrance lobby, two people help register you and give you informational forms. Next, you enter the large hall where your pulse, temperature and blood pressure is taken. At the next station you are interviewed about conditions which may affect your ability to donate blood. Some of the things which may not allow you to give blood are: an active allergy, having had a blood transfusion within the past six months, having donated blood during the past 55 days, a heart condition, being a diabetic, using diet-control pills or having a cold or having gotten a tattoo within the past six months. A donor also must be at least 17 years old and weigh at least 110 pounds.

Most people are aware of possible health problems that would make them unsuitable as donors. Most of the people who come to donate are accepted. Privacy is respected. People who decide their blood should not be used may indicate that decision discreetly. If you have questions, you also may contact the Red Cross prior to the drive.

Each donor receives a set of three plastic pouches. Blood is collected in the top pouch. Later, when the blood is processed, derivatives are captured in the other two pouches. All of the pouches are given computerized markings and identification numbers.

Registered nurses oversee the actual blood donation. Donors lay on tables with their right sleeves rolled up and a blood pressure cuff wrapped around the upper arm.

The area of the arm where the needle is to be inserted (near the inside of the elbow joint) is sterilized and the needle is put in place. Blood begins to flow into the pouch which hangs on a hook a few inches below the donor. It takes from six to 10 minutes to collect a pint of blood. After the tube is disconnected, the donor is helped off the table and escorted to a near-by lunch table where he stays during a 15 minute recovery period. Water, orange juice, cookies and fruit are available at the recovery table. Coffee is not permitted. Locally, Oleson's food store donates the orange juice and cookies. This past (Above) Although there are occasionally crowds which cause a slight wait, most of the time blood donors can get in and out easily within an hour.

BEACONS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

There are only about thirty days left until we vote for president. If they say nothing else about this year's elections, they will have to say they have been anything but dull. Did you hear about the house primary election out in Arizona? It ended in a dead heat. Even the recount did not break the tie. The two candidates broke the tie by playing a game of draw poker. The loser said it was a good thing they weren't still living in the old west. If they had been, it would have been settled with six guns outside the saloon at high noon!

As silly as that might sound, there is a tragic note behind it. If everyone who was eligible to cast their ballot had voted in that election, there probably never would have been a tie. We need to grasp the importance of being involved in all phases of life. We need to get involved in the electoral process. We need to get involved with our local school system. We need to be more involved with matters of faith.

Yes, your belief in God is a personal matter. But how did you come to believe in the first place? Someone cared enough about you to get involved in your life and share the divine truths that change you. Do you care enough about someone else to pass on the love of Christ that was so graciously shared with you? You need to get involved because there are needs out there that you can meet. There are people you currently know that you can be a blessing to.

If you do believe, then you have to know that you are accountable to the Lord for the way you live your life. Is being accountable all that hard of a concept to think about? You are accountable to your boss for your performance on the job. Students are accountable to their teachers for the way they perform in class. Take it the final step and realize that the Lord has expectations of each of us as His children. He has expectations because He has gifted and equipped us to minister on His behalf. You need to be involved.

But the most important reason you need to be involved in sharing the faith and love that God through Christ has given us is that there is hope. Whatever the problem, God has hope. Whatever the crisis, God has hope. Whatever the fear, God has hope. If you believe, you have experienced that hope first hand. If you have experienced that hope first hand, then you know what it means to have had someone share it with you. You can make an eternal difference in someone else's life. You need to be involved.

If you aren't sure about what you can do, then talk to some of my colleagues in ministry. We are blessed with a unique group of men and women who care intensely about your spiritual well being. They know the benefits that can come to any life that really gets involved in the work of the Lord. They are a blessing to me. I know they will be a blessing to you.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of God. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

...local blood drive helps save many lives

Thursday, Candy Smith and Dianne Wojan donated additional cookies. Members of the Vital Options exercise group contribute pieces of fruit. While waiting for 15 minutes, most of the donors chat with each other.

After the blood is collected at drives such as the one in Charlevoix, it is processed. Each packet of pouches also has a small plastic tube. The blood which enters the tube is taken to a testing laboratory in Flint where it is tested for the AIDS virus. The first concern of everyone is to make sure that blood recipients receive safe blood.

The filled pouches are sent to Petoskey for processing. In the laboratories there, the blood is separated into components. One of the wonders of donating blood is that the ratio of donor benefit to recipient benefit is not one to one. One donation can help several people.

Blood has four main components. One of these called platelets. There are also red corpuscles which can be broken down into several types. Plasma is a blood ingredient which is effective in preventing shock. Also contained in blood is cryoprecipitate an essential ingredient for dealing with hemophilia. It takes thousands of pints of blood to produce one infusion of cryoprecipitate.

Of 100 average donors, 46 have type O blood, 40 have type A, 10 have B and only four have the AB combination. Of the 100 donors, 85 are RH positive and the remainder RH negative.

After processing in Petoskey, the blood components are shipped to blood banks in 34 hospitals in the Wolverine blood collection region. There is no charge for the blood itself, however processing, transportation, storage in infusing it into the patient does cost money.

Of the almost 50 people working at last Thursday's blood drive, 44 were local volunteers. The Beta Sigma sorority takes responsibility for enlisting canteen volunteers and scheduling the times for their three-hour shifts. Other people work on pre-drive publicity. The entire operation is overseen by a coordinating committee. Current committee members are Esther Carey, Marilyn Izor, Andi Mathews and Nancy Fowler. Mathews and Fowler have been on the committee since its beginning, 20 years ago. Anyone interested in assisting with future Charlevoix blood drives may phone Fowler at 547-9314.

Class to help smokers kick habit

Successfully quitting smoking and having fun in the process is the goal of the "Freedom from Smoking" program sponsored by Charlevoix Area Hospital and the American Lung Association. Weekly sessions at 7 p.m. in the hospital cafeteria will run from Tuesday, Oct. 20 to Dec. 1 with two sessions during "quit week" Nov. 10 and 12.

Cheryl Jacobs, respiratory therapist and program leader, says, "The program really works because we don't quit 'cold turkey' the first night and people find the support they need in the group to make breaking the habit permanent." The first session is an orientation meeting when the program outline will be explained.

Pre-registration is required. A minimum of 12 registrations must be received in order to have the class. Cost for the program is $60. For further information, or registration, call Charlevoix Area Hospital at 547-4024.

Program answers medication questions

When you are given a prescription by your doctor, do you take it straight to the drug store, get it filled, and begin taking the medication?

Maybe you should ask a few important questions first. The Burns Clinic Foundation is offering Communicate Before You Medicate, an informative session for people older than 50 who take multiple medications. The session is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 8, 10:30 a.m. in the Burns Clinic Classroom in Petoskey.

Prescription Services, Inc., pharmacist Dennis Schaedig is the presenter for the class.

"There are considerations all patients should be aware of when getting a prescription filled," according to Schaedig. "Finding out exactly how much medication to take, when to take it, and for how long is essential. It is also important to know if the drug may alter the actions of drugs you may already be taking."

If you do not understand your medications, it is important to ask your doctor or pharmacist. Repeat the instructions back if necessary, and if you are not told about special precautions or side effects, ask just to make sure. These guidelines are especially important if you are taking more than one medication.

To register for Communicate Before You Medicate call the Burns Clinic Foundation Health Education Center at 348-2134.

Local person in mix-off finals

Elizabeth Ann Mosher of Charlevoix has been selected as a finalist in AAA Michigan's 12th annual "Zero-Proof-Mix-Off" contest and has a chance to win $1,000.

Twenty finalists have been selected to Mix their nonalcoholic drinks for judges at 10 a.m., Thursday, Sept. 24 at the Detroit Press Club. Drinks will be rated on taste, appearance, originality of name and adherence to this year's theme, "The Twelve Days of Christmas."

In addition to the top prize of $1,000, second through fourth-place finishers will win $250, $150 and $100 respectively.

"Madrigal Mist" was the drink that earned Mosher a spot as a finalist. The drink includes cranberry juice, boysenberry syrup, and club soda.

Drink recipes from all finalists will be included in the 1992 "Great Pretenders Party Guide," distributed free statewide in November. The guide also includes festive food recipes and information for party hosts planning alcohol-free gatherings.

The contest and guide are part of AAA Michigan's "First A Friend, Then A Host" alcohol-awareness campaign during the Christmas and New Year's holiday season.

Four volunteer firemen who recently retired from the Charlevoix City Fire Department were honored by the other volunteers at a steak dinner Saturday evening. The firemen honored were (from left) George (Bill) Lusk, Cliff (Tip) Riley, Don Meggison and I. Lee Moerland.

Retired firemen honored

Four retired volunteer firemen from the Charlevoix City Fire Department were honored at a dinner Saturday evening. Clifford (Tip) Riley, Don Meggison, George (Bill) Lusk and I. Lee Moerland were honored by their fellow volunteers for a total of approximately 156 years of service to the department.

The steak dinner took place at the American Legion Hall. The four retired firemen were presented awards and roasts by their fellow volunteers. Barry Wood served as master of ceremonies. Although retirement may spare the four some of the hardships of fighting fires, their fellow volunteers were not about to let them off without taking at least a bit more heat. A segment of the party was devoted to a light-hearted roasting of the volunteers, recalling some of their firefighting escapades over the years. Tom Meggison led off the roast with brief stories about each of the four honored guests and other firemen then followed suit.

Although the tone of the evening was light, in his introduction Tom Meggison noted, "Together, these four gentlemen put in around 156 years of service to the volunteers and the citizens we serve. We're here to thank them tonight. I think every one of us still on the volunteer fire department, in one way or another, has learned something from these men. I know I did."

Wetland program receives grant

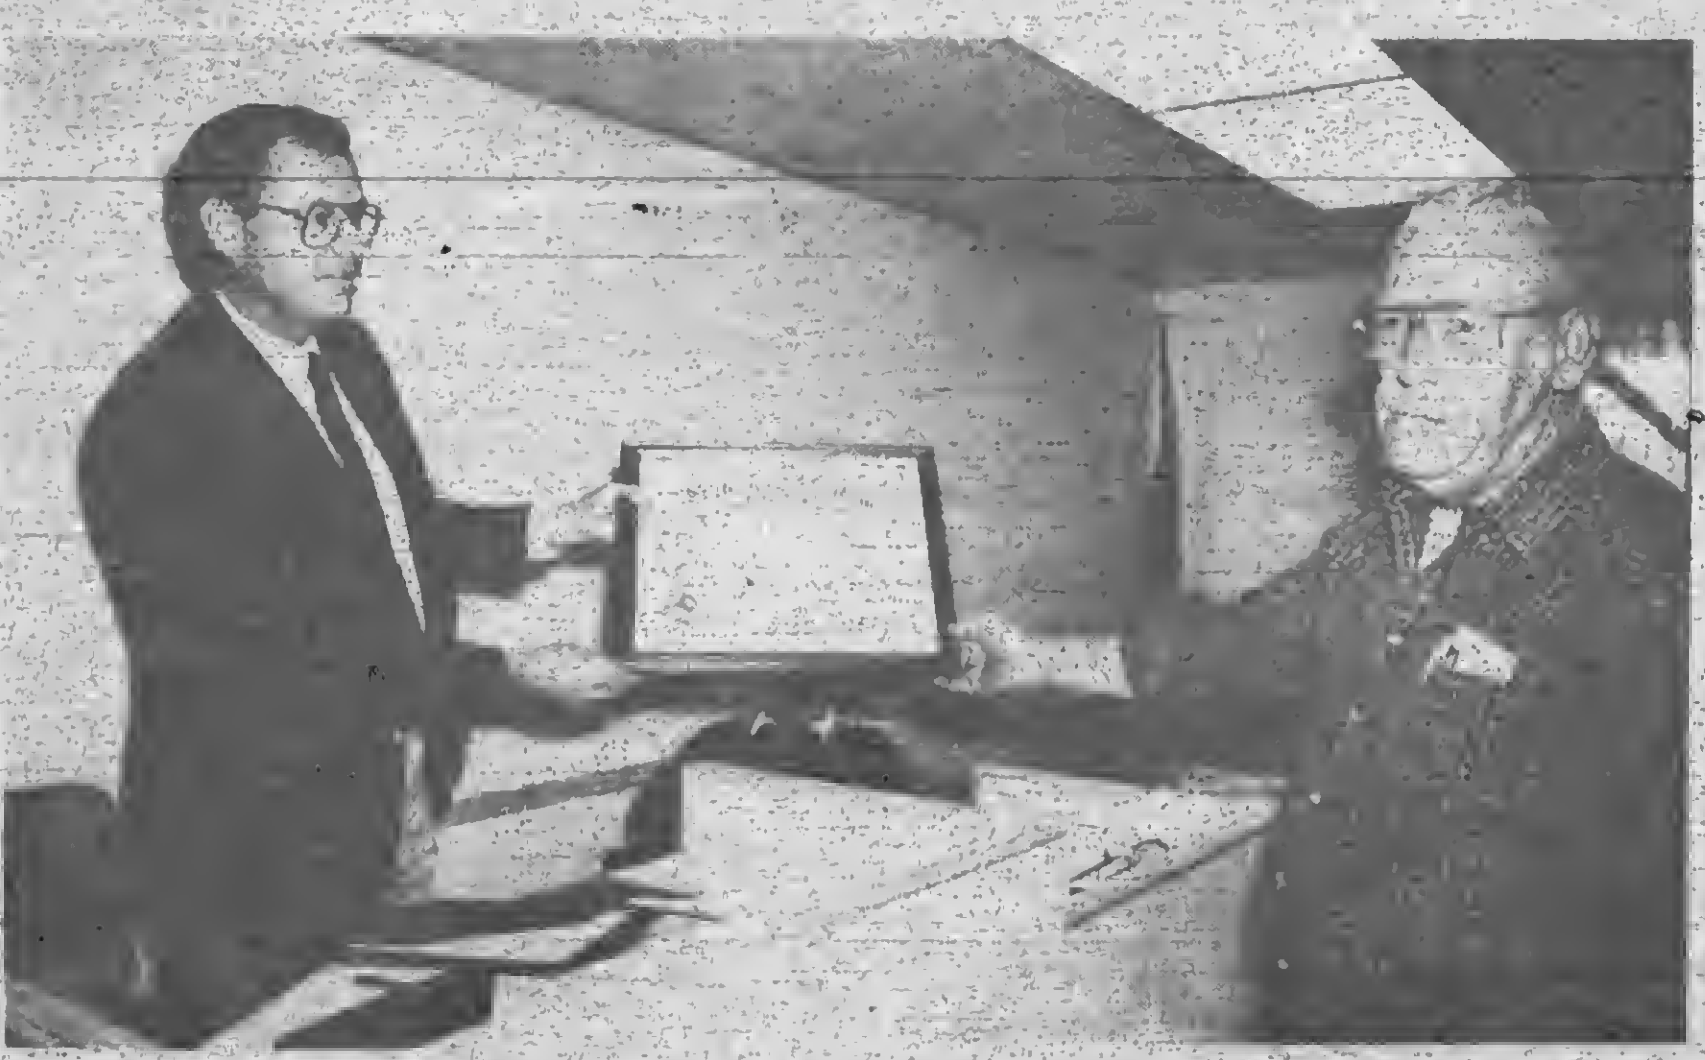

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council has been awarded a grant by the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation for a three-year project entitled "Mobilizing Citizens to Protect Great Lakes Wetlands."

Recognizing the need to empower local citizens in northern Michigan and the Great Lakes Basin to become more involved in the protection and management of wetlands, the program will focus on raising awareness about wetlands values, wetlands regulations, and what citizens can do to help protect wetlands.

The newly funded program has many aspects, including: 1) the coordination of local citizen wetland protection groups; 2) the development of wetland training videos and public service announcements; 3) the publication of the "Citizen's Wetland Report," 4) sponsorship of a Great Lakes Citizen's Wetland Protection Conference, and 5) the publication of a book of case studies showcasing successful local wetland protection programs.

According to Ms. Lois DeBacker, Program Officer for the Mott Foundation, the project will have a positive impact on wetlands protection throughout the Great Lakes Basin. "The Watershed Council will seek input from wetland protection advocates from several states during the course of this project so that the methods and materials developed can be transferred to areas beyond northern Michigan."

"We are very pleased to receive this support from the Mott Foundation," said Will Cwikiel, Environmental Policy Specialist and coordinator of the project. "Our Great Lakes Wetlands Policy Program focused on wetlands professionals and legislators. This project will allow us to share the knowledge and experience from that project with citizens. Local residents are becoming more and more frustrated with

Football team suffers first loss

Turnovers costly despite 650 yards of offense

The Rayder varsity football team incurred its first loss of the season 28-22 at Grayling Friday evening.

Both teams went up and down the field, racking up big offensive totals. But turnovers played a crucial role in the game. Charlevoix accumulated nearly 650 yards, but turned the ball over six times. The last turnover occurred in the final seconds in the Grayling end zone.

Grayling scored within the first three minutes of the game, but Charlevoix came back later in the first quarter to tie the game on a five-yard touchdown run by Brandon Webb.

With 50 seconds left in the half, the Rayders took the lead when linebacker Jodi McGlinch intercepted a pass and took it back 65 yards for a touchdown. Don Jess then passed to McGlinch for a two-point conversion and Charlevoix led 15-7.

With 13 seconds left in the half, Grayling scored their second touchdown and the half ended with Charlevoix leading 15-13.

The Rayders extended their lead to 22-13 on the first drive of the second half. McGlinch scored on a 20-yard run and Vince Voisin kicked the extra point.

But those were to be Charlevoix's last points. Grayling scored midway through the third quarter to draw within two and scored the winning touchdown with 2:29 left in the game.

Charlevoix drove to the Grayling 15 yard line with 30 seconds left in the game, but a pass into the end zone was intercepted.

Individually, Brandon Webb had a huge night running the ball, totaling 205 yards on 23 carries. McGlinch rushed 13 times for 167 yards. Jess completed 12 of 22 passes for 199 yards. Seven of those passes were caught by Keith Carey for 86 yards. McGlinch caught four for 90 yards.

Defensively, Webb had nine solo tackles and a pass interception. McGlinch had seven solos, two assists and an interception for a touchdown. Ben Whitley and Carey each had eight tackles.

The loss dropped the Rayders' season record to 3-1 and left their league record at 2-0.

This Friday evening Charlevoix will host league opponent Elk Rapids.

LEGAL NOTICE 210

SYNOPSIS OF EVELINE TWP. BOARD MEETING SEPTEMBER 8, 1992

The meeting was called to order by Supervisor, Dave Willson at 7:04 p.m. at the township hall. Ted Sherman was absent.

The August minutes were approved.

The audit report done by Mason & Kammerman was examined and accepted.

A treasurer's report was given and a zoning report was also given.

The board turned down a request by Holy Island home owners to change the name of Greenleaf Ave. to Holy Island Road, South, as they could not get a unanimous vote. We encouraged them to look into changing the plat if that is what they want to do.

A previously signed road contract for work to be done on Bracey Road was rescinded as it stated the wrong footage to be done. A new contract was approved. Also a contract to re-seal many township roads to preserve the hard surfaces was approved for approximately $65,000 with the road commission.

The September bills were approved in the amount of $43,638.25.

Adjournment was at 9:50 p.m.
Submitted by: Marsha Steward, Eveline Twp. Clerk.

Church host Missions Convention

The Charlevoix Assembly of God will host its Annual Missions Convention beginning Sunday, Oct. 4. Rev. Art Ledlie, Director of Good News Gang Metro, a children's ministry and a food distribution ministry in inner city Detroit, will be the speaker in the morning service at 10:30 a.m. In addition to leading Good News Gang Metro, Rev. Ledlie is pastor of Metropolitan Outreach Center. He has lived and ministered in California, Florida and Illinois with experience in youth ministry, church planting, mass evangelism and radio/television production. As a Pastor and Associate Pastor he has founded two drug rehabilitation centers.

Paster Lowell Anderson said, "Charlevoix Assembly contributed 22 percent of its total income in missions and outreach ministries in 1991 and anticipates accomplishing at least that in 1992. SEPTEMBER 1992

Basketball team wins easily 57-41

Liz Grunch scores 23 points

Charlevoix overcame a second quarter lull and pulled away from Mancelona in the second half for a 57-41 win last Thursday evening. Charlevoix led throughout the game, taking a 12-5 lead by the end of the first quarter. But the second quarter was not good for the Rayders. Mancelona rallied and trimmed the Charlevoix lead to 21-19 at the half. But in the third quarter the Rayders came out of the locker room smoking. They outscored the visiting Ironwomen 17-9 and rode the momentum into the fourth quarter. Sophomore Liz Grunch played well in all facets of the game. She missed a triple double by only two rebounds. For the game, she had 23 points, 11 steals and eight rebounds. Jamie Doan, a junior forward had 11 points while senior forward Marianne Pfister, returning from a foot injury, had eight rebounds. Junior guard Carrie Wakula came off the bench and promptly had four assists. The win brought Charlevoix's season record above .500 at 4-3. The Rayders are 3-1 in league play. This Thursday, Charlevoix will play at East Jordan in a game which could have a significant effect on league standings.

Political activity by Chamber questioned

Should the Chamber of Commerce be involved in political activity and are they using tax funds for political purposes? These questions were put before the City Council by Polle VerWys, a resident of the south side, at Monday evening's council meeting.

Bob Hoffman, the Chamber of Commerce treasurer, said that none of the money paid to the Chamber by the City of Charlevoix is used for any political purpose.

VerWys referred to a recent issue of Bridge Beat, a downtown newsletter published by the Downtown Coordinator's office. The Downtown Coordinator's position is funded by the Downtown Development Authority, which is a tax-funded branch of the City government, and administered by the Chamber of Commerce.

Although the City and Chamber of Commerce do have financial transactions, the Chamber of Commerce is not a branch of the City government.

A look at how area apples fare in a beauty pageant

(Editor's note: Charlevoix will host its annual Apple Festival this weekend. Area farmers will be selling approximately 40 different varieties of apples in East Park this weekend. In the accompanying story by Laurie Lounsbury several local apple growers compare the virtues of different varieties of apples.)

By Laurie Lounsbury

The stage is set for the Charlevoix Area Apple Pageant. Warm autumn sun filters through a profusion of red and golden maple leaves, providing the backdrop for the competition. Nervous young apples cling to tree branches, waiting for the moment of perfect ripeness to drop onto center stage. Overbearing mother trees force their rosy, orb'd beauties into the foreground.

As with any pageant, this Charlevoix Area Apple Pageant features a large field of entrants. And of course, we have a panel of objective, knowledgeable judges. All judges were selected on the basis of being an orchard owner. From King Orchards we have Betty King, from Friske Orchards, Richard Friske, Walter Rosenthal of Rosenthal Orchards, and Rita Williams of Williams Orchards. Our Master of Ceremonies is the illustrious Dave Knight. Knight is a former Courier editor and an experienced apple grower. His ability to sing "Here she comes, Miss Apple Pageant Apple," is dubious, but otherwise he is considered to be well qualified for the job of Master of Ceremonies. Color commentary has been provided by Clayton Smith. While Smith is not an apple grower, he has been an apple cater and an apple distributor for many years. His colorful comments endle him to the position.

Our Apple Pageant will consist of many northern Michigan apples competing in several different categories. First we will have the evening glow competition, where the judges will decide which apple looks the preiest in the glow of a setting sun. Then we will have the talent competition, to see which apple has the best talent for apple sauce, pastries, and pies. No com-

Football contest begins

Beginning this week, the Courier will be running a football contest. Local sporting prophets will have the opportunity to match their wits with other area sports gurus.

Area merchants sponsoring and providing prizes for the contest are: Bridge Street Ace Hardware, Pat McKown Ford, Crown Motors Ltd., Sears, Pat McKown Dodge City and Paul Burger Landscaping.

...politics raises questions

In response to VerWys' questions Monday evening, Mayor Dave Novotny noted that the City does make an annual payment to the Chamber, but that payment is for the Chamber to promote the City of Charlevoix.

VerWys said that the recent issue of Bridge Beat contained two to two and a-half pages of what she characterized as "political advertising."

"Is the Chamber acting as a political action committee, or does the City pay for this," she asked. "It's a little fuzzy to me." She added that she felt that if the Chamber is working for the City then she wouldn't think the Chamber would be politically active in this election or any other, especially if they were funded by tax dollars.

Hoffman said none of the money paid to the Chamber by the City is used for political purposes. The City subcontracts to the Chamber for promotion. He said that Bridge Beat simply questioned candidates (incumbent Bill Haggard and challenger Don Meggison) for the first ward council seat about their positions and published those positions. (Haggard filed a written response to the questionnaire. Meggison verbally told Chamber officials that his response was that he would vote the way people wanted him to vote. He was told that his response would not be published unless it were put in writing. He declined to file a written response.)

Hoffman said that although Bridge Beat published the response received from Haggard, the Chamber did not publish a stance on the election.

"We have a right as an organization to give our members that information that may be important to them," Hoffman said.

Police spend hour after hour in court

By L. Scott Swanson

Last week a summer officer from the City Police Department was back in town for the day, but was not in uniform. She was in plain clothes and was back in town for the day, waiting to make a court appearance. Later in the day, two police officers from East Jordan sat in District Court with a judge, a court clerk, an attorney and the assistant prosecutor. A hearing had been scheduled for 3 p.m., but 3 p.m. came and passed with no sign of a defendant. At 3:12 the judge sent the officers home and ordered a warrant for the defendant.

How much time do police officers spend in court? Is that a hassle for them? How often do scheduled hearings fail to go?

City Police Chief Dennis Halverson estimates that on average, each of the officers on his department spends about three hours per week in court. The City Police Department has six officers including Halverson. Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater estimates that each of the 12 sworn officers in his department spends an average of two to four hours a week in court.

Often court time ends up coming out of the overtime budget. As an example, Halverson cites signing warrants. Signing warrants is the equivalent of a court appearance for an officer and has to be signed in front of a court clerk. When a night shift officer makes an arrest, he has to come back in dur-

— SOME CANDIDATES DODGE THE ISSUES —

HAGGARD REPRESENTS COMMITMENT

When asked their views on downtown issues, the first ward council candidates responded.*

Question: Councilman Bill Haggard: Candidate Don Meggison:

Do you support the existence of the Downtown Development Authority and its financing capabilities for downtown projects?

"Yes, ... Hoffman park, Erber parking lot, White Parking Lot, new sidewalks with brick pavers, Kusina parking area; ... all have become a reality ... with NO increase in the millage."

NO RESPONSE

Do you support the acquisition of the Kusina property for additional parking?

"Yes, ... the Kusina parking facility will help with the lack of parking in the south part of downtown, especially in the Oleson's area."

NO RESPONSE

What do you feel is the most important problem or issue facing downtown Charlevoix?

"We need to create and maintain a positive business environment and encourage more year round businesses to enhance our local job base and economy."

EDITH

by EDITH GILBERT

They look beautiful — those fresh, green cornstalks hugging the base of the small trees planted up and down Bridge Street! Applause for the idea goes to the Chamber of Commerce's Retail Committee, in anticipation of the forthcoming popular Apple Festival.

This is only one of the many projects that Jacqueline Merta, Executive Director of the Chamber, oversees. Working out of a tiny 28' x 14' office, filled with 2 desks, a computer, laser printer, typewriter, photo copier, 3 filing cabinets, a postage machine and 3 telephones, she is assisted by three full-time and three part-time people during the busy summer.

"It's amazing how well this office functions with such limited space," admits Merta. "Not only are we working on top of each other, but there isn't enough space for more than two visitors at a time to select brochures from our racks. We have to collate our mailings on top of the reception counter!"

And they have to answer a myriad of time consuming questions on where to stay, where to camp, where to relocate businesses, information about Beaver Island, help students with reports, provide information to bus and tour groups, return lost glasses, purses and keys, refer complaints, and play detective to people who call and say "I was in town and can't remember the name of the shop, (or restaurant, or motel, etc.)."

"Many businesses had a wonderful summer this year," reports Merta. "The restaurants did very well. Some businesses felt that May and September were their best months. It all depends on the type of business we're talking about. You know the Chamber services not only Charlevoix County, but Emmet and Antrim Counties as well, and we have 450 members."

"The events in East Park were all very successful. The Craft Show has grown to 275 entries, and it's the biggest money maker for the Chamber. It helps support the expense of the Venetian Festival, which is very expensive to promote. The fireworks are only a portion of the $30,000 budget for the three-day affair."

"We did spend money on fireworks this year and they were even more effective than usual. People wonder why our fireworks are so spectacular. I think it's because the setting on Round Lake is like a stadium and everyone has a front row seat. Richard Davis is in charge of the fireworks. He heads Fireworks North, a non-profit corporation and he's skilled and experienced in putting on an outstanding fireworks display."

"John Taylor of Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering was in charge of this year's Venetian Festival and will do it again in '93. He coordinated the boat parade, street parade, drum and bugle corps competition, the entertainment in the park, and publicity."

"Yes, the Venetian Festival also takes up a tremendous amount of my time," admits Merta. "While I'm now sending out Thank-You notes, I'm already confirming dates for Friday, Saturday and Sunday next year on July 23, 24, 25."

She also attends numerous meetings to keep herself informed and she in turn informs her board, headed by Robert Kern, on what is going on in the area. She works year round with the industrial and the retail community, puts out a newsletter and pays bills.

If Merta had a wish it would be for more space in the Chamber building. A temporary solution instead of adding to the existing building might be to rent down town office space for the Director and her secretary during the summer season and thus use the present limited space solely as a visitors and reception center as they do in Traverse City — a place to hand out literature and answer questions.

"If we had more space, the office would be less noisy, we'd be able to be even more efficient, and we would accomplish more without frequent interruptions."

With an expanding community all around the heart of the city, it's worth thinking about.

Public office shouldn't be used in campaigns

by EDITH GILBERT

Editor,

Now that the primary election is behind us, I feel compelled to share my concerns about public employees using their positions to publicly endorse candidates to elected positions. I refer specifically to the races for Prosecutor and Sheriff in both Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. Active police agency employees in both counties used their positions in paid candidate endorsements in the Petoskey News Review. It matters not that public funds were not used in paying for these ads. While I certainly have not objection to their right to be politically active on their own personal time, I do object when they use their public position to lend credence to their activity.

For example, the Boyne City Police Department apparently was solidly for Richard May for Charlevoix County prosecutor since a newspaper ad endorsing Mr. May ran with the signatures of several people identified as members of their police department. Identifying the persons as members of the Boyne City Police Department lent an extra measure of credence to the ad which I feel was a misuse of their position in the community.

The same practice also occurred in Emmet County races.

What happens if a candidate endorsed by one of the area police agencies loses? Isn't it possible if not likely that the winning candidate will be a little tougher in requiring evidence/information for prosecution from a police agency which publicly opposed him/her in election? Isn't it also possible that individual police officers would fear peer pressure and/or reprisals from superiors if they did not join the majority in an endorsement?

Some may say that our candidates and police officers are professional and would not engage in any activity deemed unprofessional. I would hope this to be true. However, we are all human and we simply do not know the answers to these questions. I think the danger is real for the public to be the loser by tolerating these practices.

I am proposing therefore that all units of government in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties prohibit its hired staff from using their positions with the government to attempt to influence elections in any way.

I hope that this proposal will receive serious consideration from the various units of government in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

Dissatisfaction over development

Editor,

This is in regards to the C&O development again. We are still fighting to save what little bit of Lake Charlevoix shore line we have left and also about the berm in front of us and the trees they have been planting.

This is a grave injustice to us, the people of Lake Terrace Mobile Home Park, the people on the city side of the development and last but not least the natural beauty of our lake shore. We have our rights!

The biggest majority of us in the park are very upset. The park was here long before this development was even thought of. They have no right to block our view.

The statement was made that it was being done to block the park and the white trash who live in it. As yet we have not found out who the man was that has made the statement. But we will find out and he will wish he had never said such a thing. For his information, we are not white trash, there is no such person and we do have a very nice park. Some people are just not as prosperous as others, nor have the knowledge or power to do what they want. Like to more or less buy people, and sway them to their side to do as they wish. But underneath their skin, all people are the same, and they're not, but they should be treated equal.

We were told that there would be no drain off. Well, there is, not only into our yards but from what I've been told into the city's part of Lake Charlevoix and next it will be our part of Lake Charlevoix. This could become quite a mess.

Now from our understanding Consumers Power is to start work digging on the green belt to bury electrical lines. Eventually there will not be a green belt left. The green belt is to be left untouched in its natural beauty!

We the people have to stand together and do everything we can about stopping this. This is a destruction of great beauty and we can not let this happen. If they have to dig up things and cost them more money, well they should have thought of this to begin with. We were told at a meeting we had here in the park that a site plan does not have to be approved to begin work.

At the first township meeting after the work began, we were told that no site plan had come before the board.

The day after my last article came out in the paper, the workers started hauling trees and planting them. They sometimes work from early morning until 6 or 7 p.m. or later and six to seven days a week. They even work in the rain some days.

At the last township meeting, they had said that the township planning commission had approved the plan and that one of the board members has a copy of the site plan. But when I try to get a copy all I get is the run around! They have even started putting in street lights. Does this all sound right to you people out there? It sounds and looks to me as if there is something shady going on besides certain people being bought off.

People, stand up for your rights. We have a right to freedom of speech yet and if we don't stand up for ourselves and stand together, who's going to do it for us?

Election is coming up. Remember to vote. We also have time for a write-in ballot. We think that it's about time for a change in our township. Right down from township supervisor to members of the board, with exception of the township zoning commissioner.

They say money talks and crap (to put it polite) walks. Well we're not giving up that easy and we surely are not crap.

Also several of us have and are writing letters to Congressman Davis and anyone else who is higher up and may be able to stop the destruction of our shore line and view.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Richard J. Webster

McCandless 40th

Dale & Lois McCandless

Lois and Dale McCandless of Charlevoix celebrated their 40th anniversary with a trip down the Mississippi River on the Steam-boat "Delta Queen."

They were married Sept. 20, 1952 in Ellwood City, PA.

Dale is Quality Control Supt. at Medusa Cement Co. of Charlevoix. Lois is an R.N. retired.

The couple has two children: Darcy of Grand Rapids, Curt and wife, Annette and grandson, Leland of Waterford.

They are members of Cross of Christ Lutheran Church of Petoskey and enjoy gardening and traveling.

Fund formed to help "Ros"

Popular school bus driver Rosalyn Stump is taking an extended medical leave of absence from her position as bus driver. She is battling cancer, after undergoing two mastectomies. Stump's friends Bruce Hamilton and Jan Biddick have set up a trust fund for Stump at the First State Bank of Charlevoix. Because Stump is no longer working, the fund will help pay for her $175 a month insurance premiums. Stump must undergo chemotherapy treatment once a week for a year, and probably will not be able to return to her job during that time. She has moved to Petoskey to be closer to Northern Michigan Hospitals, where she is undergoing treatment. Anyone wishing to help Rosalyn Stump may contribute to the fund at the First State Bank. All money will go straight to her Blue Cross insurance premiums.

Plant employees begin wellness campaign

Employees at Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point plant have begun a health campaign that will benefit both employees and the area's needy people.

The wellness campaign involves a weight-loss program and the 59 participants have pledged to donate a pound of food for every pound of body weight lost. The food will then be donated to charity.

"The weight loss goals set by employees average 12.5 pounds per person," said Jennifer Lampman, a senior licensing specialist at the plant and program chairwoman. "If everyone reaches, or comes close to their goal, we will donate over 700 pounds of food just in time for the Thanksgiving holiday."

Lampman said some teams are also pledging cash per poundage lost. Proceeds will also be donated to charity.

"Everyone participating in the program felt that since we will be helping ourselves by losing weight and exercising more, we should also look outside the plant and try to help others in the process," said Lampman.

The eight-week program is sponsored by the plant's Wellness Committee and encourages friendly competition between employees. Participants have formed teams to monitor caloric consumption and exercise together. The winning team will be decided on total points awarded for weight loss and exercise performed.

The final weigh in will be Nov. 6, 1992.

St. Mary's art fund established

The family of Monica McHugh Miller, 73, who died April 27, 1992, in Santee, Calif., has established an Art Fund for St. Mary's School. McHugh's parents, the late Donald McHugh and Alice Madill McHugh, long-time residents of Charlevoix and involved parishioners of St. Mary's Parish, instilled a love of art in their daughter.

The family (three children: William W. White III, James A. White and Majel White Wrasik; and four sisters: Margaret McHugh Gregory, Alice McHugh Maher, Anne McHugh Cagney and Kathleen McHugh Drizick) has asked that foundations made in Monica McHugh Miller's memory be made to St. Mary's School.

BEACONS

by REV. LOWELL ANDERSON

The Holy Spirit does not come into the life of a Christian to merely ENHANCE that life by His influence, but to EXCHANGE that life with His own! That's the essence of the Apostle Paul's statement in Galatians 2:20, "I have been crucified with Christ and I NO LONGER LIVE BUT CHRIST LIVES IN ME. The life I live in the body, I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me."

Many Christians struggle trying to live an effective Christian lifestyle. Even though they have had a life-changing EXPERIENCE with Christ, having an on-going change in lifestyle is often difficult and joyless. Serving Christ for them is not the exciting adventure it is for so many others. This is the case because they are trying to accomplish in their own strength what only the Holy Spirit can do.

The Christian life is not a self-improvement project in which the Holy Spirit comes to help. The purpose of God is that we "die to self" (even self-improvement) in order that He might do in us what we could not possible ever do ourselves.

Stop trying to live the Christian life in your own strength. No matter how hard you try you will not succeed... because you can't. The righteousness God requires is the righteousness of Christ Himself. The good news is that what God requires, He provides. It is for that very purpose that the Holy Spirit indwells a Christian.

The Holy Spirit, sometimes referred to in the Bible as the "Spirit of Christ", will exchange your weakness for His strength; your sinfulness for His righteousness; your life for His own. Then you too can say, "I no longer live, but Christ lives in me!"

(Rev. Lowell Anderson is pastor of the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Anderson and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

...court time is no thrill for police officers

ing the day to sign the warrant. Halverson said that one item is probably the greatest creator of overtime in the City Police Department.

The Sheriff's Department faces a similar situation. Lasater and Halverson noted that the local district court does work with the police department to minimize the problem. For example in scheduling hearings, the court office requests a copy of the sheriff's department work schedule so that when possible they can schedule hearings at times when the officer is on duty.

Another problem which can occur is when a case involves more than one officer. That can stretch thin a small department such as the City Police. Halverson said that in one recent case, he and three other officers were called into court four times. That left only two City Police officers - one was on the road and one was in bed resting up for the next shift.

Lasater also said that it's not uncommon to have three or four officers tied up on a single case. He said a major case is likely to involve the officer or officers who initially respond, an evidence officer and an accident reconstruction officer. All of them could end up being subpoenaed if the case goes to court.

Halverson noted, "If I have a major crime, I have to keep in mind who's there. It could be everybody." In order to avoid having his whole department tied up in court, one of the things Halverson does is try to have one officer handle a case, rather than having the whole department involved.

The Sheriff and Police Chief both agree that going to court is not a favorite activity for police officers. Halverson said officers often view it as down time and the sitting around waiting can be frustrating and the testifying stressful. Lasater said that in a major trial, an officer who is going to testify will often be a sequestered witness and kept out of the court room. He said that there have been occasions where he's been sequestered for four to six hours.

The most frustrating situation for officers is when they show up in court and for one reason or another the hearing or trial is cancelled or postponed at the last minute. "They're all dressed up and all of the sudden, they've got no place to go," Lasater said.

In addition to local court time, officers are occasionally called to court in other counties. That happens approximately half a dozen times a year. For example, earlier the sheriff's department had officers called to Emmet County for the Raymond-Thacker (the Camp Pellston escapee) case.

Halverson and Lasater also both said that the amount of time officers spend in court is increasing. Solutions to the problems caused by that situation are something that remain to be found.

"You can't schedule around court," Halverson said. "You just gotta do it."

Country Customs expands shop

By Laurie Lounsbury

A 100-year-old home will see many changes during the course of its lifetime. The home that houses Country Customs is a good example of that. Andrea Mathews, owner of Country Customs, is expanding her business in size and in the items she will be offering.

Country Customs will be expanding to the second floor of the cozy old Victorian home. Mathews will have a larger Christmas room, a room for ladies' apparel, and a room devoted to Christian books and gift items.

"I'm the most excited about being able to offer Christian books to the community. No one else is doing that," Mathews said.

Mathews will feature hand-made and hand-decorated apparel in her women's apparel room. She has made prairie style denim skirts and vests, along with hand-made belts and accessories. Mathews also offers hand-painted tee shirts and leggings, hand-made by area women. Some of her hand made items, such as scarves with matching earrings, come from women running cottage industries in other parts of the country. "I try to find cottage industry people," Mathews explained.

The first floor of Country Customs will continue to offer an array of both hand-crafted items and unique items. Mathews carries brass candlesticks, pottery, a large selection of sewing and quilting fabrics, stencils and paints. She makes custom curtains and valances, personalized baby bibs, place-mats and napkins, and throw pillows. Her fabric lampshades are a popular item, along with her hand-made cloth angels. "I look at myself as the old fashioned mercantile that the town people used to go to for just about anything," Mathews said.

Mathews will be having a grand opening for her expanded business Oct. 9th and 10th. For the first 25 customers each day, she will be giving away handmade apparel pins. All customers can register to win a gift certificate. Mathews will give away three gift certificates, in the amount of $30, $20, and $10. The business will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. both days.

BUSINESS

Andrea Mathews of Country Customs takes a rest from organizing the recently expanded display space in the upstairs of her shop.

Chamber seminar helps small business compete with mass merchandisers

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with several other area chambers of commerce will be sponsoring a seminar entitled "When Wal-Mart Comes To Town" - How To Co-exist with mass merchandisers. The seminar will take place from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 15 in the cafeteria at North Central Michigan College. Advance tickets (purchased on or before Oct. 9) are $10 for chamber members and $20 for nonchamber members. All tickets at the door will cost $20.

Dr. Kenneth Stone, Professor of Economics and Extension Economist from Iowa State University will be the seminar's featured speaker. The program will be presented in four parts: An overview of the Wal-Mart Company and other mass merchandisers; A look at the impact of a large retailer on local market areas; a look at strategies for co-existing in a mass merchandising environment; a summary and question and answer period.

The seminar is geared to understanding the economic power of mass merchandisers and how existing businesses - large and small - may remain competitive. Tickets are available at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Russian dance troupe to visit Michigan

And getting them here hasn't been easy

(Editor's note: The following story was written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city council member and continues to be involved in a number of civic activities. He has long held an interest in Russia, having visited there and hosted people from there in his own home in Charlevoix. The following story concerns his latest effort toward bettering American-Russian relations.)

By Ralph McRae

Yes, the Russians are really coming to northern Michigan - ten dancers will be coming here to entertain us.

It all started in Ohio two years ago. There, an internationally known camp for young children attracted counselors from all over the world. One of them was Maxim Skalo-zobov, from Kazan, Russia, 8,000 miles away. Kazan is a city of 1 million people located 500 miles east of Moscow. Skalo-zobov, 22, was a dancer in his father's troupe of folk and ballet dancers.

Also at the Ohio camp was Suzanne Rhodes of Clio, Michigan. She became acquainted with Skalo-zobov and last September traveled to Kazan to see the Russian dancers perform. She was very impressed and returned to the United States with the idea of bringing the Russian dance troupe to Michigan.

Last winter and this spring Rhodes attempted to promote her idea in the Flint area. She found numerous organizations that wanted to see the dancers, but none that were willing to fund the performance. Rhodes heard through a friend that there was a lady in Rogers City who had for many summers brought Soviet teachers to attend a writers' training course. The lady in Rogers City happened to be Marylu Ikens, the wife of this writer's nephew and the daughter of Charlevoix resident Polle VerWys.

Ikens, knowing of my interest in Russian exchanges suggested that I contact Rhodes. So, since early last May, I have been very involved in making arrangements to bring ten dancers to this area. Had the dancers been living in Western Europe, the project would not have been difficult.

Communication was a constant problem. In order to visit the U.S., the Russians had to have written invitations. Several organizations and individuals were asked to sponsor the Russian dancers. Valuable time was lost waiting for various boards to respond to the request.

Rhodes and Skalo-zobov found three businessmen who agreed to pay for the round trip airfare to New York City. Initially, the Russian dancers were to arrive in August, but then they were advised that indoor entertainment might do better later in the year rather than during the summer. The arrival was postponed to early October.

Enter Roger Srigley and his Creative Marketing Concepts company. There were many arrangements to be made and professional guidance was needed. The Petoskey Ballet Theatre, headed by Toni Moriarty and Theresa Rumsey also became involved.

We were now in business. Programs had to be planned, locations confirmed and a schedule of appearances finalized. Prospects for the tour were looking good. Things were falling into place and budget figures were being finalized.

Then came a terrific blow to our plans and for a while it appeared that everything was going down the drain. The three businessmen withdrew their financial support. If we were to continue, we would have to assume all of the financial responsibilities. There were a few hours of frustration, confusion and hesitation. For a few days the project was put on hold. It seems the Russian supporters could not come up with all the rubles they needed. The value of rubles had decreased requiring more of them for airfare.

We were slowed down, but not stopped. If we could get the airfares low enough, we could keep on going. More than a dozen airlines were contacted. Many calls to Russia were made. Political assistance was requested and various cultural exchange agencies were approached. Finally, an affordable round trip airfare price was found. It was obtained through a little known travel club in New York City.

On Sept. 30, money was wired to a bank for the purchase of 10 round trip tickets. Suddenly, the cost went up 100 percent. We had to determine how to recoup that cost. That cost will be covered through modest admission prices.

ONE OF THE REASONS WE CALL THEM SMART BUSINESS LOANS.

When Tim Burden wanted a line of credit for his Traverse City construction specialty company,

Scot MacDonald, Senior Vice President, First of America

Scot MacDonald helped with a First of America Smart Business Loan. Because smart business owners know the time has never been better to take advantage of low interest rates. And they're making their move.

First of America understands that by helping businesses succeed, we help the economy and the community. Burden Group, for example, will now be able to take on a multimillion dollar renovation job in Cleveland, which means more local jobs. And we can't measure the value of that investment in monetary terms alone.

Since the beginning of the year, we've loaned $600 million through our Smart Business Loan program. And we're ready to lend even more in the next few months.

First of America has always had a philosophy of supporting the communities we serve. So we work hard at providing competitive, customized commercial loan packages to local businesses.

If you think your business could benefit from a Smart Business Loan, call any of our First of America Bank offices listed below. You'll find our Smart Business Loans can give you a way to get things moving.

petition would be complete without an unvarnished taste test, to determine which apple is the best for eating right out of the bushel. During the interview process, the judges will also consider other redeeming attributes of the apples, such as the ability to keep well, the ability to remain in slice formation in a pie, and of course the bruiseability of the apple.

In the interest of moving this pageant right along, we will proceed right to our ten finalists and they are, in no particular order: The Macintosh, Wolf River, Red Delicious, Yellow Delicious, Spartan, Northern Spy, Jonathon, Ida Red, Empire, and the Crispin, also known as the Mutsu.

At the onset of the Apple Pageant, the pageant committee was immediately faced with a moral dilemma: Should the Mutsu be permitted to enter the competition? The Mutsu tried to enter the pageant under the assumed name of Crispin. The Crispin is grown in northern Michigan, which would give it the qualifications necessary to be a contestant. However, the committee soon found out that the Crispin's real name is the Mutsu, and it is Japanese in origin. The Mutsu's parentage is Yellow Delicious on its mother's side and Indo on its father's side. Mutsu is similar to the Granny Smith in size, color, and tartness. In the interest of mending fences with our Japanese competitors, the committee ruled that since the Mutsu is half-American and grows right here in Michigan, it should be allowed into the pageant.

The committee must also bring to light the information that Master of Ceremonies Knight admitted that he has ties to three of the contestants, the Macintosh, the Red Delicious, and the Ida Red. He acknowledged that he has personally grown and picked those three apples. In a revealing quote, Knight said, "Ida Red is a sleeper. She's great to take south for a winter vacation." We hope that Knight's personal involvement with those apples won't affect the judges' decision.

To begin the Pageant, we will introduce you to some of our top contestants.

Miss Yellow Delicious: The Yellow Delicious swept the eating competition. Clayton Smith said of the Yellow Delicious, "I'm getting old, so I can't eat 'em anymore, but when I could, the Yellow Delicious was my favorite, as long as they're mature. They need lots of sun in September and October to mature properly and get their maiden blush. And they're good for apple sauce." If the sun didn't do it, we're sure that Smith's flattering remarks put the maiden blush on Miss Yellow Delicious. On the other hand, Knight said of the yellow Delicious, "Personally, I think she's a lightweight. It's a one dimensional apple, and too sweet."

Miss Red Delicious: Some judges liked the Red Delicious in the eating competition as well as the evening glow competition. The Red Delicious won the evening glow competition hands down, Smith said, "You need cool nights like we've had to put color and finish on an apple." Knight liked the Red Delicious for snacking and for beauty. "The Red Delicious has a refreshing sense to it," Knight said during the eating competition. "The depth of color and the classic shape make it a beauty," Knight also said of the Red Delicious.

Miss Northern Spy: The Northern Spy won the talent competition as the best baking purpose apple. She didn't fare nearly as well in the beauty category. Judge Rita Williams said, "It's a hard winter apple. Not bright red, sort of grayish, with a slight pink blush. She's an old timer apple." Smith liked the Northern Spy for baking too, but said, "It's subject to bruising and hard to store." Knight concurred.

...area apples diverse in their virtues saying that the Northern Spy was for people with "discriminating tastes."

Miss Macintosh: While the Macintosh didn't win any individual categories, it scored very well overall. We know that the Macintosh has a good business head on her. She outsells all other apples five to one.

Miss Ida Red: Ida Red was favored by Judges Friske and Williams, and of course our Master of Ceremonies Knight. Everyone agreed that Ida Red has good flavor, she bakes well, and is also quite attractive. Ida's most endearing quality seems to be that she won't go rotten on you in a root cellar or garage. Ida will stay faithfully fruity and nice for months. She's popular with the vacationers that head for southern parts of the country because she can be stored for months, providing a taste of Michigan to folks wintering far from home.

Miss Wolf River: Wolf River probably made it to the finals only because she's a sentimental, local favorite. Her size is enormous. While size shouldn't really matter, it's what's inside that counts. Wolf River's size is a redeeming quality to pie bakers. You only have to peel a couple of Wolf Rivers to make a nice size pie.

The judges have made their decision: Miss Jonathon Apple was chosen as Miss Congeniality, probably because of Knight's comment, "I like the Jonathon for cooking. It brings the right balance in fancy pies and pastries. Not just any apple can do that." Miss Mutsu was chosen as the most promising young apple, and was strongly backed by judges King and Friske.

And now, for the moment you've been waiting for. The first runner up is Miss Yellow Delicious, and our Applefest Pageant winner is Miss Ida Red. Master of Ceremonies Dave Knight concludes the Pageant with the parting remark, "I've always been an Ida Red man."

Gallons and gallons of cider will be sold at this weekend's Apple Fest.

advertising in program brochures and contributions from art patrons.

The dancers are now scheduled to arrive in Petoskey Oct. 15. To save money, they will come by bus to Detroit and then be loaded into vans provided by a Charlevoix car dealer.

As of Oct. 5 performances have been arranged for Petoskey, Cheboygan, Sault St. Marie and Charlevoix. Charlevoix will host the dancers during the first week of November. The dancers will also be appearing in Alpena, Mount Pleasant and Traverse City. Community colleges will participate in five of the cities.

Five families in each town will house the dancers and furnish breakfast. Service clubs, churches, schools etc. are being sought to host lunches and dinner parties. The guests will be anxious to tell about their homeland, the once threatening country of the Soviet Union.

Any Charlevoix people willing to help in any way are asked to call Roger Srigley of Creative Marketing Concepts at 348-3990.

Basketball team beaten 41-38

By L. Scott Swanson

Charlevoix's girls' basketball team traveled to East Jordan Thursday hoping to win, but destined to Looze. Looze as in Danielle Looze, the East Jordan senior who scored 23 points, grabbed 11 rebounds, blocked four shots and keyed the Red Devil defense in leading East Jordan to a 41-38 win.

Two years ago when she was a tall sophomore with unpolished basketball skills, Looze was a general nuisance for the Rayders and other opponents. Now, she's thrown better coordination, good hands, aggressiveness, court awareness and a variety of shots into her game and just become an outright burden to the opposition. And what problems Looze doesn't cause for opponents, East Jordan's other forward, Katy Malpass does. Malpass had 15 points and 11 rebounds against the Rayders. Looze and Malpass combined for 38 of East Jordan's 41 points.

Charlevoix played an inconsistent game against East Jordan. The Rayders opened like a house afire, taking a 7-2 lead in the opening minutes and leading 11-6 at the end of the first quarter. The second quarter killed the Rayders. Although they played tolerable defense, their offense more than compensated for it. Charlevoix scored only two points in the quarter. East Jordan was playing an aggressive man-to-man defense. Charlevoix attempted to beat it by making hard cuts to the basket. Although the cutters frequently came open, passes were either no shows or late arriving. Even when the Rayders did get the shots they wanted, the shots weren't falling in the basket.

Meanwhile, at the other end of the court, East Jordan was doing just enough offensively to catch and overtake the Rayders. Looze hit three baskets to close the half. On the first, she took an inbounds pass and hit a James "Buddah" Edwards baseline fade over a Charlevoix defender. On the second, she drove hard to her right, stopped and popped a short jump shot. And on the third, she faked a shot near the top of the key, dribbled a step to the right past the defender and hit from just above the free throw line. The half ended with Charlevoix trailing 16-13.

In the second half, Charlevoix applied a tenacious full-court press. When it was effective, the press forced East Jordan to hurry the ball up the floor and shoot before Looze and Malpass got a chance to set up for a higher percentage shot. Charlevoix brought in juniors Jamie Doan, Becky Bragg and Carrie Wakulat to give them some quickness on the press. Charlevoix fared best when the game's pace was kept frantic.

Offensively, Charlevoix improved from the second quarter, but remained somewhat listless and out-of-synch in the third quarter.

Early in the fourth quarter, East Jordan stretched its lead to 13 points, but Charlevoix then launched one last ditch come-back attempt. With 56 seconds left to play, Marianne Pfister was fouled while making a basket and then made the free throw to pull the Rayders to within four points of the Red Devils. East Jordan answered with a basket, but with 24 seconds left to play, Charlevoix again got within four, this time on two free throws by Liz Grunch. But for the Rayders, the game just wasn't to be theirs. East Jordan ran out the clock and held on for the win.

Individually for Charlevoix, Grunch led the team with 16 points while Pfister added 11. Wakulat came off the bench in the second half to do some nice defensive work on the press. The loss dropped Charlevoix's season record to 3-2 in league play and 4-5 overall.

Charlevoix won the junior varsity game 40-37. Jill Dreyer led Charlevoix in scoring with a dozen points while Kris Blanchard added eight. For East Jordan, Kristina Rhuling had 15 points and Mandy Reid, 12.

Charlevoix's next game will be Thursday, Oct. 8 at Harbor Springs.

Liz Grunch works past East Jordan defender Danielle Looze. Grunch, a sophomore, led the Rayders with 15 points while Looze led East Jordan with 23.

A collection of awards, accomplishments and interesting events in the lives of Charlevoix people.

Charlevoix people who watch the TV show "The Wonder Years" this Wednesday evening may recognize a familiar face: Michael Horton, a Charlevoix native who graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1986, has a role as an extra in the Oct. 7 episode of the show. The episode involves a wedding. The half-hour episode took six 15-hour days to film, the first five at Warner Brothers Studio in Burbank, California and the remainder at a church.

Horton is not looking for acting jobs, but has an agency representing him for modeling jobs. His agent called him about "The Wonder Years" part. Horton has been living in Los Angeles since June of this year and is hoping to get into modeling and design.

He was also offered a role in a music video, but other commitments kept him from accepting.

Horton is the son of Howard and Rosemary Horton of Charlevoix.

Elizabeth Mosher of Charlevoix recently took third place honors in AAA Michigan's 12th annual "Zero-Proof Mix-Off" in Detroit. "Madrigal Mist" earned Mosher $150 in the nonalcoholic drink contest, which was won by Janet Mast Boerema of Kentwood. Mosher was assisted in the contest by her daughter, Melissa Mosher. This year's contest theme was "The Twelve Days of Christmas." Recipes from the 20 finalists will be included in the "Great Pretenders Party Guide," to be distributed free statewide in December. The contest and guide are part of AAA Michigan's alcohol awareness campaign during the Christmas and New Year's holiday.

Chamber recognizes industry's importance

Manufacturing plays a much greater role in Charlevoix County's economy than most people realize according to Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Executive Director, Jacqueline Merta. There are several statistics that verify the integral role of industry's contribution to the growth and economic well-being of the community.

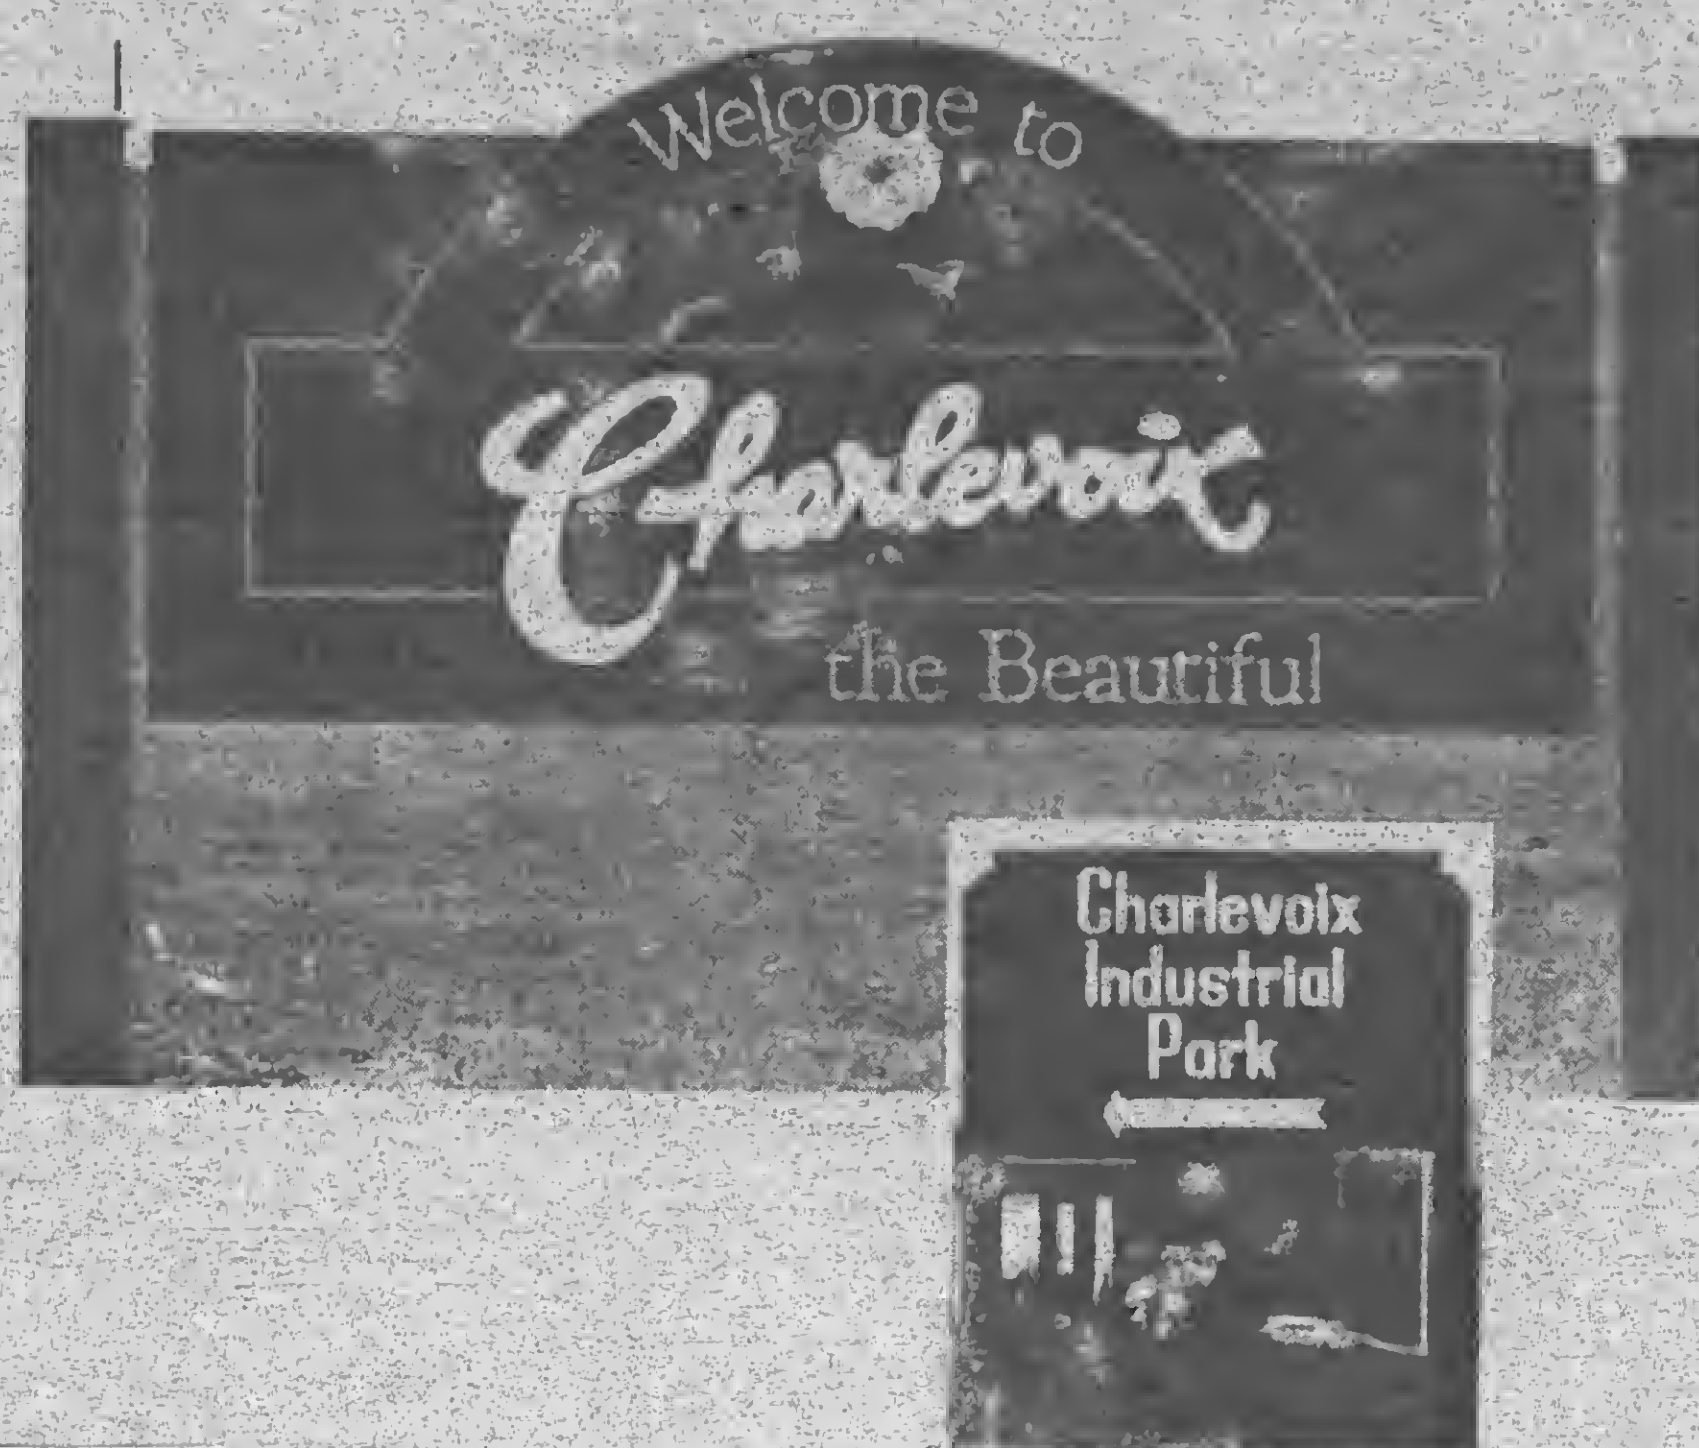

Charlevoix County ranks 18th among state counties in the percentage of tax dollars created by its industrial tax base. Charlevoix County's rate is 8 percent compared to neighboring Emmet County at 1.5 percent and Grand Traverse County at 1.8 percent.

Manufacturing jobs in Charlevoix County, according to 1989 statistics, totalled about 2,669 positions or 26 percent of the job base. The state average is 21 percent.

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township have established a joint committee to study, seek and promote industrial development and expansion in the Charlevoix Area.

Fair showcases Charlevoix area industry

Sure northern Michigan is blessed with a great deal of natural beauty. But it's not like those of us who live here just sit around all the time and admire the scenery. We work for a living. We are hard working and industrious people and proud to be that way. Our industry takes a number of different shapes and forms.

Local residents and visitors to the community will all have an opportunity to take a closer look at the industry of the Charlevoix County area during the 1992 Charlevoix Industrial Fair Oct. 9 and 10 in the Charlevoix High School gym. The 1992 industrial fair will be the fifth since 1984. The last one took place in 1990. Charlevoix County State Bank sponsors the industrial fair. Bank Vice President LoAnne Brown and President Francis Flanders organize and coordinate the event. The bank foots the bill so there are no exhibitor fees. The fair is simply an opportunity for area industries to show the world just what it is they do.

Between 1,500 and 2,000 people are expected to view the exhibits. A great deal of emphasis is put on the educational value of the show. On Friday, the vast majority of people attending the show are students from Charlevoix High School and several other area school districts. Brown notes that it's important for high school students who aren't planning to go to college that there are jobs available in northern Michigan. And regardless of whether the students plan to conclude or continue their formal education following high school, the industrial fair offers them insight into the types of skills they are going to need in the world of industry.

The fair is intentionally scheduled on the same weekend as the Apple Festival to give visitors an opportunity to see local industry. Brown has also sent invitations to several political candidates. "I think it's important for them to realize that in northern Michigan we have something more than the fall colors and tourists in the summer," she says.

Local workers and industrialists get a chance to both see what they produce and also what other area manufacturers produce. From the workers' perspective it gives them a chance to show their family and friends the end product of their labors. Approximately 1,700 local jobs will be represented by the industries at the show. From a company standpoint, local companies sometimes find that rather than ordering something from out of the area, there may be suppliers here who can meet their needs.

Brown noted that although the primary focus of the fair is educational, rather than sales it is hoped that the fair will attract additional industry to the area.

Volunteer firemen from the Charlevoix City Fire Department will help exhibitors set up and disassemble exhibits. Bank employees will be staffing the show.

In behalf of the entire Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce membership and its Board of Directors, we wish to extend Special Thanks to LoAnne Brown, Francis Flanders and the Charlevoix County State Bank for developing and organizing the Charlevoix County Industrial Fair.

We, the business and industry organization of the Charlevoix area, SALUTE Charlevoix County Industries and their contribution to the growth and economic well being of the county.

"THANK YOU" for providing:

- Year Around Jobs
- Increased Tax Base
- Community Pride
- Involvement in Community Activities
- A Good Neighbor Atmosphere
- New Payroll Dollars to Circulate in the County

Key Controls makes machinery manageable

There's nothing worse than a machine which seems to have a mind of its own. Key Controls is a local manufacturer that designs, engineers and constructs programmable controllers and control panels that allow humans to master machinery.

Walt Hufford and Ted Felter formed a partnership and founded Key Controls in 1989. Hufford says that in its early years, the company is off to a strong start and is growing. The company has worked on projects throughout northern lower Michigan and into the Upper Peninsula. Currently, they are working on a control panel for the street light system in downtown Elk Rapids.

Key Controls is a general contractor, but emphasizes industrial and commercial work. Much of the company's work involves developing control systems for special machinery needed for a specific task.

Hufford feels that in years to come the business will grow toward energy management and process controls for industrial and commercial businesses. That will involve designing and installing control systems which allow businesses to make more efficient use of heating and cooling systems.

Key Controls will have a computer and controller apparatus set up for display at the Industrial Fair.

Viatec: making stainless tanks for all the world

Of all the industrial products manufactured in Charlevoix County, those from Viatec may enjoy the broadest variety of uses and the most extensive geographic range.

Viatec specializes in the manufacture of stainless steel tanks, pressure vessels and other related equipment.

Its plant, along US 31 on Charlevoix's north edge was built in 1950. It has been expanded periodically since that time, the last major project adding 2500 square feet.

It now covers 54,000 square feet and employs 25, almost all of whom live in the surrounding area, with the exception being Ron Timmer, the general manager of both the Charlevoix and Belding plants.

Viatec not only supplies equipment to the country's largest corporations (Dow Chemical, DuPont, Borden, Oscar Mayer, Kodak, Gillette, Eli Lilly, Coca-Cola, Miller Brewing, Mobil Oil, just to name a few) but also ships internationally.

It has serviced customers from 40 countries worldwide, including tanks to the new McDonalds in Moscow.

The list of applications for Viatec products is almost endless. Some of the industries that use Viatec manufactured equipment include: chemical, food, meat packing, textile, paint, photographic, toiletries, tobacco, perfume, pharmaceutical, beverage, wine-making, liquor, brewing, paper, petroleum, transportation, cosmetic, soap and detergent and citrus.

The Charlevoix plant has also supplied several major American universities with specially designed stainless steel equipment for laboratory research.

For local residents, however, probably the most memorable application of a Viatec product was in the bicentennial year of 1976 when it was a specially made Viatec stainless steel pie tin, 14 feet across and weighing 3,700 pounds, that made possible the baking of what was then the "World's Largest Cherry Pie," a feat noted by the Guinness Book of World Records.

Charlevoix Hospital: Keeping people on the job

To keep employees on the job and productive, companies are turning more and more to occupational therapy. This has caused an upsurge of the number of patients being treated in Charlevoix Area Hospital's occupational therapy lab.

Susan Roache, occupational therapist, says, "Today's employer is more concerned about his or her employees. They are interested in a more productive work environment which allows them to be more competitive and keep workers longer." Although treatment following illness or injury is still a big part of occupational therapy, there is a growing emphasis on prevention.

"We go to the job site with a video camera and learn what body mechanics are needed for particular jobs," says Roache, "then we can adapt the work environment to meet the individual's body size and abilities." Roache says business management is more receptive to this close scrutiny than in the past, mostly because of the desire to avoid high workers compensation costs. "Companies are trying to avoid 'cumulative trauma' injuries," she says. These are injuries to the body caused by the repeated use of certain muscles or joints.

Occupational therapy involves the strengthening of the upper body and fine muscle coordination such as in the fingers. In cases where an employee has experienced injury due to this repetitive type of work, occupational therapists can work with both the employee and the employer to change the work environment. The employee is given exercises that are pertinent to his or her work and the muscles are strengthened to achieve better endurance. At the same time, the job site and work flow can be redesigned so that the worker doesn't experience overuse of the muscles and joints again.

Roache, who is a graduate of Wayne State University, has contracted with Charlevoix Area Hospital for the past 10 years to provide occupational therapy. "Over the past year we have seen a 30 percent increase in the number of patients seen," she says.

Patients receiving therapy also include those who are learning to live with such disabling conditions as stroke, tendonitis, multiple sclerosis, Parkinson's disease, or who are recovering from surgery for joint replacement, hand surgery, or carpal tunnel syndrome. Four weeks is the minimum time for therapy. "We often train patients to use their hands for work duties or for their own personal needs such as bathing and dressing," Roache says. "We provide whatever therapy is required to get them back to a productive and self-sufficient life."

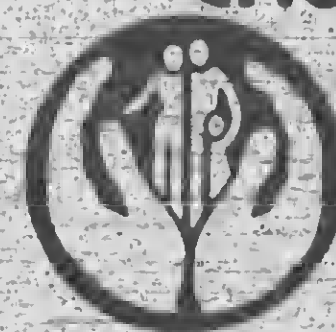

Occupational Therapist Susan Roache of Charlevoix Area Hospital works with Scott Golovich who is recovering from Guillen Barre Syndrom.

How Can You Reduce Lost-time Injuries?

- Employee instruction in back injury prevention
- Work-hardening therapy for employees suffering from on-the-job or overuse injuries
- Work station analysis to prevent injuries

Charlevoix Area Hospital's Physical Therapy Department can help you keep employees on the job and cut workmen's comp claims. Call for further information.

Ionex: providing vacuum furnaces for the world and heat treating for local industries

Ionex Inc. is a Charlevoix industry which has two facets, one targeting area industry and another serving customers around the world.

When Jim Barnard founded Ionex in 1989, he envisioned the plant providing heat treating services for area industries. Specifically he wanted to provide ion-nitriding services to area plants. Ion nitriding is a technique which allows pieces of equipment to be specially hardened in a vacuum furnace. The end result of the process is that the equipment treated is hardened and made more durable; therefore it lasts longer and requires less maintenance.

Vacuum heat treating for local industries is a growing part of the Ionex business. The company now has two heat treating furnaces up and running and hopes to have a third ready within the next few months.

Heat treating service would already be a larger part of the plant's operation, had not the other half of the plant's production been so successful in recent years. In addition to heat treating, Ionex manufactures high temperature vacuum furnace equipment for industries throughout the world. Some of the customers which work with the little plant on Charlevoix's Carpenter Street include: Heraeus, a large German company with its American headquarters in Chandler, Arizona; the Mexican Government Research Institute; the Taiwanese government; Korean Manufacturer Ssang-Yong; and a U.S. Navy sponsored technological group working at the University of Pittsburgh.

Shortly after Ionex was founded, Barnard said of the company's national and international customers, "They're finding us. In any industry, the world is small. In less than a year, we have built a strong reputation."

Despite the international success designing and constructing vacuum furnaces, Barnard and the approximately 20 employees of Ionex haven't lost sight of the need for heat treating services in northern Michigan. Consequently, that is something they are currently emphasizing at the plant and will be emphasizing in their exhibit at the 1992 Industrial Fair.

Harbor Industries: Putting products on display

Harbor Industries is one of the largest full service manufacturers of permanent and semi permanent display fixtures in the United States. Facilities in Charlevoix, Grand Haven and Los Angeles, CA give the company a total of more than 400,000 square feet of manufacturing and warehousing space. Harbor Industries has regional sales offices throughout the United States and ships more than 100,000 display fixtures each year nationwide and abroad.

Harbor Industries' Charlevoix plant was originally known as Freedman Aircraft and was Charlevoix's first manufacturing entity. In 1981, Harbor Industries merged with Freedman Aircraft, at the time an innovative leader in display cases, particularly for greeting cards. The merger brought together businesses which had paralleled each other for more than 30 years. Freedman Aircraft had specialized in wood products while Harbor Industries was moving into extensive use of plastics and metals.

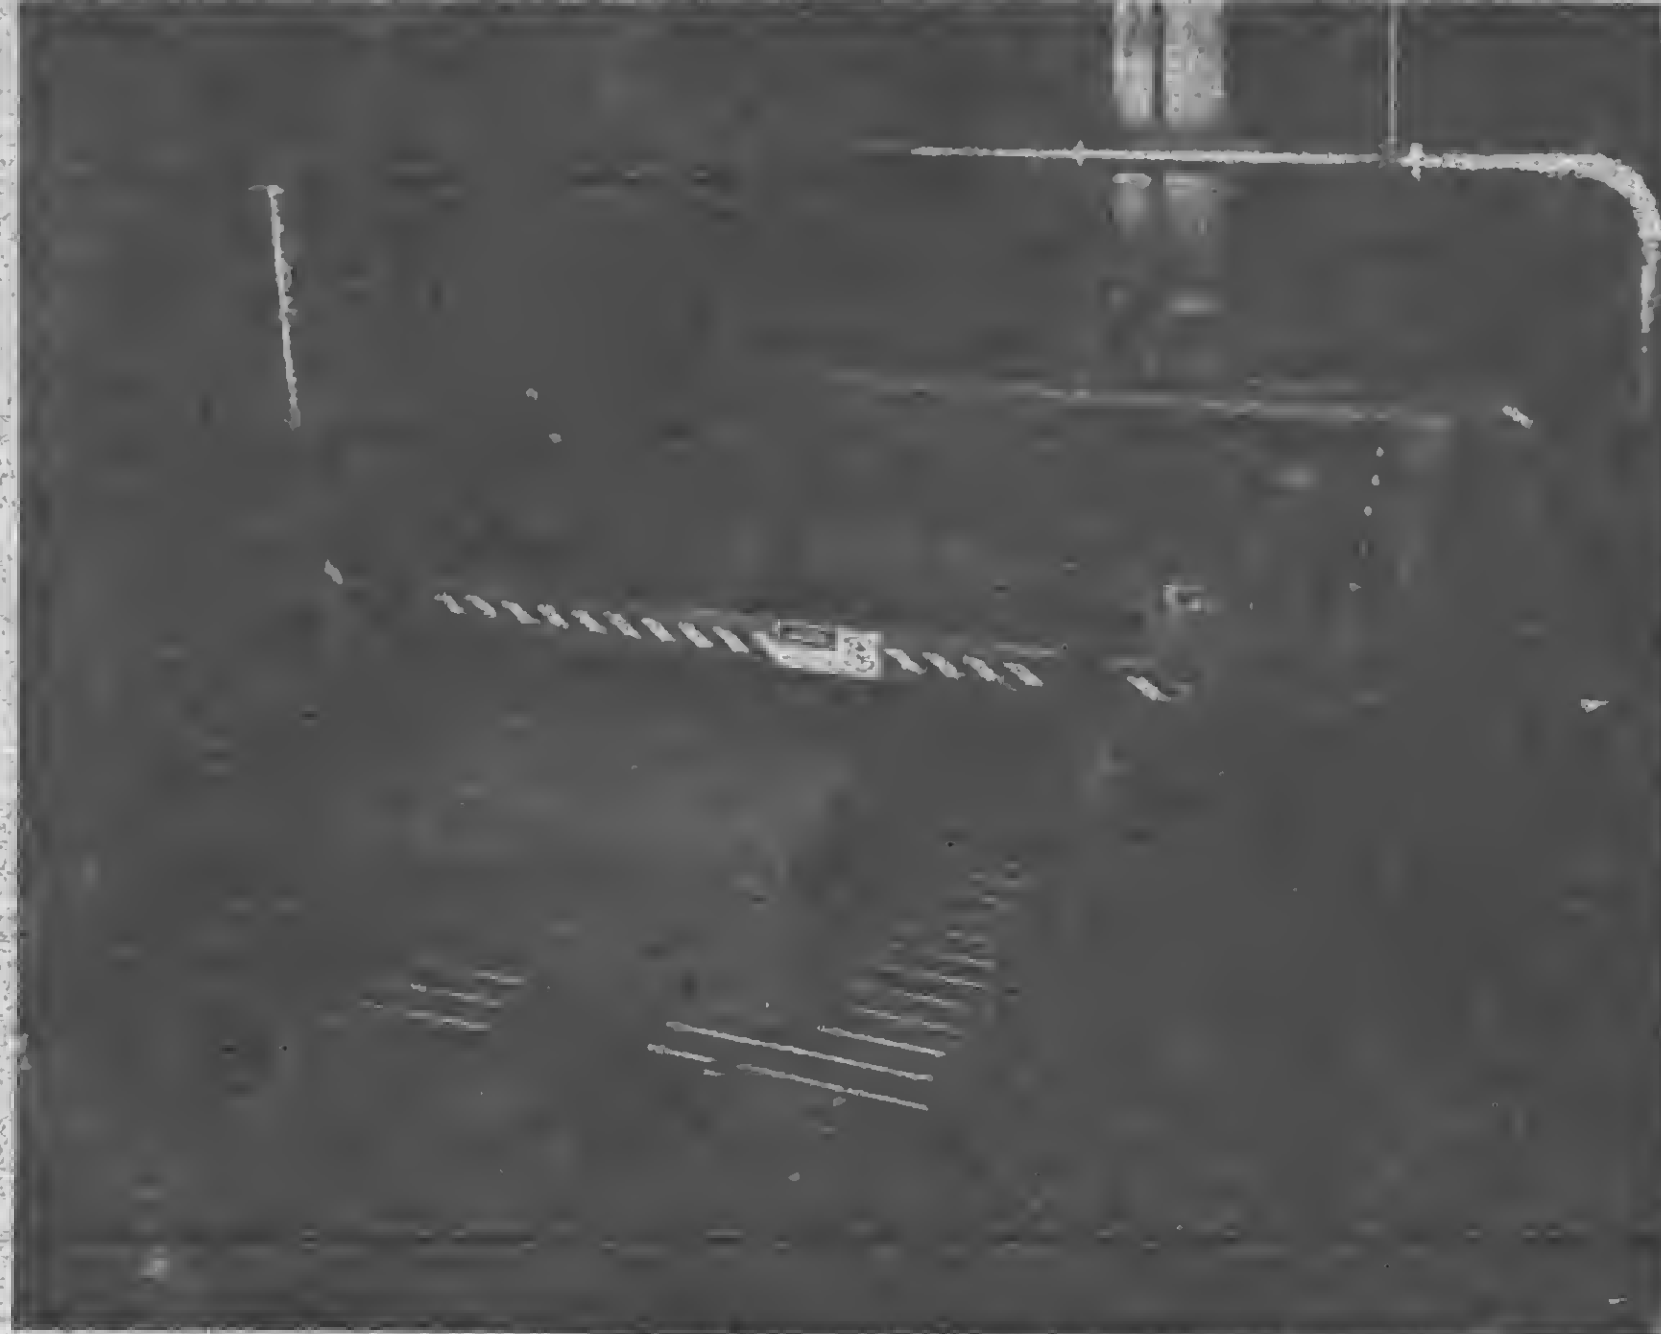

Moving into the '90s, Harbor Industries' modern facilities house state-of-the-art automated equipment for wood, wire, metal and vacuum-formed plastics. In addition to recent office remodeling and cafeteria improvements, the Charlevoix plant has in the last year installed several innovative production machines. Several of them are numerically controlled which increases both production volume and accuracy. A roll-stock laminator was also installed which increased the plant's volume potential capabilities, giving shorter lead times, lower costs and offering more jobs to the area.

Harbor Industries is primarily a woodworking facility with departments including wood fabricating, assembling, finishing, packing and shipping. It is a full service company, from concept and design of a new display to the manufacturing and delivery to the customer.

From greeting card display racks to electronic touch tone control display showcases for General Electric products, cigarette displays for Phillip Morris, camcorder displays for Wal-Mart, wallpaper displays for Borden and pet food displays for Hills Pet, Harbor Industries designs units to enhance the presentation of any product.

Combining engineering skills and tradition has brought growth to the Charlevoix plant. In addition to the companies mentioned above, other major accounts include: Gibson Greeting Cards, Rangaire, Sears and Technicolor/CBS Fox.

Kitchens North: Certified producers of Corian counters

Being a kitchen counter isn't easy. All day long, people put things on you. Hot things, cold things, things that scratch. It's not an easy life.

Kitchens North of Charlevoix understands the hardships a counter top faces and provides counters that area up to the challenge.

Kitchens North, located near the corner of Antrim and State Streets is installing Corian counter tops. Kitchens North has three certified Corian installers on staff. Corian is a special material made by Dupont. It allows homeowners flexibility in the configuration and design of kitchen counters and perhaps even more importantly is extremely attractive and durable.

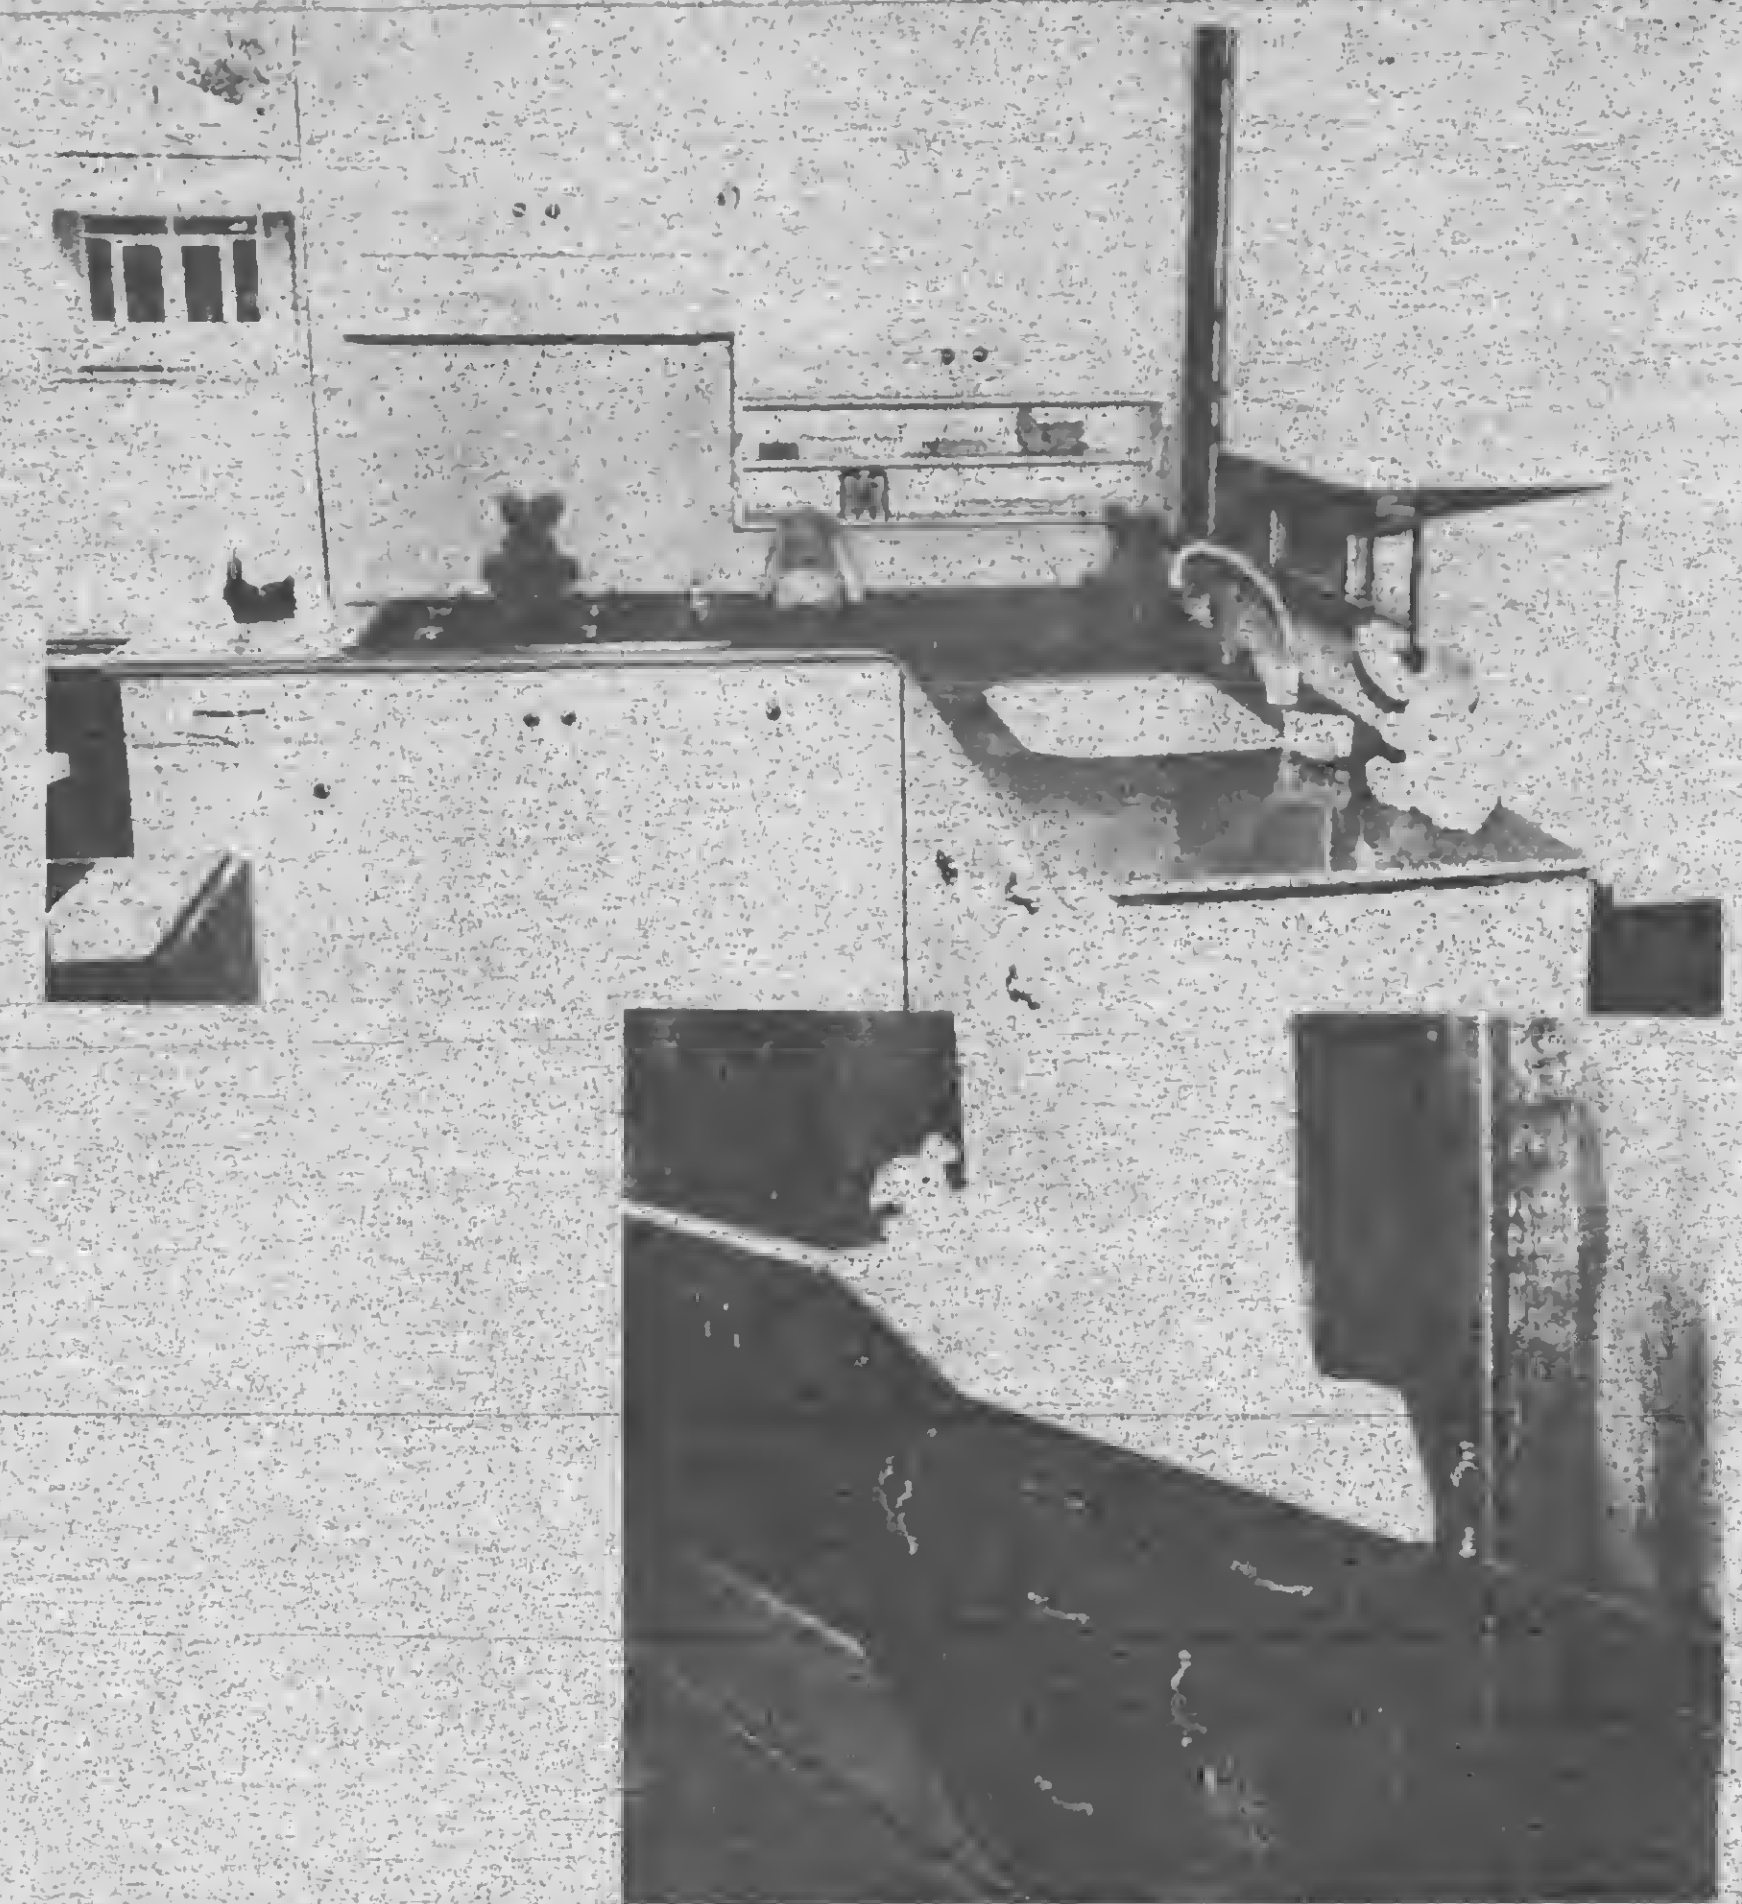

Kitchens North owner Jim Tank says that Corian not only looks good when it's new, but continues to look good. Corian is a solid piece of material which is the same color all the way through. Stains or scratches can be sanded out. Abrasive cleansers don't hurt Corian. In fact, they make it look better.

Corian, which is a blend of acrylics and natural minerals, also allows the sink bowl to be placed along the counter top where ever the homeowner wants it placed. The bowl is attached to the top by a molecular fusion process. The bowl and the shelf essentially become one piece. There is a seam, but it's almost impossible to see.

Molecular bonding also allows different color shelves to be bonded together to create custom designed counter tops.

In addition to molecular fusion, the Kitchens North staff uses high power carbide cutting tools to create custom edges for the counters.

In terms of cost, Corian is more expensive than formica, but less expensive than marble or granite. In terms of quality, it's closer to marble or granite. Dupont warranties both the material and labor for 10 years.

Medusa Cement Corporation celebrates 100 years

It was in 1967 that Medusa Cement Company started production at its South Point plant in Charlevoix Township.

The abundance in the area's geology of the natural materials needed to manufacture cement plus the ability to ship to major Midwestern markets by large lake carrier made the 1,350-acre Charlevoix location an ideal one for Medusa.

The cement produced by Medusa is known as the Portland Variety and is used primarily for road construction, block work and other large-scale building projects.

The plant has a production capacity of 1,364,000 tons of cement from its kiln process and 1,360,000 tons of clinker on the grinder end.

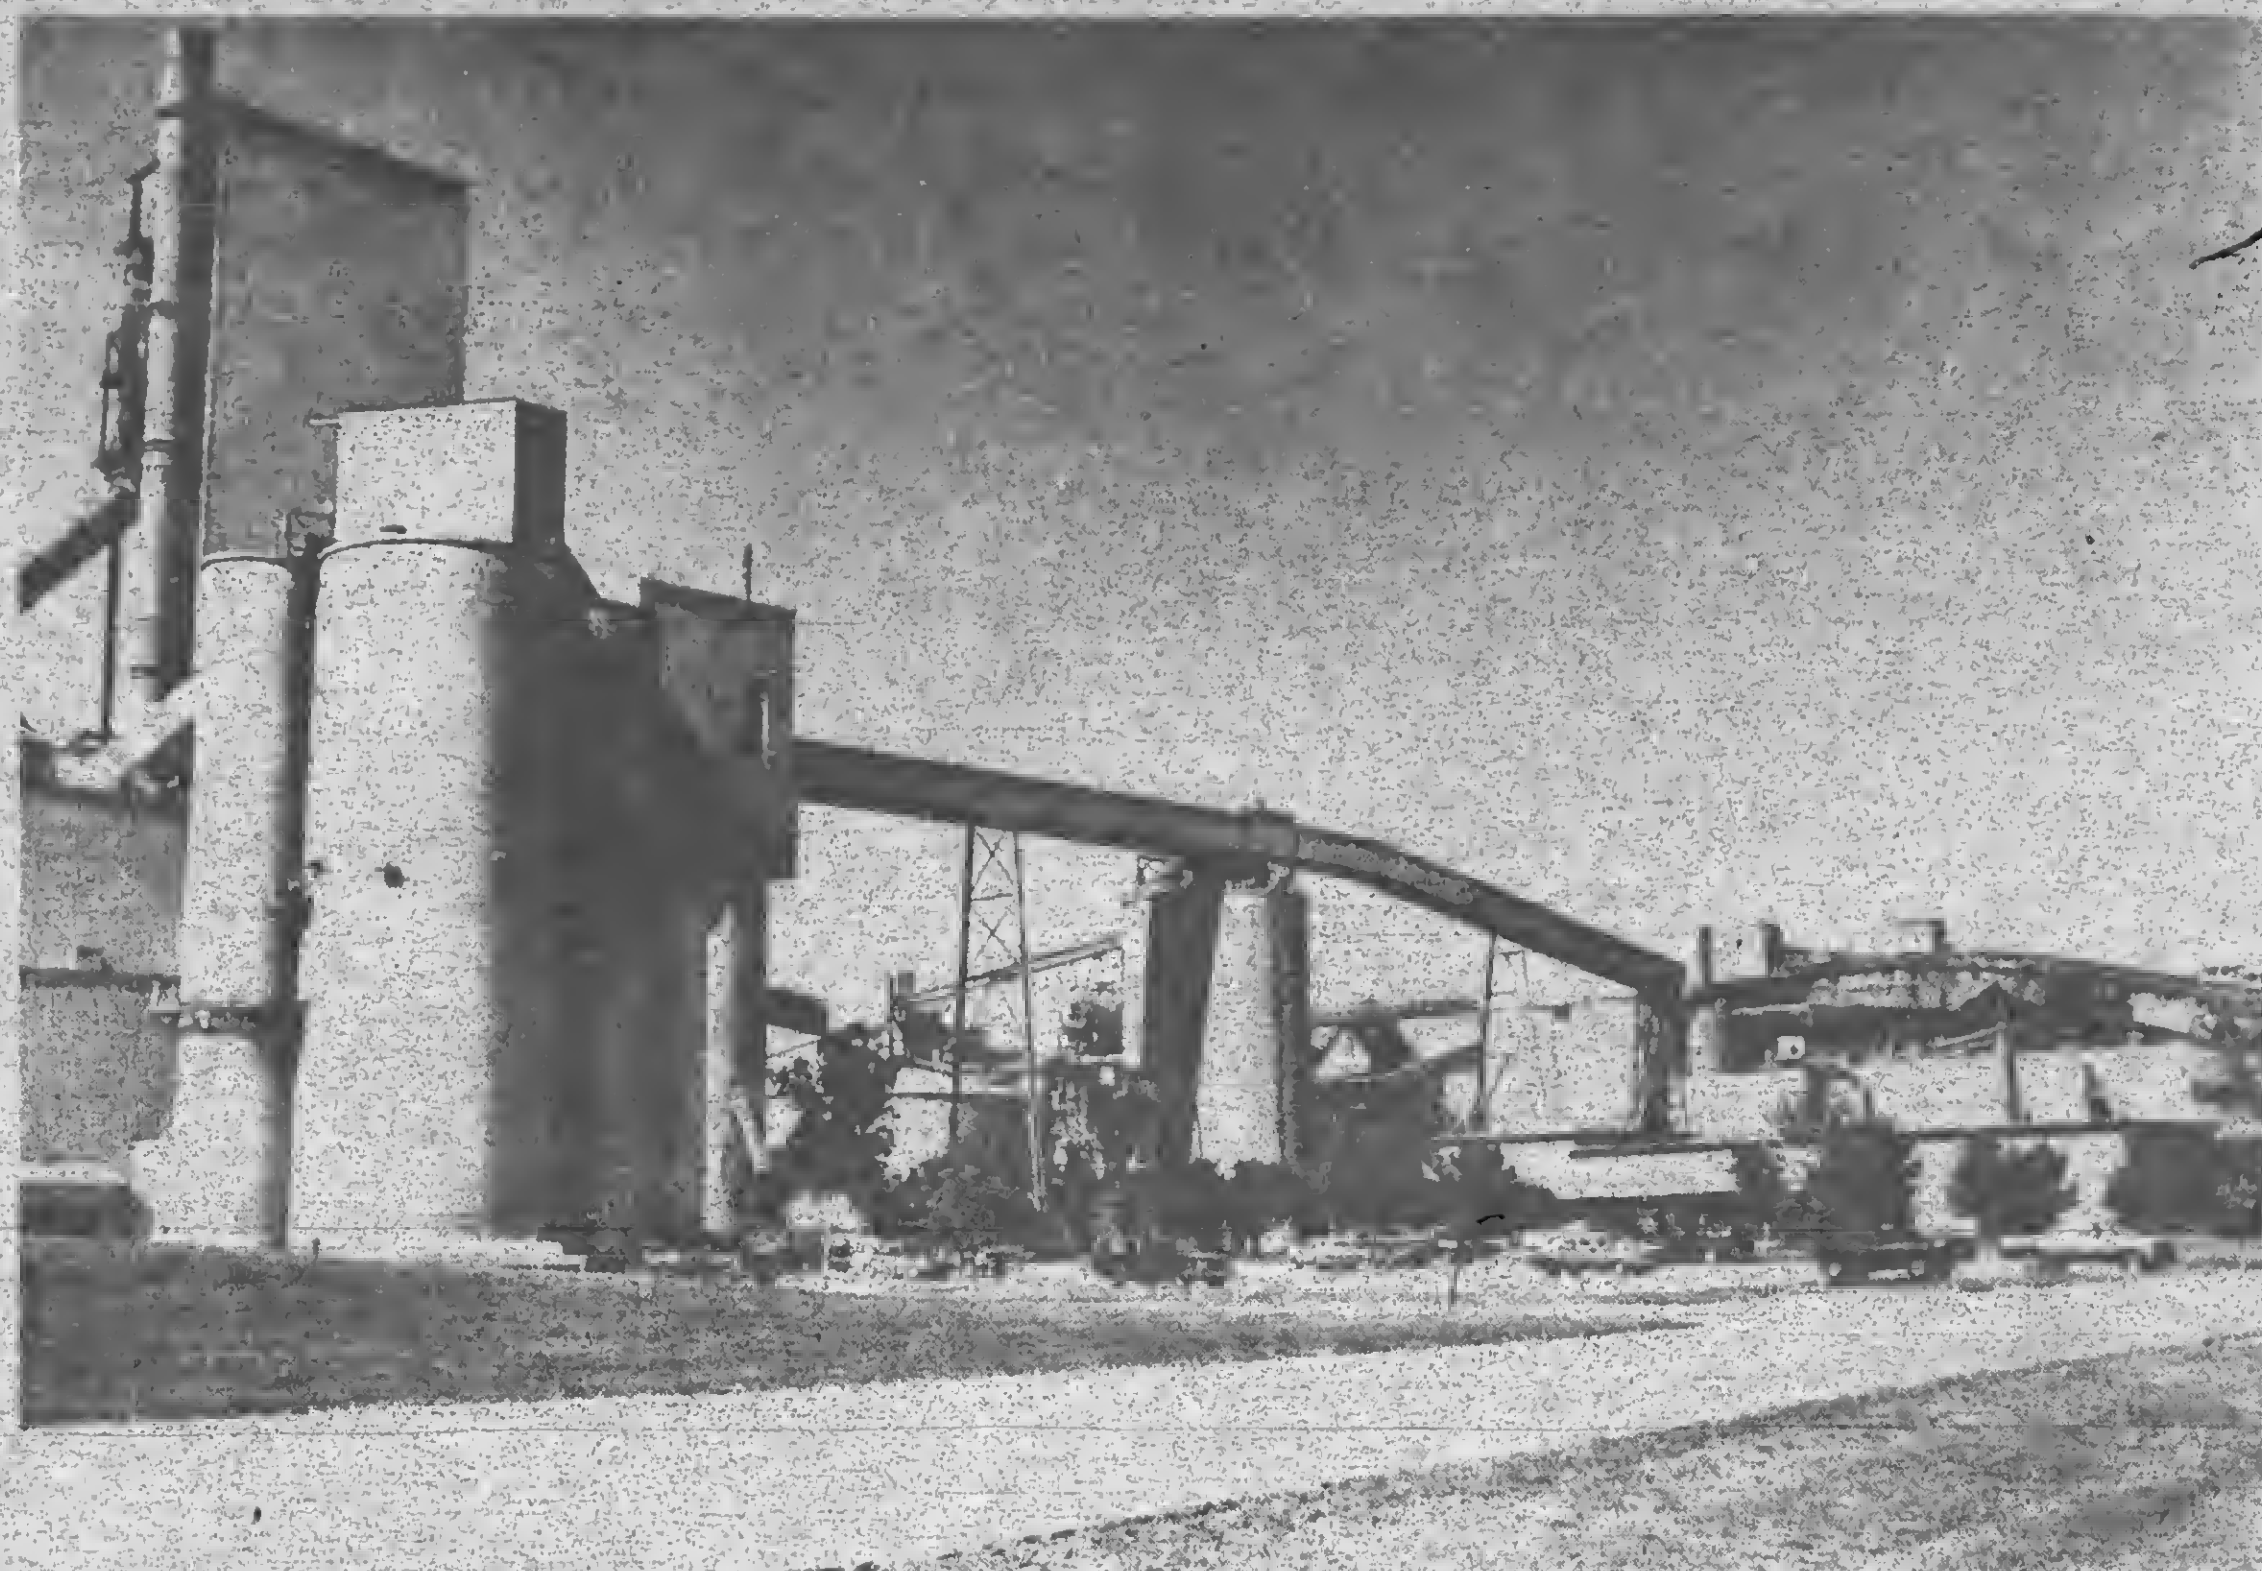

Limestone and shale, two of the raw materials used in the manufacturing process are mined from two surface mines on the Medusa site.

An innovative land reclamation project has been ongoing at the plant in which areas where mining has been completed are restored to their natural states using sludge from the City of Charlevoix's waste treatment plant as fertilizer.

At present, there are 110 hourly and 25 salaried employees at Medusa. The plant's estimated annual payroll for 1993 will be $5.7 million. Medusa's corporate headquarters are in Cleveland.

Shipping of the cement from the Charlevoix plant is done largely by lake carriers. The 552-foot Medusa Challenger is capable of carrying over 11,000 tons of cement; the Medusa Conquest 8,500 tons. Cement is shipped to Great Lakes ports of Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Grand Haven and Owego Sound in Canada.

The plant underwent a major renovation project in 1979 when it converted from the "wet" process of manufacturing cement to a "flash Calcining" system, a more energy efficient system developed in Japan in 1966.

The $50 million conversion included the addition of state-of-the-art equipment that makes the Medusa facility one of the most technologically sophisticated cement manufacturing operations in the world.

In flash calcining, the kiln feed, a mixture of finely ground limestone, sand and shale is metered and transported to the top of the preheater tower.

The preheater consists of a series of four cyclones and a flash furnace in which the hot water heat gases contact and heat the kiln feed prior to the feed actually entering the kiln.

After a third preheater stage, the kiln feed is discharged into a flash furnace where fuel is burned to further increase the temperature.

The flash furnace discharges to a fourth stage where final preheating occurs prior to the feed entering the kiln. During the process the particles of kiln feed are suspended in the gas stream resulting in very efficient heat transfer.

The resulting "clinker" discharges from the kiln into a cooler where ambient air is used to cool it to a compatible temperature for handling and storage.

Town & Country cedar homes meet growing market demand

With support from a national distributor network of builder/dealers, TOWN & COUNTRY CEDAR HOMES broke all previous statistics with record sales for the month of July 1992. Even in an ambiguous economic and business climate, TOWN & COUNTRY CEDAR HOMES has been very successful in meeting the needs of those in the new home and second home market.

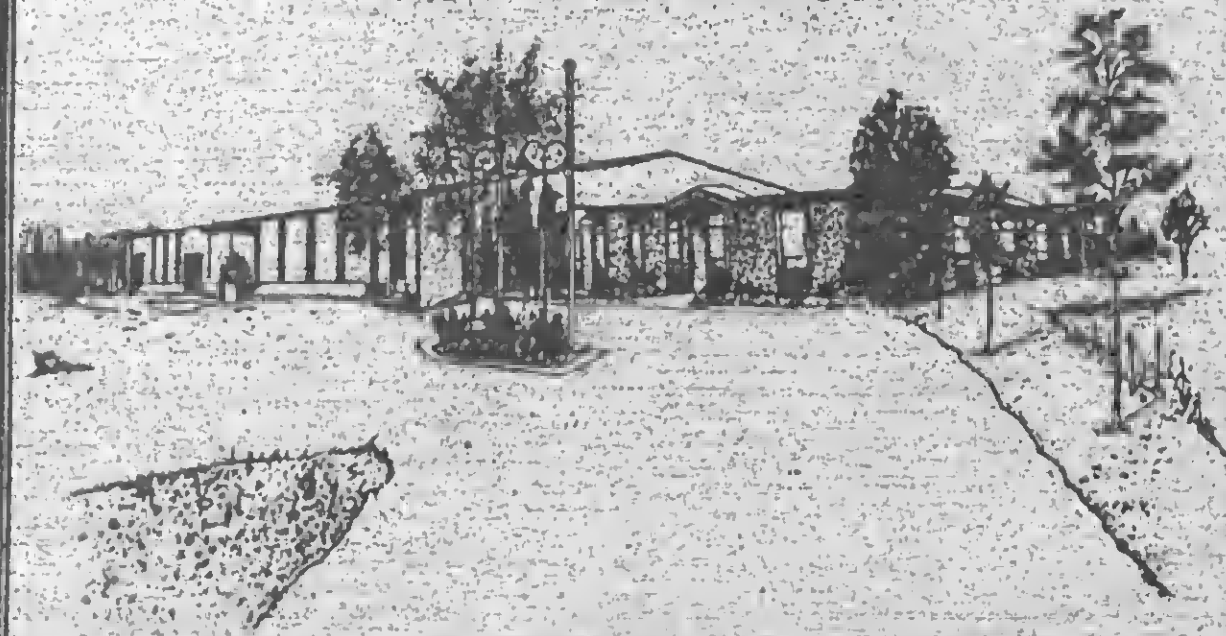

Vertically integrated, this company harvests Northern Michigan WHITE CEDAR, then de-humidifies and mills the lumber for each custom home order. TOWN & COUNTRY CEDAR HOMES controls the preparation, manufacture, design and construction of most of the homes they produce, using Swedish "factor crafting" techniques. The system they have devised results in labor-saving technology and the patented POST & SILL wall system and the INSULATED LOG wall system, both of which are very energy efficient.

Employing approximately 60 people, TOWN & COUNTRY CEDAR HOMES is headquartered in Petoskey, the mill is in Boyne Falls, and the construction office is in Charlevoix. With sophisticated computer technology, skilled draftsmen, engineering and architectural assistance, and a top-notch staff of sales/design managers, the customer can be assured of a high quality product and professional servicing of each project, whether a material lumber package is chosen, or a start-to-finish "turn-key" project is purchased and contracted for.

In the business of making other peoples' dreams come true, one can feel the warmth and friendliness that is evident throughout TOWN & COUNTRY CEDAR HOMES and TOWN & COUNTRY CEDAR HOMES CONSTRUCTION. Quality control, production, construction, accounting, purchasing, shipping and receiving, and the entire office staff are all part of the TEAM that have made this local company such a success!

Lexalite: Light is not just randomly shed

Lexalite's beginnings can be traced back to 1962 when an experimental, unbreakable polycarbonate globe was introduced as a solution to street lighting vandalism. The globe, known as Lexalite's Model 100, saved the Detroit Edison Company $100,000 in one year. It was first marketed under the trade name "Lexalite," derived from "Lexan," General Electric's polycarbonate trade name and "Lite," symbolizing the product's potential lighting applications.

In February of 1963, seven individuals formed Lexalite Corporation to design, tool, promote and sell Lexalite globes and refractors. Lexalite ended that year in the red, but has been profitable every year since.

Between 1965 and 1991, Lexalite incorporated manufacturing, expanded five times, suffered a fire, constructed a facility containing 30,000 feet of manufacturing and sales offices in Dickson, Tennessee and started a lighting research and development facility responsible for numerous new product designs and patents.

Today, Lexalite is the major supplier of acrylic and polycarbonate refractors, reflectors and lenses to the lighting industry. One extremely energy efficient product, the 822 Prismatic Reflector, was recently named Michigan's New Product of the Year and is contending in the National Society of Plastic Engineers Competition.

Over 150,000 square feet of state-of-the-art manufacturing, engineering, tooling, coatings and assembly operations in three plants enables Lexalite to generate approximately 20 million dollars in total annual revenues.

This closed, employee owned corporation employs about 160 persons. Its efforts are intensely focused on energy efficient product innovation, market development and employee participation.

Many groups help local industry grow

Several organizations have been formed to promote business and industry in the Charlevoix County area. Some date back many years and were responsible for assisting industries which have become mainstays of the local economy. Newer organizations represent efforts of local government to join with the state, business, industry and citizen's groups to improve our Northern Lower Michigan economy.

These development groups are working to maintain and attract business to the area.

NORTHERN LAKES ECONOMIC ALLIANCE - Initiated in 1984, the organization helps bring new business and industry into its Antrim-Charlevoix-Emmet County service area, and assists with the retention of established businesses. It is funded by contributions from local counties, cities, townships and industries.

The main Economic Alliance functions are:

- Assisting local governments in planning for quality development.

- Coordinating efforts between local development groups and the state.

- Regaining local industries by assisting with problem solving and company expansions.

- Providing business counseling to entrepreneurs.

- Providing export assistance to local manufacturers.

- Marketing the area for industrial development, contacting new prospects and following up on business leads.

The Economic Alliance employs full-time professional staff to carry out the above functions. Its primary goal is to create full-time, year-around base jobs for local residents.

The Economic Alliance is governed by a 19-member board representing industry, business, education and government. For more information about the Economic Alliance, call Executive Director Tom Johnson at 616-582-6482.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

The Charlevoix County EDC was organized in 1981 to provide tax exempt industrial revenue bonds under the state act authorizing EDCs. It also promotes business and industrial development, and acts as a development arm for the county as a whole. Board members are appointed by the county commission and represent various county communities. Call L. Lee Moerland, chair, for more information at 616-547-2512.

BOYNE CITY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION - The Boyne City EDC was formed in 1979 to encourage growth in the city. The organization helped develop the air-industrial park and to locate several industries in the park. The EDC also acts as the tax increment financing authority for the air-industrial park and has developed a policy statement for the city with regard to using financial incentives in attracting industry. The EDC is currently working on a national marketing effort.

Richard May is the chair and W.R. Frykberg, City Manager, is the contact person at 616-582-6597.

CHARLEVOIX DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION - The Charlevoix Development Corporation was formed to assist in funding development projects in the City of Charlevoix. During its tenure, it has provided financial assistance to several businesses and industries. For more information, contact Tom Wieland, chair, at 616-547-2744.

CHARLEVOIX INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT COMMITTEE - This committee was formed in 1981 as a cooperative effort between the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, the City of Charlevoix and area industries. The group works to retain and expand its industrial base and has produced a promotional video of the Charlevoix area for presentation to industrial prospects. The committee membership represents city government, the Chamber of Commerce, private industry and the Economic Alliance.

For more information, contact Jacqueline Meria, Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, at 616-547-2101.

CITY OF EAST JORDAN - The City of East Jordan has created a 51-acre industrial park located next to the municipal airport. Planning is underway to market the park and to use grant monies to cover some of the development costs. For more information, contact Bob Johnson, City Superintendent, at 616-536-3381.

Electrical Concepts North: Providing industrial solutions

Electrical Concepts North (ECN) was founded in 1988 as a division of Wilmot Electric Inc. to better serve the industrial control needs of the area. ECN is a full service systems house with design/build capability dedicated to providing turnkey solutions to industrial automation problems.

Specialties of ECN include coordinated variable speed drives, programmable controllers, energy management systems, and motion controls including CNC and servo systems.

In the area of variable speed drives, ECN is an authorized distributor and service center for Safronics drives. By applying Safronics drives and accessory circuit boards, ECN has become an industry leader in the use of multiple drive systems to coordinate the speed of multiple motors performing related tasks, such as batch processing or conveyor load sharing.

Programmable controllers have been employed by ECN in a number of different applications including: wire flattening mills, drying ovens, pumping stations, metalworking lathes, woodworking lathes, plastic injection molding presses, multi station assembly machines, automatic welders, automatic wire benders etc. ECN can design/build a control system from scratch for a new application, or they can retrofit a new control to an existing machine.

ECN also offers energy management services to its customers. Through the use of sophisticated data gathering equipment ECN can perform an analysis and develop a strategy. They will then design equipment and procedures to implement the strategy. Equipment can include automated banks of power factor correction capacitors. Also automatic load shedding, load leveling, as well as load scheduling may be employed to help reduce peak demand. Typically these techniques produce savings which pay for themselves within one or two years.

Probably the fastest growing segment of business for ECN has been in the area of computerized numerical control (CNC) installation. ECN can take an existing machine tool with an obsolete numerical control, remove that control and replace it with a new CNC. The result is a machine tool which rivals a brand new one in features, productivity and reliability at a fraction of the cost.

In addition to ECN's design/build services, ECN also employs a full-time staff of service technicians to respond to any production emergency. These experienced troubleshooters not only support ECN installed equipment, but will also pinpoint and repair problems in other systems.

Wojan: First in aluminum windows and doors

Wojan Aluminum has set the pace for the window and door industry ever since Walter Wojan introduced his aluminum windows and doors 40 years ago.

In 1973, he proved to a skeptical industry that properly constructed aluminum windows are energy efficient, durable, maintenance free and economical.

Today, Dennis and Kenneth Wojan oversee a growing business which currently employs 45 people to keep up with the increasing demand for Wojan Window products.

Wojan's engineering staff keeps pace with the needs of home owners and businesses north and south - wherever energy efficiency means savings.

At Wojan Aluminum's modern 45,000 square foot facility on Stover Road, the company designs and manufactures single, double and triple glazed windows and doors.

Each is carefully engineered with Wojan's unique combination of triple weatherstripping and thermal barrier, offering home owners, architects and contractors a wide range of choices.

Wojan Windows are tested by the American Aluminum Manufacturers Association (AAMA) in approved testing labs. These tests have shown that Wojan products all surpass AAMA standards for thermal performance, structural performance, air infiltration and water infiltration.

In hot climates, where the cost of air conditioning can be more expensive than heating in harsh northern climates, Wojan products keep the heat out and the comfortable cool air in.

In the north, Wojan's Triple Shield Windows, with the highly perfected hollow vinyl tubing thermal break and triple polypropylene weatherstripping, keep the heat in and the cold out.

Bergmann Center helps area manufacturers

The Bergmann Center is a Work Activity Center for mentally and physically handicapped adults living in Charlevoix County. The center teaches its clients work and behavioral skills which allow them to function more independently.

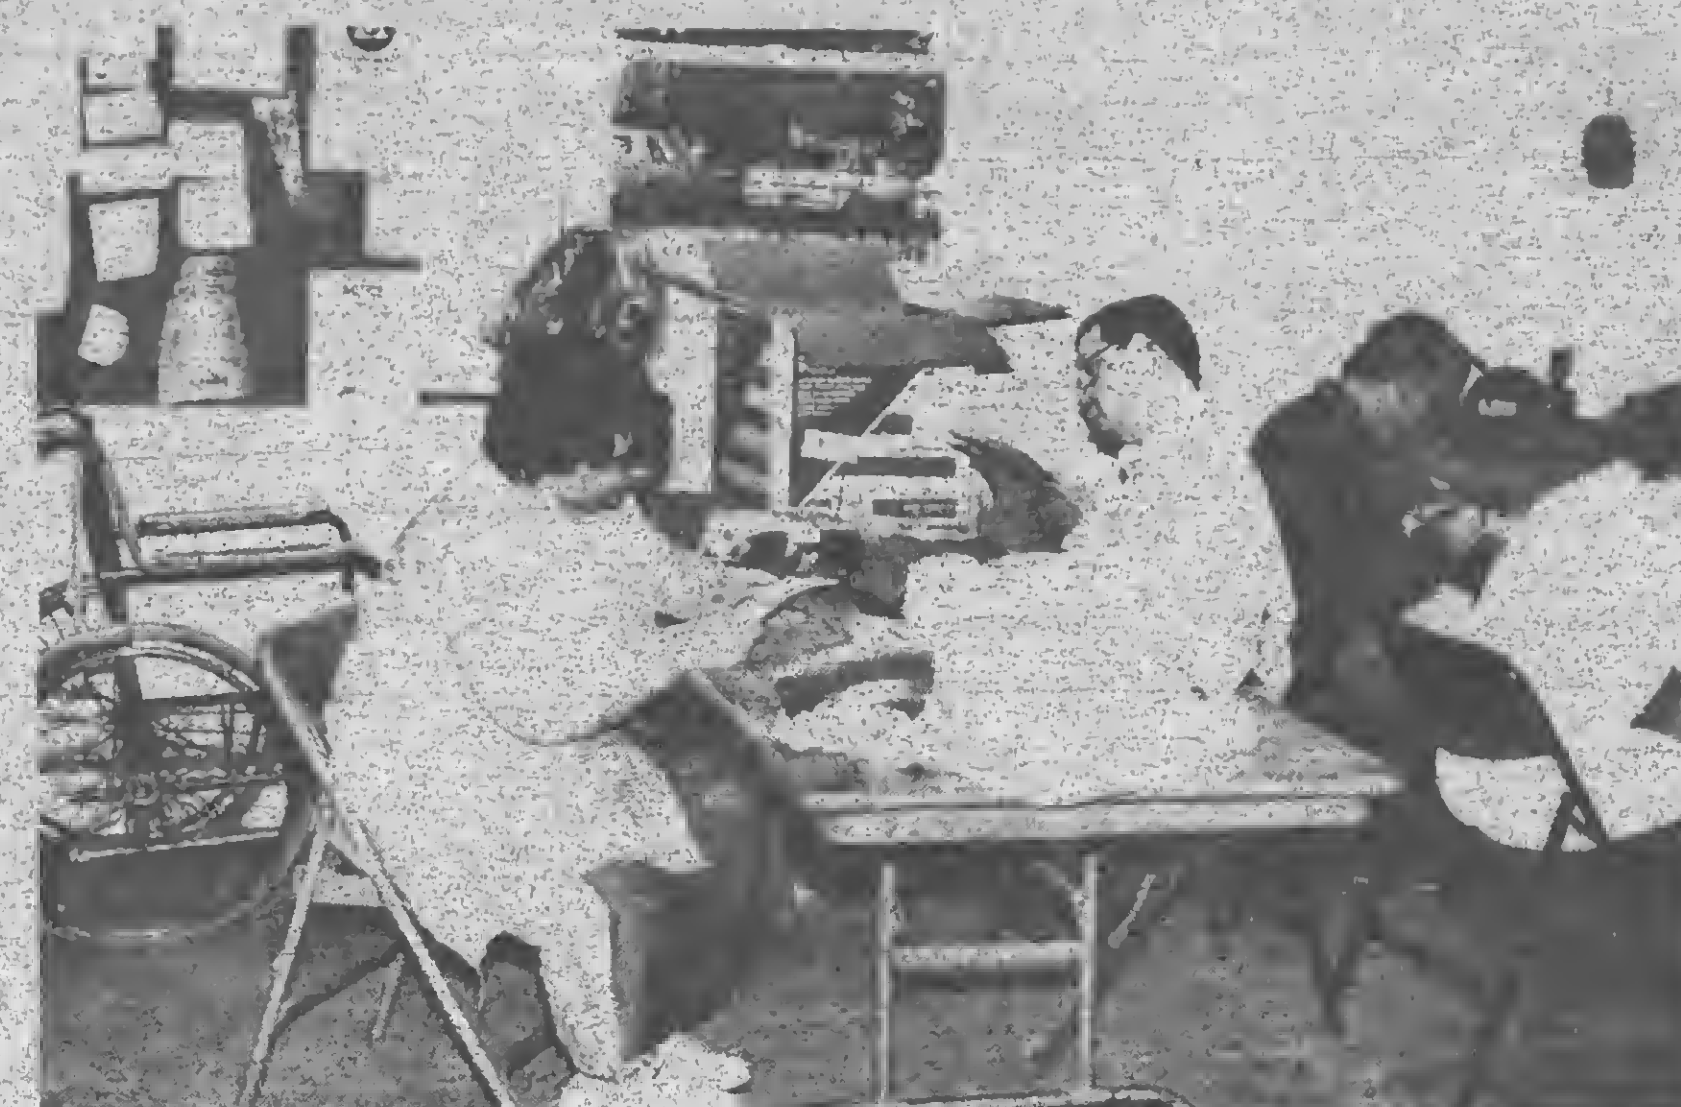

Types of work the center does include inspecting, assembling, gauging, packaging, cleaning, folding, taping, tapping and trimming a variety of items. Staff members at the center provide supervision and instruction in work activities and the observance of safety principals in a realistic work atmosphere. Supervisors encourage clients to demonstrate good work habits, including safe and proper care and handling of materials and tools as well as good attendance, punctuality and disciplined interpersonal relations with supervisors and coworkers.

The center is presently doing contract work for several area industries, including: Hoskins Mfg. Co., Michigan Maple Block, Lexamar Corp., Lexalite International, Allied Signal, Altair International, and Glass Alternatives. In addition to contract work, the Bergmann Center also manufactures and sells its own products which include: pine cone wreaths and candle holders, stained glass love lites, rag rugs and quilts. The center also coordinates a variety of social and recreational activities for the clients.

The history of the Bergmann Center dates back to 1954 when the parents of five area children banded together to form a local association for retarded children. Lillian Bergmann served as a teacher for the children from 1957 to 1965. In 1965 the education and training of handicapped children became the responsibility of the State, but there was a gap in services for handicapped adults. In 1965, Bergmann and her husband, Robert, started a Work Activity Center in their home. The program outgrew the Bergmann's home and moved to a building at 201 East Garfield in Charlevoix. The Bergmann Center moved to its present location on Martin Road in Charlevoix in 1980.

Kenneth H. Brill is the Executive Director of the center. Current board members are: James Hater, Genevieve Varnum, Milton Adams, Clem Olach, Harold Miller, Edna Miller, Marie Rabach, Virginia Kessler and Donna Decker.

Seelye Equipment Specialists: marketing solar power

One of the first things many Industrial Fair exhibitors will look for when setting up their display is the nearest electric outlet. But Seelye Equipment Specialists won't. Not as long as they're near a window.

Seelye Equipment Specialists, located near the south end of State Street, is a wholesale distributor of solar electric products. In addition to distributing solar panels and related items, Don Seelye and his son David, an electronics engineer, also have developed, and are manufacturing and marketing, their own line of electronic controls for the solar industry.

Although many people often think of solar heat when they think of solar power, that is not what Seelye Equipment Specialists markets. Seelye markets solar electric devices. These are devices which generate electricity from the sun, store the energy in batteries and then with the help of inverters power a variety of items. For example, solar electricity provides the bulk of the electricity Seelye uses in his shop.

Solar power is most often used in places where it is difficult to hook up to utility power lines. For example, one of Seelye's customers is a chain of remote cabins in Canada. In another instance, Seelye worked with a customer who had a billboard which he wanted lighted. It would have cost approximately $5,000 to run conventional power lines to the board. For less than half of that cost, one of Seelye's dealers was able to hook up a solar powered lighting system which also has no monthly power bills. Solar powered pads which recharge boat and airplane batteries or power camping equipment are also becoming increasingly popular.

Seelye began selling solar electric equipment in 1985.

CPI: Plant produces auto industry tooling

CPI Products, Inc., is a locally owned manufacturer of press plant tooling primarily for the auto industry.

CPI designs and manufactures the world's largest selection of automated systems and components for moving sheet metal parts such as door panels, hoods and fenders through stamping, fabricating and assembly operations including applications using multi-axis robots and pick and place shuttles. The majority of CPI's business is its existing line of components. However, state of the art technology including computer aided design and programmable CNC machines, allows the design and manufacturing of customized systems and components in as little as two weeks. CPI services customers in the U.S. and Canada as well as European manufacturers.

Founded in 1982, CPI employs 25 people at its plant in the Charlevoix Industrial Park and also has a staff of 10 in its sales and engineering office in Detroit. Local employees include engineers, CNC programmers, machinists and assembly personnel as well as sales and administrative staff.

Power cooperative is a partner for business

As new uses for electricity are found, the demand for power is likely to grow dramatically.

The challenge this creates for companies such as Top O' Michigan Electric Co., a customer-owned electric cooperative based in Boyne City, is how to provide customers with the additional power they require at a reasonable cost.

In the last 20 years alone, customers have added computers, printers, answering machines, video game systems, VCRs, big-screen TVs and CD players; waterbeds, microwave ovens, food processors and garage door openers to their homes. The flood of electronic hardware on the market is likely to continue with devices such as virtual reality machines, video telephones and household fax machines.

In addition, the public's awakening awareness to environmental issues is expected to spur renewed consumer interest in such things as electric cars, electric lawnmowers and electric heating systems, particularly the energy-efficient, environmentally friendly, geothermal heating and cooling system.

This is good news to the people at Top O' Michigan Electric Co. because it means more kilowatt-hour (kwh) sales.

But the excitement must be tempered because with the added demand comes added cost. Top O' Michigan buys the electricity it provides to the more than 43,000 metered farms, homes and businesses scattered throughout the predominantly rural 12 county region of northwestern lower Michigan, which includes Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties. The cost for this wholesale power becomes very expensive during peak demand periods. A typical peak demand time is the end of the day when school children, parents and other power users return home. Suddenly lights, TVs, stereos, electric ranges, electric water heaters and other appliances come on and a demand for more electricity is created.

Top O' Michigan officials believe the answer to the problem of high cost, peak demand power is the electric energy management program currently being undertaken by their company and their wholesale power supplier, Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative. Through the use of a highly sophisticated computer system, the amount of electricity needed to satisfy customer demand at any given time can be controlled, along with the corresponding cost.

Specifically, the program allows the cooperatives to control the operation of electric water heaters and electric heating systems, two items which draw a great deal of power. A control device is installed on the water heater and/or heating system which allows it to be shut off during the peak demand times. The control device is activated by signals carried along the power lines.

The control periods will be carefully planned so the interruptions will not inconvenience the customer. In fact, customers will receive monthly billing credits for allowing their electric water heaters to be controlled and will receive an up to 40 percent discount on their electric heat.

These savings to the customer are a direct result of Top O' Michigan's ability to reduce its wholesale power costs during peak demand periods.

Since wholesale power costs account for about 60 percent of a typical Top O' Michigan electric bill, all customers benefit indirectly by wholesale power cost reductions possible with the electric energy management program.

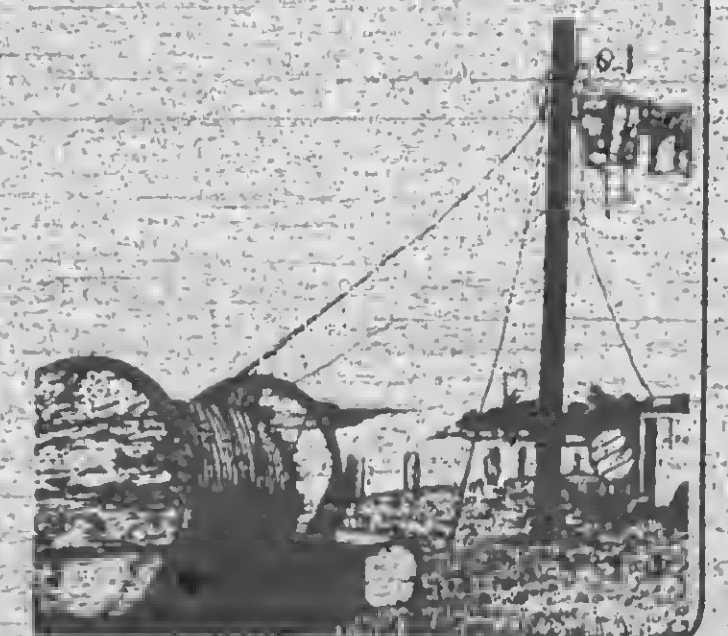

Providing our customers with reliable power at reasonable cost is our TOP responsibility

Control Engineering: Material handling systems

Control Engineering Company (CEC) is an affiliate of the Jervis B. Webb Co., one of the largest producers of material-handling systems in the world.

CEC has three plants operating in northern Michigan employing over 200 employees. These plants are located in Harbor Springs, Pellston, and Boyne City.

David Fuller of the Boyne City facility explains their product. "CEC produces a full line of industry standard NEMA and JIC electrical enclosures. These enclosures are used by a variety of customers in the machine tool industry, food processing industry, and chemical companies among others."

While the Boyne City plant produces only the metal enclosures, electronic components are installed elsewhere. A large inventory is stocked in Boyne City for direct shipment throughout the United States and foreign countries.

Fuller pointed out the CEC utilizes the latest CAD technology, modern automated machinery, and has a very skilled work force. These attributes allow CEC to produce custom-designed enclosures as well.

CEC also manufactures a line of automatic guided vehicles in its Harbor Springs facility. These vehicles are used for loading and unloading materials.

East Jordan Iron Works is one of the leading Independent Automated Foundries in the United States. Always having been located in East Jordan, it is one of Northern Michigan's oldest and most respected industries.

The Iron Works produces a wide array of gray and ductile iron castings. It is noted for an outstanding workforce of many skills, using some of the most modern tools and technology available.

EAST JORDAN IRON WORKS, INC.
East Jordan, Michigan

Iron Works: More than 100 years in business

East Jordan Iron Works has been an integral part of the Charlevoix County economy for more than 100 years.

At the time the foundry was established by William E. Malpass, East Jordan was the center of lumbering operations. Railroads had not yet penetrated this region and 11 sawmills and the Pine Lake Iron Company were dependent on water for transportation.

Hand-hewn timbers were floated to the mills and as many as 14 lumber schooners could be seen loading simultaneously at the East Jordan docks.

All this activity created a demand for the foundry and machine shop operation. The foundry was built in 1883 and was followed by a machine shop two years later. Casting demands for miscellaneous machine parts, ship parts, agricultural and eventually castings for the railroads later followed.

Closing of mills and lessening of lake shipping in the 1920s were met by changing types of manufacture. In 1928, the machine shop was enlarged and the production of fire hydrants, water works valves and street castings began.

Through the support of the community and many dedicated employees, the company grew and has continued to do so. Today East Jordan Iron Works employs approximately 500 people and has an annual payroll of $12 million to $14 million.

Besides the corporate office and manufacturing facilities located on the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, the company operates branch offices and warehouses in Grand Rapids and Detroit, Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio, and Chicago, Ill.

nois. Additionally there is an extensive network of product distributors. A central distribution facility is located in Sunfield, MI.

East Jordan Iron Works manufactures a variety of gray and ductile iron casting to remain flexible in a fluctuating market and economy. Products include a full line of street castings, such as manhole covers, grates, and frames.

Additionally, the company is a major supplier of fire hydrants, valve and service boxes, tapping and repair sleeves and supplementary water distribution supplies.

The company also manufactures industrial castings such as tractor and trailer brake drums, off the road brake drums, gear housings, valve bodies and other specialty items.

East Jordan Iron Works services and facilities include:

Sales and Engineering departments to assist customers in placing their order and in assuring that the customer takes advantage of the right casting for the job. All sales data such as orders, inventories, and production schedules are computerized on an IBM Systems 38 computer linked to numerous individual terminals including sales offices and yards.

The Engineering Department includes manufacturing, industrial, product and process engineering. Continuous evaluation of procedures and processes assures efficient, accurate and reliable production resulting in on-time delivery and competitive pricing.

A complete pattern shop ready to construct any new pattern required. East Jordan Iron Works also maintains thousands of patterns.

A number of core making technologies including automated shell care, no-bake and oil sand.

A state-of-the-art water cooled cupola with a 1,000-degree recuperative hot blast, oxygen enrichment system capable of delivering fifty tons of molten iron per hour. This is coupled with a 40-ton electric induction holding furnace to insure that the iron is delivered to the molding centers at the proper temperature and analysis.

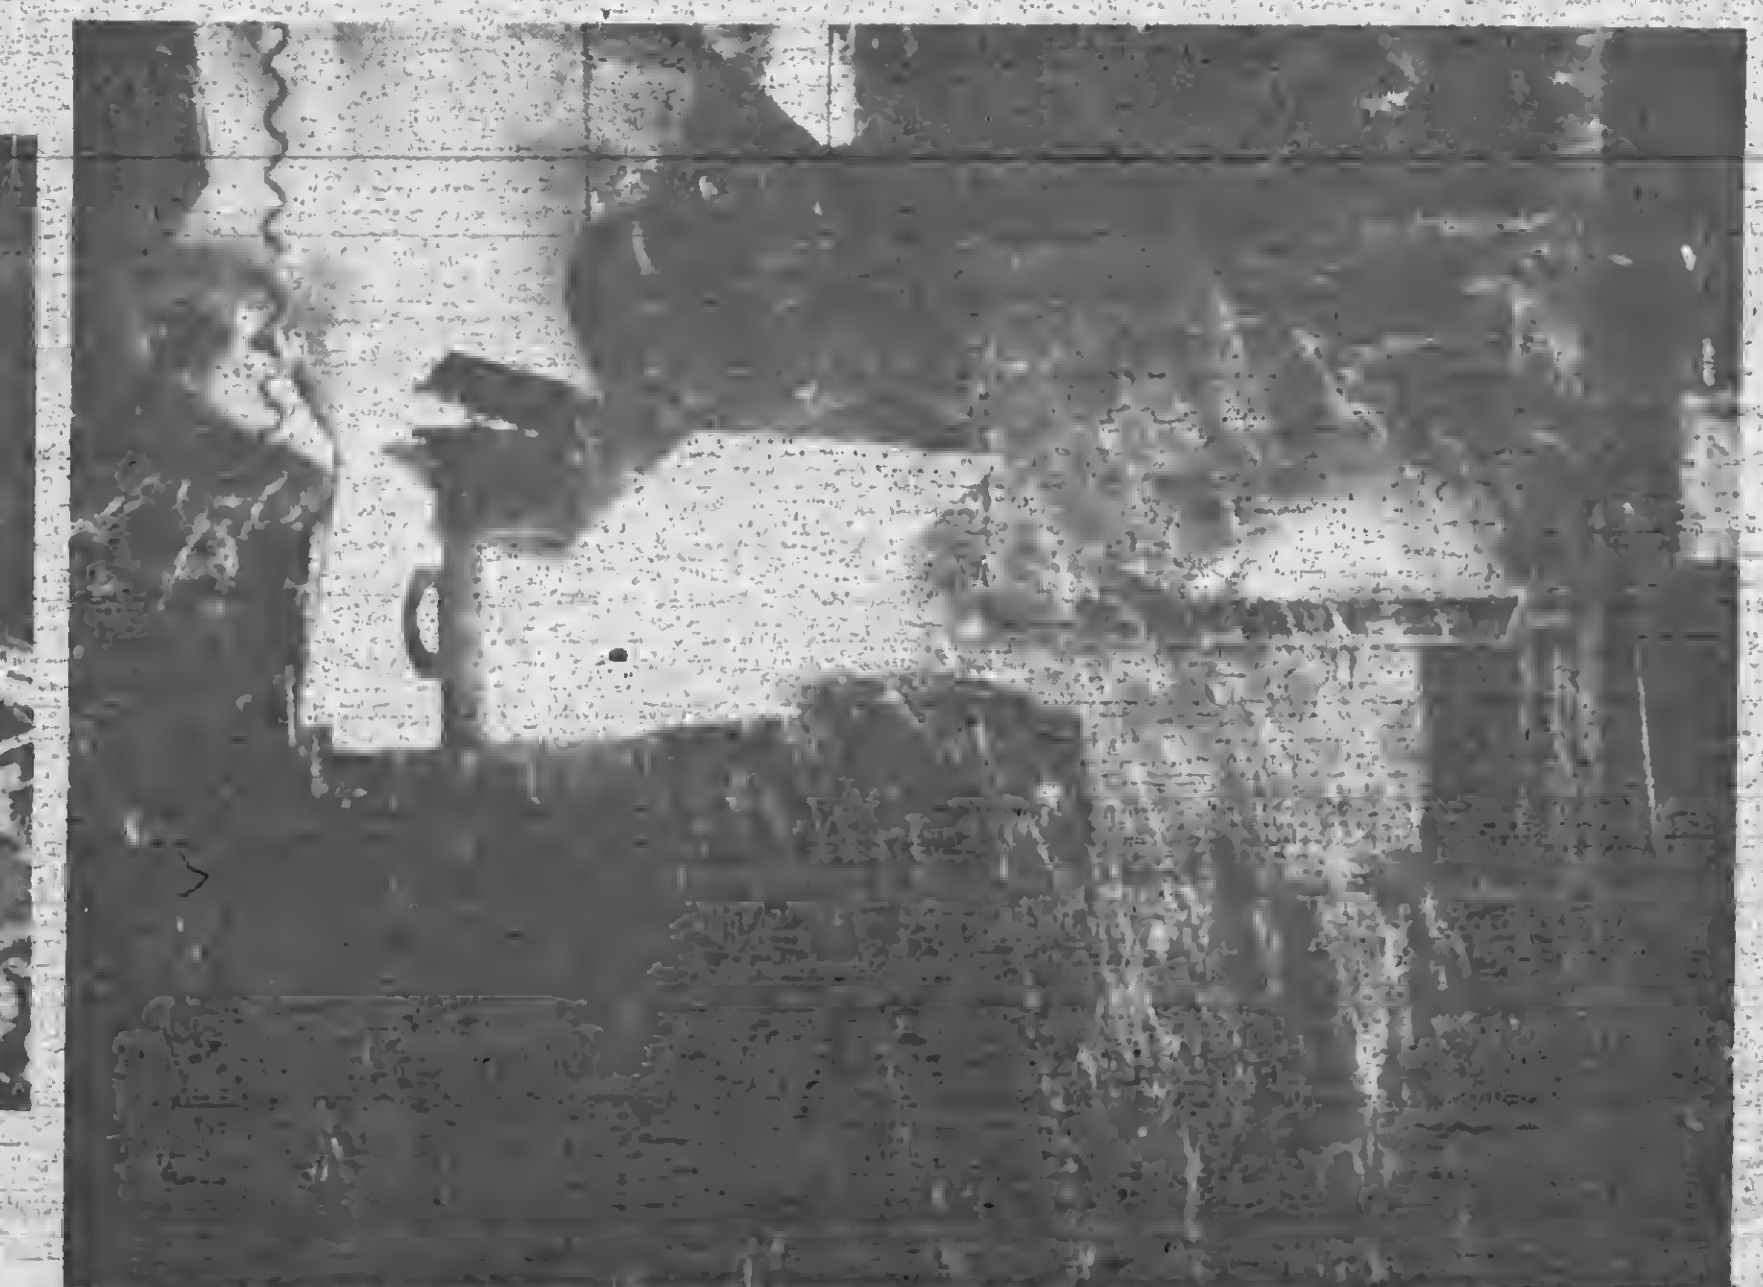

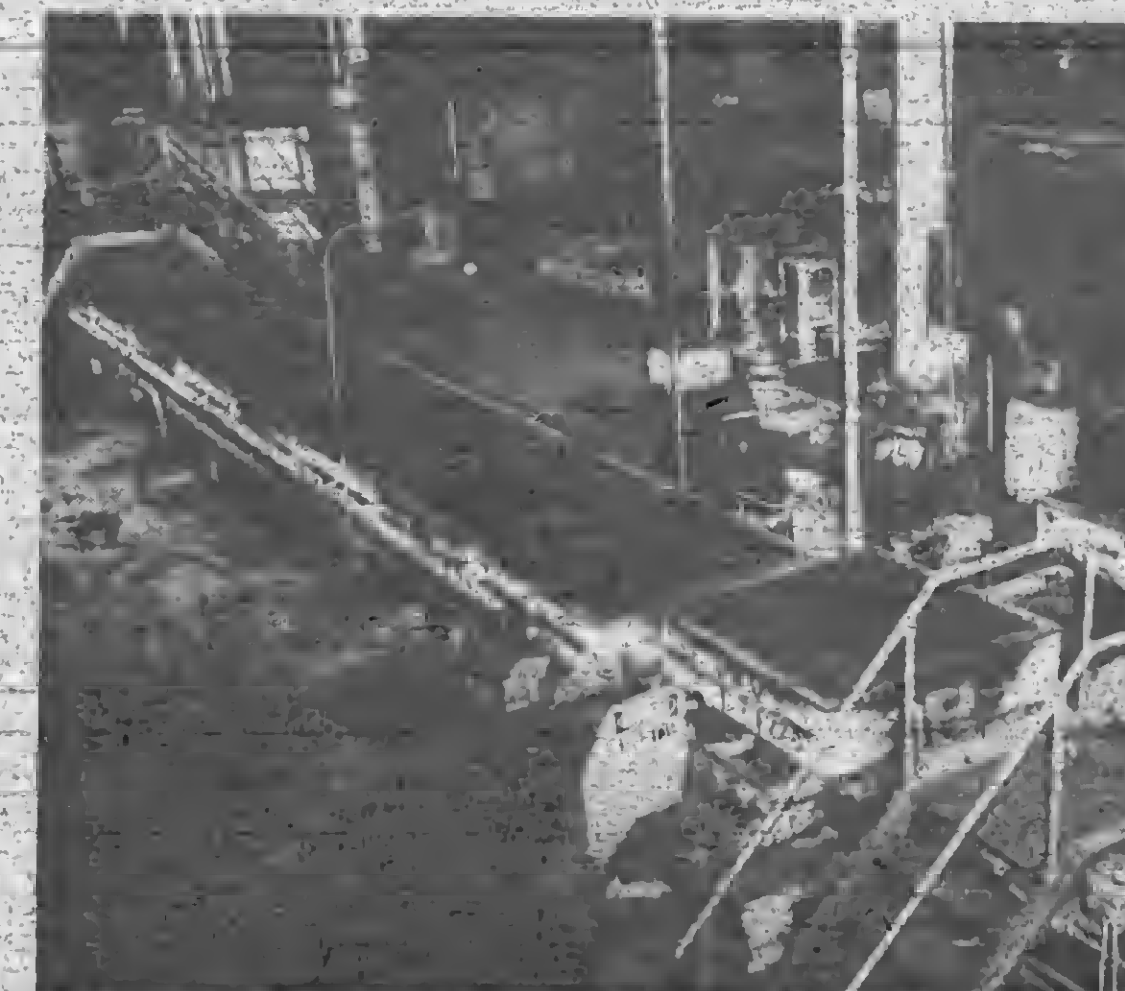

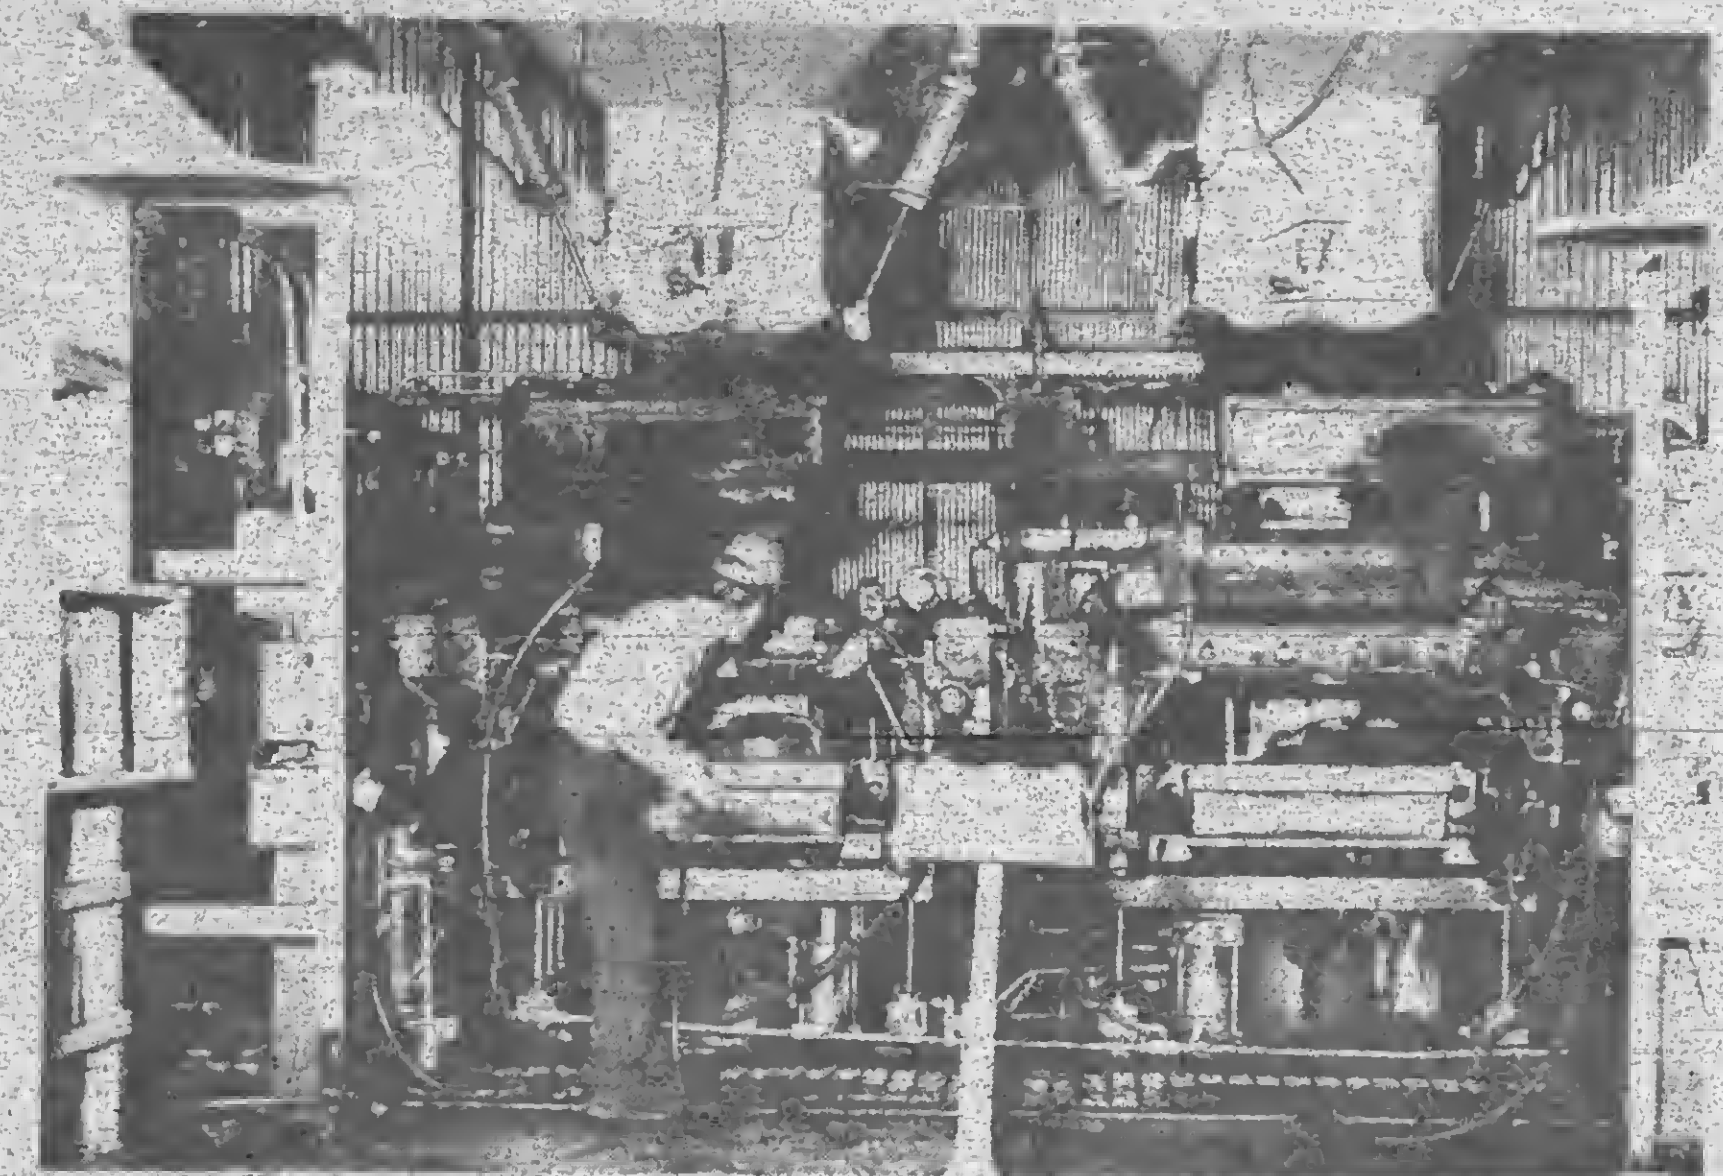

Machining operations are performed on computer numerical controlled vertical and horizontal turret lathes from 10-inch chuck size up through a 68-inch swing diameter. These lathes are programmed in the engineering department utilizing Compact II computer assist, a graphic plotter, and floppy disc storage. Additional manual and automatic metal working equipment includes milling machines, radial drill presses, multi-spindle drills, horizontal lathes and grinders.

One of the largest casting inventories in the world; ready for immediate delivery. Rail and truck delivery are available for on-time delivery of all products.

Sand lab to assure that sand mix prepared for each molding center has been properly formulated. A melt lab where testing of the iron's physical properties are performed. Additionally, chemical analysis on an in-house spectrometer, and microscopic inspection of the iron's structure are performed.

East Jordan Iron Works, Inc. and its employees continue to be one of the most stable, progressive, well-tooled, manufacturing facilities in the nation and are vigorously working to meet further demands for quality products.

Gill net ruling may revitalize trout fishing

By Laurie Lounsbury

Lake trout in our northern waters haven't been able to produce an offspring in the last thirty-something years. They haven't lived long enough to have the chance. All that may change now that Federal Court Judge Enslin ruled to ban gill-net fishing in the Grand Traverse Bay area. As of Oct. 31, gill netting by tribal fishermen will no longer be permitted in the northeast part of Lake Michigan. That area encompasses the fishing waters surrounding Charlevoix up to North Point.

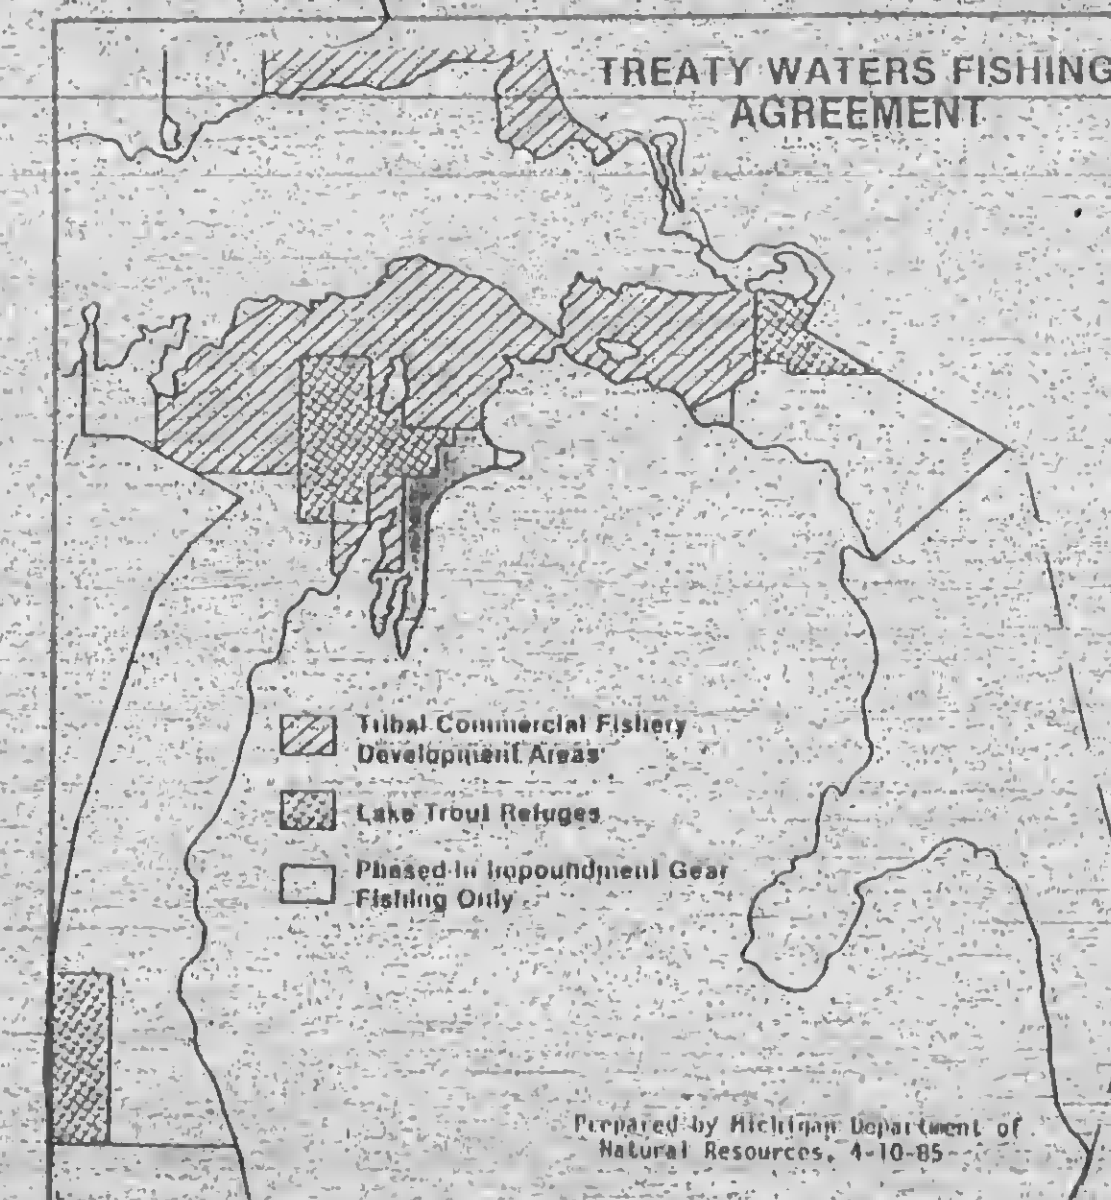

"This is going to make so many fishermen in this area so happy," said Myrl Keller, DNR Fisheries Biologist. "It's great. It's long overdue. And the fishery will benefit," he said.

Lake trout vanished in this area around 1965 because they were fished out. Since 1965, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources has planted 60 million fish in Lake Michigan. The bulk of the fish were planted up here in the northern waters, because this area has historically been the best habitat for trout. No reproduction to speak of has occurred during the last 27 years, primarily because the fish have been caught before they had a chance to reproduce. A mature trout, capable of reproduction, is 24 to 26 inches in length and weighs six pounds. These trout were being caught in the gill nets of the tribal fishermen who were fishing commercially for whitefish. Gill nets kill all of the fish that are netted, so mature trout were dying in the nets before they had a chance to reproduce. With Judge Enslin's new ruling, only trap nets will be permitted in the Grand Traverse Area. Trap nets catch the targeted fish, such as whitefish, and let other species live. "If lake trout can indeed reproduce, we should see it in the next couple of years," Keller said.

Enslin's decision Friday came after years of work by the DNR to comply with the original trap netting agreement drawn up in 1985. In 1988, the judge ruled that the DNR had to equip and train tribal fishermen with trap nets before he would uphold the ban on gill netting. The DNR contracted with several commercial fishermen in the area to train tribal fishermen with trap nets. Last June, the case came

Pulling railroad tracks is wrong

Editor,
Am I crazy or are there some very dull-witted and greedy politicians and civic leaders in Petoskey?

Taking the railroad tracks out of downtown would be an unparalleled crime and a vandalism of the infrastructure and historical atmosphere of Petoskey. This could only be condoned by the stupid or those with vested interests and secret agendas (i.e. real estate).

Right under our noses lies the seed of a solution to our summer traffic problems: trains!! With park and ride facilities in Alanson and Boyne Falls (for example).

It is a proven fact that the railroad is four times as efficient as road transportation. This would save not only a lot of environmental wear and tear (fossil fuel, acid rain) but a lot of money too. Even rebuilding the railroad to FRA Class I standards would be far cheaper and make more economic sense than building a beltway.

Example: The increased heavy truck traffic and road damage since the removal of the C&O railroad tracks forced heavy shipments onto the road from the quarry in Bay Shore and all of the businesses between Charlevoix and Traverse City, in fact. This environmental hatchet job was achieved by real estate interest like those in Petoskey who "developed" the waterfront.

The railroad is also a vital part of the historical flavor of the Gaslight District and has a potential as a real attraction. Everybody loves trains!!

Once the tracks are gone, who benefits? Speculators who build condos and more expensive boutiques, perhaps? What about the traffic jams and parking problems? What about the loss of history, character and atmosphere? What about future generations and the environment? What about crossing the street, for Heaven's sake!!

Would anybody seriously consider sacrificing these things for the private, short-term gain of a few real estate developers?

The Alanson and Petoskey railroad runs an exemplary passenger train. For the past five years they have been trying to provide service into Petoskey, but have been thwarted by Bay View and other real estate interest groups with a variety of lame excuses.

It's time for the community to support its railroad before it's too late! Come on Petoskey Historical Society. Do something real and prove that you're not in someone's pocket. One can still get to anywhere in the continental United States by rail from Pennsylvania Plaza (the old depot). Let's keep it that way.

Sincerely,
Daniel C. Adler

MADD depends on people

Editor,
Dear Residents of Charlevoix:

It has been almost four years since four young people, under the age of 21, died in a crash on US 21 near Bayshore. It has been three years since two more fine Charlevoix residents died in a crash on Marion Center Rd. Two other recent deaths in Charlevoix County and neighboring Antrim County also come to my mind. All of these deaths had two things in common. They were completely unnecessary and alcohol related.

The Charlevoix County Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving was started because a handful of people wanted to fight this senseless waste of life by making the residents of Charlevoix County aware of the extremely high numbers of drunk drivers on our roads every day. MADD, Charlevoix hoped to cut down the number of drunk drivers by repeatedly reminding drivers that alcohol and driving are a deadly mix. It appears that this movement has been somewhat successful.

Because of the MADD, National guidelines that local chapters must adhere to, there is a need for more local people to be involved in the day to day operation of the Charlevoix Chapter. If you feel this group is needed and want to continue to fight senseless deaths of our loved ones then please let that be known. If you don't speak up, the local chapter will have to disband.

The next meeting of MADD, Charlevoix is Monday, October 12, 1992 at 6:30 p.m. at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, 1000 Grant St., Charlevoix. If you want to support MADD, Charlevoix and can't attend the next meeting please call MADD, 547-3540 and leave a message.

This handful of local organizers need to hear from you and need your guidance.
Sincerely,
Carolyn Havens

Editorial

Although many political developments this year have fallen far short of cause for celebration, one development which has proven interesting at the very least and possibly even cause for hope is the growing voice of parties other than the Republicans and the Democrats. For far too long the two major political parties have controlled the political system and stifled new ideas.

In recent years, many people have become disenchanted with bickering between the two major parties. Rather than seeking common ground, the two parties have all too often seemed intent on condemning the ideas of the other party for no better reason than that the ideas are the ideas of the other party.

Party feuds fueled by special interests have stalled government at the state and federal level. In Lansing, Republican Governor John Engler feuds with Representative Lew Dodak and the Democratic House. In Washington, Republican President George Bush feuds with Representative Tom Foley, Senator George Mitchell and the Democratically controlled Congress. And the public sits by and watches this and wonders if it is satisfied with the proposals being made by either party.

Against this backdrop of disillusionment, voters are now opening their ears to alternative party candidates. At the national level, independent candidate Ross Perot is debating with Bush and Democratic candidate Bill Clinton. At the state level, Libertarian candidate Jerry Arlyon and Natural Law candidate Lyman Clark will participate in a candidate forum Oct. 20 with Republican candidate Phil Ruppe and Democratic candidate Bart Stupak.

Whether or not a significant number of voters will cast ballots for these alternative party candidates remains to be seen. Whether or not a significant number of voters should cast ballots for these candidates is a matter for the voters to decide. But no matter how these candidates fare in the election, the fact that voters have expressed a willingness to listen to ideas from outside the mainstream parties is refreshing. If that development leads to a political system in which ideas are debated on their merits rather than on the basis of who initiated them it will be a major step forward in American politics.

Library grows more computerized

It is now possible for a person to search through the card catalog of the Charlevoix Public Library without ever leaving home.

As of this past Saturday, the library has hooked up a computer modem system. The system allows people with an IBM compatible computer and a modem to dial 547-6647 and look through the library's card catalog. Catalog searches may be done by author's name, book title, subject or key word.

Librarian Mary Beth Wallick says the key word feature is great because often people can't remember the entire title of the book, but they can remember a word in the title.

The On-line Public Access Catalog (OPAC) system is one of the initial steps in a larger library computerization program. Currently the library has four computer terminals and a small printer to help library users in their search for books. Ultimately, the library will issue cards with bar codes to all patrons so that it will be easier to keep track of books. Wallick said she also hopes to eventually have the Charlevoix Public Library linked by computer network to other libraries in the Northland Library Cooperative. Currently Charlevoix and four other libraries have the OPAC system. By next month, a listing of the books in Charlevoix and 17 other northern Michigan libraries will be available on a CD ROM computer disk.

In addition to card catalog information, the OPAC system also contains a Bulletin Board which includes sections with library information (such as the library hours), upcoming events (things such as library story hours for children), a library floor plan (yet to be completed), and information about other libraries (also yet to be completed).

And yes, one more thing the new computer system will do. It will list overdue books.

McManus criticized

Editor,

I am writing this letter because I feel that Senator McManus has been ducking and downplaying the stink of privatizing the liquor industry in Michigan. Privatization of the Liquor Control Commission amounts to nothing but a dead skunk in the middle of the road. And it stinks all across Michigan! Doesn't the Senator realize after all of the phone calls and letters he has received that small liquor dealers will be permanently hurt from privatization if he doesn't help us?

I believe that Senator McManus may be an outstanding man and citizen. But in my opinion, he has shown little if any leadership in the fight to prevent John Engler from destroying the liquor industry in Michigan!

Kim Francisco
Kewadin

I would like to know how many people have contacted him in favor of privatization vs. those against it. Who are these people in favor of it? Why has he ignored over 3000 signatures sent to him on petitions to save the Liquor Control Commission?

The State subsidizes cherry farmers for their crop losses, and I am wondering if the State will subsidize my business losses if and when the State ever privatizes the liquor industry. I'm not saying it's wrong for the state to give subsidy payments to those who truly deserve them. All I'm saying is that the State, due to its shortsightedness, must take into consideration our probable losses and consider the possibility of also subsidizing its liquor licenses!

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Frank Fox of Callao, Virginia, and Jack Begrow of Charlevoix. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Chambers of Logan, Pennsylvania.

One hundred guests attended the garden wedding which was held at an historic estate in the rolling hills of Chester County, Pennsylvania.

The bride wore a white chiffon full length dress with an off the shoulder neckline and a sequined bodice.

Bridal attendants were Cathy Barnard from Sarasota, Florida, Ann Martelli, from West Chester, Pennsylvania, and Beth Intoccia, from Audobon, Pennsylvania. All three attendants are sisters of the bride.

The groomsmen were Ian Chambers and Brett Chambers, both sons of the groom.

Readers at the ceremony were Dr. Lee Paul Begrow, brother of the bride, and David Chambers, brother of the groom.

The bride is a Territory Manager for Medtronic Norich, an international medical device company. She is a graduate of Charlevoix High School and Michigan State University.

A collection of awards, accomplishments and praises earned by Charlevoix people.

Katherine Campbell, a first year student at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, started her college career with an adventure in the great Maine outdoors on a Colby Outdoor Orientation Trips (COOT).

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell of Charlevoix, Katherine spent four days exploring Maine on the Bigelow Reserve mountain biking trip. More than 95 percent of all new students joined in Colby's unique orientation program this year, a Colby record that the college believes may be the highest level of participation for such programs at any campus in the nation.

The array of trips included excursions to match nearly every interest and skill level, from the hard core hiking of the Mahoosuc Notch trip which covers 18 miles of the most difficult part of the Appalachian Trail, to a scenic island bike tour. For students not interested in sailing, biking, hiking or fishing their way across various spectacular areas of Maine, Colby offered a few trips designed to be fulfilling in a less physical way. The Salmon Lake Theater Trip gave those students interested in drama an opportunity to work on their acting amid the tranquil scenes of the Belgrade Lakes. Some student groups assisted non-profit organizations with outdoor projects.

COOT was designed 18 years ago to give students an opportunity to explore the breathtaking state in which they will attend college and to get to know a few other students in a relaxed atmosphere. Each trip consists of 10 new students and is led by two returning students and a member of the faculty, staff or alumni.

Rainbow Shoppe hosts appreciation luncheon for volunteers

More than 100 volunteers attended the annual appreciation luncheon given by the Rainbow Shoppe. Soup, sandwiches, dessert, and beverages were on the menu for the luncheon at the Assembly of God fellowship hall.

Pastors Larry Grooters, President of the Ministerial Association, Bruce Hamilton, Lander Carter, Michael Dennis, Lowell Anderson, Philip Schairbaum, and their wives were in attendance.

The volunteers were thanked by Pastor Larry Grooters, and in turn, requested their continued support. The Board members were introduced and commended for their unending loyalty to the organization. Lauretta Swanson entertained all with a few nostalgic musical selections on her "traveling" organ.

A noteworthy celebration was promised for 1993, as the Rainbow Shoppe will be celebrating their ten years in business in Charlevoix.

Guild completes soap project

The Guild of Lutheran Women of Bethany Lutheran Church in Charlevoix spent a pleasant meeting packing the soap chips collected during the summer months from area motels and hotels. There was a total of 239 pound of soap packed.

The soap collection project began in May, and ended Labor Day. The soap is collected from each participating unit in the Charlevoix area and shipped to Lutheran World Relief where it is recycled and then shipped to Third World Countries for distribution.

The Guild wishes to express their thanks to those who were so willing to help with this project and the Home-made Pie Sales which took place during July and August. The Guild's next project will be the Christmas Cookie Walk at the church in early December.

Plans are going forward to have the grounds of Bethany Lutheran Church landscaped this fall. Bids for this work have been received.

Rayders win an ugly homecoming game 21-8

If it weren't for the homecoming queen candidates and the cheerleaders, there wouldn't have been anything pretty about that game. The game contained more turnovers than you'll find in some bakeries. But what do you expect? The weather was windy, rainy and dismal.

Yet, for all the rain and sloppy play, Charlevoix prevailed 21-8 over Harbor Springs at Kipke Field Friday evening and remained undefeated in league play.

The prettiest play of the game came early in the first quarter when Rayder running back Brandon Webb scored on a 15-yard run. The run featured a beautiful cutback that transformed the Harbor Springs' defenders into laundry - nothing but pants, shirts, socks and jocks suspended in midair. Vince Voisin kicked the extra point.

Charlevoix's touchdown followed a Chris Pease interception. The interception was the first evidence of the evening of Harbor Springs' devastating passing attack - devastating to themselves. Harbor Springs threw five passes on the evening. One was completed following a touchdown for a two-point conversion. Of the others, Pease intercepted one, Webb intercepted one, Ben Whitely clubbed one to the ground and another fell incomplete.

The rain made it tough for both teams to throw the ball. Jess completed five of nine passes, but they weren't all as crisp as usual. He completed four to Voisin and one to Webb. The passes to Voisin looked good, but the pass to Webb was no tight spiral. Had there been four more passes like that in the air at the same time, chances are those passes would have been headed south and flying in a V formation.

Even though Charlevoix took the lead in the first quarter, there were signs that the game would be turnover plagued. On the sidelines in the first quarter, Jess and a running back discussed the variety of ways that handoffs were being transacted - sideways, perpendicular, point-first whatever. Late in the half a Charlevoix drive brought the ball inside the Harbor Springs five-yard line. But as Jess attempted to make a handoff, the ball squirted straight up in the air. Jess tried to bat it back to himself, but the ball evaded him and Harbor Springs recovered.

Charlevoix took control of the game in the third quarter. Jody McGlinch scored on a one-yard run with just less than eight minutes left in the quarter and three minutes later Webb scored from five yards out. Voisin kicked both extra points.

The Rayders were blessed with excellent field position in the quarter. In the second half, the rain diminished, but the wind picked up. Harbor Springs was going into the wind in the third quarter. When the Rayders stopped Harbor Springs inside the 20-yard-line, the Rams elected to punt on fourth down. The Harbor Springs kicker put up a high, short kick which blew backwards and went out of bounds less than 10 yards ahead of the original line of scrimmage. Looking at the punt from a Harbor Springs point of view there was both bad news and good news. On the one hand the punt went less than 10 yards. But there was no return.

In the fourth quarter, Charlevoix faced a punting situation from just about the same spot on the field. Could Charlevoix have an an less successful punt? Yep. You betcha. The Rayder punt was blocked and a Harbor Springs player fell on it in the end zone for a touchdown. The two-point conversion made the score 21-8.

Offensively for the Rayders, McGlinch carried the ball 16 times for 161 yards, nearly twice as many yards as the entire Harbor Springs offense gained (96). Webb carried 10 times for 80 yards and likely would have had more yards; but he had to stop twice when he came to the end zone. Jess completed five of nine passes for 83 yards.

Defensively, McGlinch had nine solo tackles and four assists. Pease, returning from an injury in the second game of the year, had five solo tackles, two assists, an interception and a fumble recovery. Whitely had six solo tackles, two assists and a fumble recovery.

This Friday evening Charlevoix will host Petoskey. The traditional rivalry is a non-league game, but it could figure significantly in Charlevoix's chances of qualifying for post-season playoffs.

Golfer makes hole-in-one

Jim Ellis scored a hole in one at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course October 6th. He made the shot on the seventh hole with a two iron. LPGA teaching pro Joan Waha reported that it was the second hole in one made on the seventh hole in the last six weeks. There have only been a total of six holes in one made on that hole in the last 20 years.

Ellis shot a 39 for the nine hole round.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

I just finished reading a book by a former resident of Horton Bay. I really had no idea that we had a historical celebrity in the neighborhood. Ernest Hemmingway's piece, "The Son Also Rises," chronicles the life of Jake Barnes and his writing friends in the middle of the twenties. You can read about them wandering Europe, running with the bulls, and seemingly visiting just about every bar you could imagine.

Don't get the wrong idea. I genuinely like the story. You alternately felt sympathy and anger at Robert Cohn. You wondered if Lady Ashley ever met a man that she didn't like. The unfolding of the mystery of the bullfight and its real beauty gives you a sense of appreciation for what the uninitiated may think is cruel. There was trout fishing in a high mountain stream. There were word pictures of the Gothic cathedrals of France and Spain that clearly unfolded in your mind's eye. It was a beautiful, yet sad, story.

What made it sad was how Hemmingway felt that his generation was without values. He felt that true love had died and that they were incapable of reviving it within their lives. World War I found people coming to grips with some realities that they had never imagined and he felt the world would never be the same. Hemmingway's Jake Barnes went to church several times in the story to pray. Surrounded by the candles, the pageantry, and the rich heritage of his Catholic faith, he was frustrated by the emptiness he felt inside when he tried to exercise his faith.

I could spend more time telling the story, but this is where I want to stop. You see the world has changed dramatically in the last few years. Things that have loomed as threats to our nation have gone. Our economy is going through its own version of shakiness. Hardly a day goes by without the big city papers headlining some form of violence. We haven't lost our values have we? We are capable of love, aren't we? We do know that God listens and gets involved in the lives of every faithful child, don't we?

It has never been more important for those who believe to stand up for the values of the faith that has been placed in our keeping. There really are people who are wondering in search of something to put their hopes in just like in Hemmingway's day. If they cannot find it in the lives of believers, where will they find it? It really isn't that hard for us to share our faith. The prophet Micah put it this way, "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good. And what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God." The values of our faith and the love of our God are the only hope that will endure.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of God. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

SPORTS

Although it rained, fortunately it wasn't too cold for the homecoming court during the halftime ceremony.

Chris Pease, returning to action after being out for four games with a knee injury, stopped Harbor Springs' opening drive with this interception.

Tie breaker decides first contest

Keith Carey won this year's first Charlevoix Courier football contest, correctly predicting 9 of 11 games. John Richards also guessed correctly on 9 of 11 games. Carey and Richards both guessed high on the tiebreaker game, but Carey was closer.

For winning, Carey will receive lunch for two at the Flight Deck.

A bit of guidance

Last week, during the first week of the Charlevoix Courier football contest, it became obvious that some of the entrants could stand a little guidance. Here's some insight on this week's games:

Charlevoix - Petoskey: The next two weeks with Petoskey and Traverse City St. Francis will show whether this year's version of the Rayders are contenders or pretenders. This game's one of this week's toughest calls, but let's say Charlevoix's offensive and defensive lines come up big and get the Rayders a win. Pick - Charlevoix.

East Jordan - Elk Rapids: East Jordan has been hit by injuries. Pick - Elk Rapids.

Central Lake - Gaylord St. Marys: Central Lake has benefited in recent years from the addition of some beef and talent from neighboring Ellsworth. Pick - Central Lake.

Atlanta - San Francisco: Going into this season, the Falcons were over-rated. San Francisco ain't what they once were, but they'll beat Atlanta. Pick - San Francisco.

Houston - Denver: Denver gets the edge on defense. Pick - Denver.

Kansas City - Dallas: The Chiefs defense is awesome. Aikman is going to feel the heat. Pick - Kansas City.

Michigan - Indiana: Michigan may slip up somewhere this season, but it ain't gonna be against Indiana. Pick - Michigan.

Michigan State - Minnesota: MSU still needs help on defense, but Milt the Thrill is always an offensive threat. Pick - Michigan State.

Kent State - Central Michigan: Which CMU team is going to show up this week? Let's say the same one that beat MSU. Ooooh-Wah. Chip-ooooh-Wah. Pick - Central Michigan.

California - USC: A good game on the west coast. California has improved while USC has faded in recent years, but USC still takes this game. Pick - USC.

Tennessee - Alabama: Just to keep a geographic balance, let's look at a game from the southeast - a game between two over-rated teams. Take Tennessee, they're less over-rated and play less of a cupcake schedule. Pick - Tennessee.

Smith, Chamberlain lead Rayder cross country teams

Matt Smith of Charlevoix waded faster than anyone else to take first place in the boys' Class A-B and large C race at the Claire Martin Cross Country Invitational Saturday morning. Nearly 400 runners from northern and mid Michigan competed in the race at the Belvedere Golf Course.

Smith finished in a time of 16:45, just one second ahead of Jon Davis of Gaylord. As a team, Charlevoix placed third behind Cadillac and Traverse City.

In the girls' Class C-D race, Becca Chamberlain of Charlevoix was the top area finisher. She placed ninth with a time of 22:20. The race was won by Traci Knudsen of Suttons Bay with a time of 19:47.

The Suttons Bay boys' team put on an impressive display in winning the Class C-D meet, giving the defending Class C State Champion Rayders something to consider in preparing for the Class C Regional race three weekends from now in Benzonia. Suttons Bay took first place in the C-D race with 46 points which was 26 points better than second place Elk Rapids.

Other individual finishes for the Rayders were:

Boys - 12-Mike Bush, 17:26; 17-Zach Pajtas, 17:33; 26-Matt Dickinson, 17:53; 28-Eric Hess, 17:58; 37-Josh Scheels, 18:22; 41-Gary Arnold, 18:34; 45-Paul Henne, 18:54; 48-Josh Dhaseleer, 18:57; 53-Chris LeButt, 19:10.

Girls - 14-Elsa Conlan, 22:44; 16-Trina Holm, 22:57; 17-Aimee Livingston, 23:35; 20-Lisa Hoadley, 23:36; 21-Nicole Moore, 23:44; 22-Lara Tank, 23:49.

This coming Saturday Charlevoix will be racing at the Reese Invitational.

Basketball team loses

Sometimes you shoot the lights out and other times you shoot as though the lights were out. Charlevoix's girls' basketball team shot as though the lights were out and failed to score a single point in the second quarter of Thursday evening's game against Harbor Springs. Harbor Springs took advantage of the Rayder's scoring drought to turn a 13-10 first quarter deficit into a 21-13 halftime lead and ultimately a 45-41 win.

The loss was Charlevoix's fourth straight and dropped their season record to 4-7 and their conference record to 3-4.

Liz Grunch led the Rayders with 17 points while Sheila Siegart contributed eight.

Beaver Island phone system improved

TDS Telecom has announced that the customers of their subsidiary, Island Telephone Company, on Beaver Island, will take a giant step into the computer age on Oct. 28 Island Telephone Company, along with engineers from Northern Telecom, the equipment manufacturer, are in the process of installing new digital switching system.

"This system, including associated support equipment, is expected to cost more than $2 million, and will serve nearly 563 customers," said the manager of Island, Eugene Newell. The new digital switching system is replacing a mechanical-relay type switch that has served this exchange for more than 20 years.

According to Newell, the new system will offer many new features as well as improve local telephone service. There are new optional custom calling features that will be available including Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Conference Calling, Speed Call, Teen Service, Ring Again, and Centrex Service. All of the services will be available on an individual of package basis for a monthly fee.

One of the changes that the new switching system will provide is a different sounding dial tone. "Customers with touchtone service will notice that their calls will be completed much faster," Newell said. The most significant change however, is the need to dial all 7 digits when making local calls. "We will be sending more information to each of our customers to help them understand the changes," added Newell.

For more information call (517) 871-9388.

Lake levels are on the rise

September was a wet month in the Great Lakes Drainage basin with all lakes receiving above average rainfall, for the third straight month. The 30-day outlook published by the National Weather Service projects moderate to heavy precipitation for the Great Lakes region for the month of October.

The forecast, published in the "Monthly Bulletin of Lake Levels for the Great Lakes", projects Lakes Superior and Michigan-Huron to be near their long-term average levels for the next six months while Lakes St. Clair, Erie, and Ontario will likely remain above their long-term averages levels.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows. All elevations are referenced to International Great Lakes Datum 1985.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of September were at elevation 579.16 feet (176.53 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or 20 inches (51 cm.) above Chart Datum. This was about 5 inches (13 cm.) above what it was a year ago, and about 1 inch (3 cm.) below one month ago. The September monthly mean level at 579.16 feet (176.53 meters) was about 2 inches (5 cm.) below the long-term average for September. The lakes, however, remained about 30 inches (76 cm.) above their all-time September monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1964. The forecast shows that at the end of October, the level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 2 inches (5 cm.) below what it was at the end of September. The lakes are expected to continue their seasonal decline into February. The water level in March 1993, is expected to be about 2 inches (5 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, and about 1 inch (3 cm.) above what it was in 1992.

Officers plan shooting competition

Area law enforcement and security marksmen will test their shooting skills at the annual "Turkey Shoot", hosted by Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point plant and the Charlevoix Police Department.

The "Shoot" will take place Oct. 17 at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and will match teams of sharpshooters from Burns Security, the Charlevoix police department.

Fishing has a long history in Charlevoix

Salmon, finding their path blocked in Medusa Creek, often leap out of the water in an attempt to make their way farther upstream.

By Ralph McRae

There is a saying that the more things change, the more they remain the same. That certainly is not true for the fishing business in the Great Lakes - and especially for Charlevoix.

Many years ago there were nine commercial fishing operations running out of Charlevoix. It was big business, requiring scores of men and many horses to cut the ice in Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix - ice which was used to preserve thousands of tons of fish that ended up being shipped to Detroit and Chicago. Refrigeration was a tremendous boost and allowed the distribution of fish to even more markets.

Then came the lamprey eel, destroying and depleting the lake trout population. It took years to reduce the eel population.

Years ago perch could also be found in large numbers here. At one time the Ward Brothers had 80 steel rowboats they rented out to perch fishermen. But then came the alewives and in a few seasons they almost entirely wiped out the perch population. To combat the alewives, Pacific Salmon were introduced to the Great Lakes.

The planted salmon brought back thousands of sport fishermen to all parts of the Great Lakes, especially to Lake Michigan. The salmon must be planted every year because, unfortunately, salmon have short life spans - coho salmon three years and the chinook salmon four years. Chinook salmon, also called King salmon, come from the northern Pacific waters.

Michigan plants between six and seven million salmon each year. At Medusa Creek near Charlevoix approximately 250,000 to 300,000 are planted each spring.

Adult salmon return to the stream where they were planted. The amazing phenomenon is based on the salmon's ability to forever retain the smell of the habitat surrounding the stream in which they are planted. This is firmly imprinted into their navigation systems.

At the time they are planted, salmon are called fingerlings and are about two and a-half inches long. At the Medusa Creek they are held in the creek by a weir for two or three weeks prior to release to imprint the stream. To make this process more effective, chemicals are added to the water. The same chemicals are added to the water in the fall when adult salmon are returning to the stream.

Adult salmon desperately strive to reach the upper waters of the stream so they can spawn and complete their life cycle. They die shortly after spawning.

At Medusa Creek, they come into the containment area 24 hours a day from September to the beginning of November and are captured by the thousands. Those that do not make it back to Charlevoix are the ones which are caught sometime during their four-year life in the Great Lakes.

Coho, sometimes called silver, salmon were first planted in northern parts of Michigan, but now are only planted in the Platte, Little Manistee and St. Joseph Rivers. The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) believes the two-thirds of the coho salmon are caught off of the Wisconsin shore. The DNR is trying to count the salmon that return to their original bases. In recent years the DNR has implanted small pins, called micro tags, in salmon noses. Fish that are tagged have a small part of a rear fin clipped off. Approximately 20 percent of the fish planted are tagged. The microtagging is all done by hand. About 100,000 of the fish planted at Charlevoix were tagged.

Scores of fishermen come to Charlevoix every day during salmon season, more on the weekends. They are here at all hours of the day. They must have a fishing license and the necessary stamps to be legal. They must also stay at least 100 feet away from the mouth of Medusa Creek.

About 9 million gallons of water per day come gushing out of an 18" pipe that drains from the quarries of Medusa. The water seeps into the quarry from Lake Michigan. Three men each work eight-hour shifts round the clock to guard the weir which is enclosed by a steel fence.

To make the final 200 feet of the stream the salmon must struggle against the current and also leap over large rocks which impede their progress. Some of the weaker salmon must rest to renew their strength, but eventually 96 percent of them reach their goal.

Some of the salmon are caught off the walkway along the Medusa ship channel. Many more are caught by fishermen wearing hip waders and wading out from the shore. Many of these fishermen spend many hours in the cold water. Very few of them catch their limit of three fish per day.

It is a big thrill for those who are lucky enough to land a salmon. Various lures are used, including small pouches of salmon eggs. There must be thousands of snagged lures on the lake bottom. Some of the heaviest salmon can be almost three feet long and weigh up to 35 pounds.

The salmon have accomplished the goal of controlling the alewife population. They have reduced the alewife population by 90 percent and salmon now get more than half of their food intake by feeding on chubs and smelt. Originally, there were seven types of chubs, now six of them have been eliminated. The DNR is now making certain the final chub family not only survives, but increases in numbers.

Atlantic salmon are now being introduced in large Michigan inland lakes such as Torch Lake. They are introduced in addition to steelhead trout. Most of the coho and chinook salmon tend to go to the southern part of Lake Michigan for much of their lives prior to returning north.

It is illegal to catch salmon by snagging or netting. The sport is to catch them with fishing poles and lures.

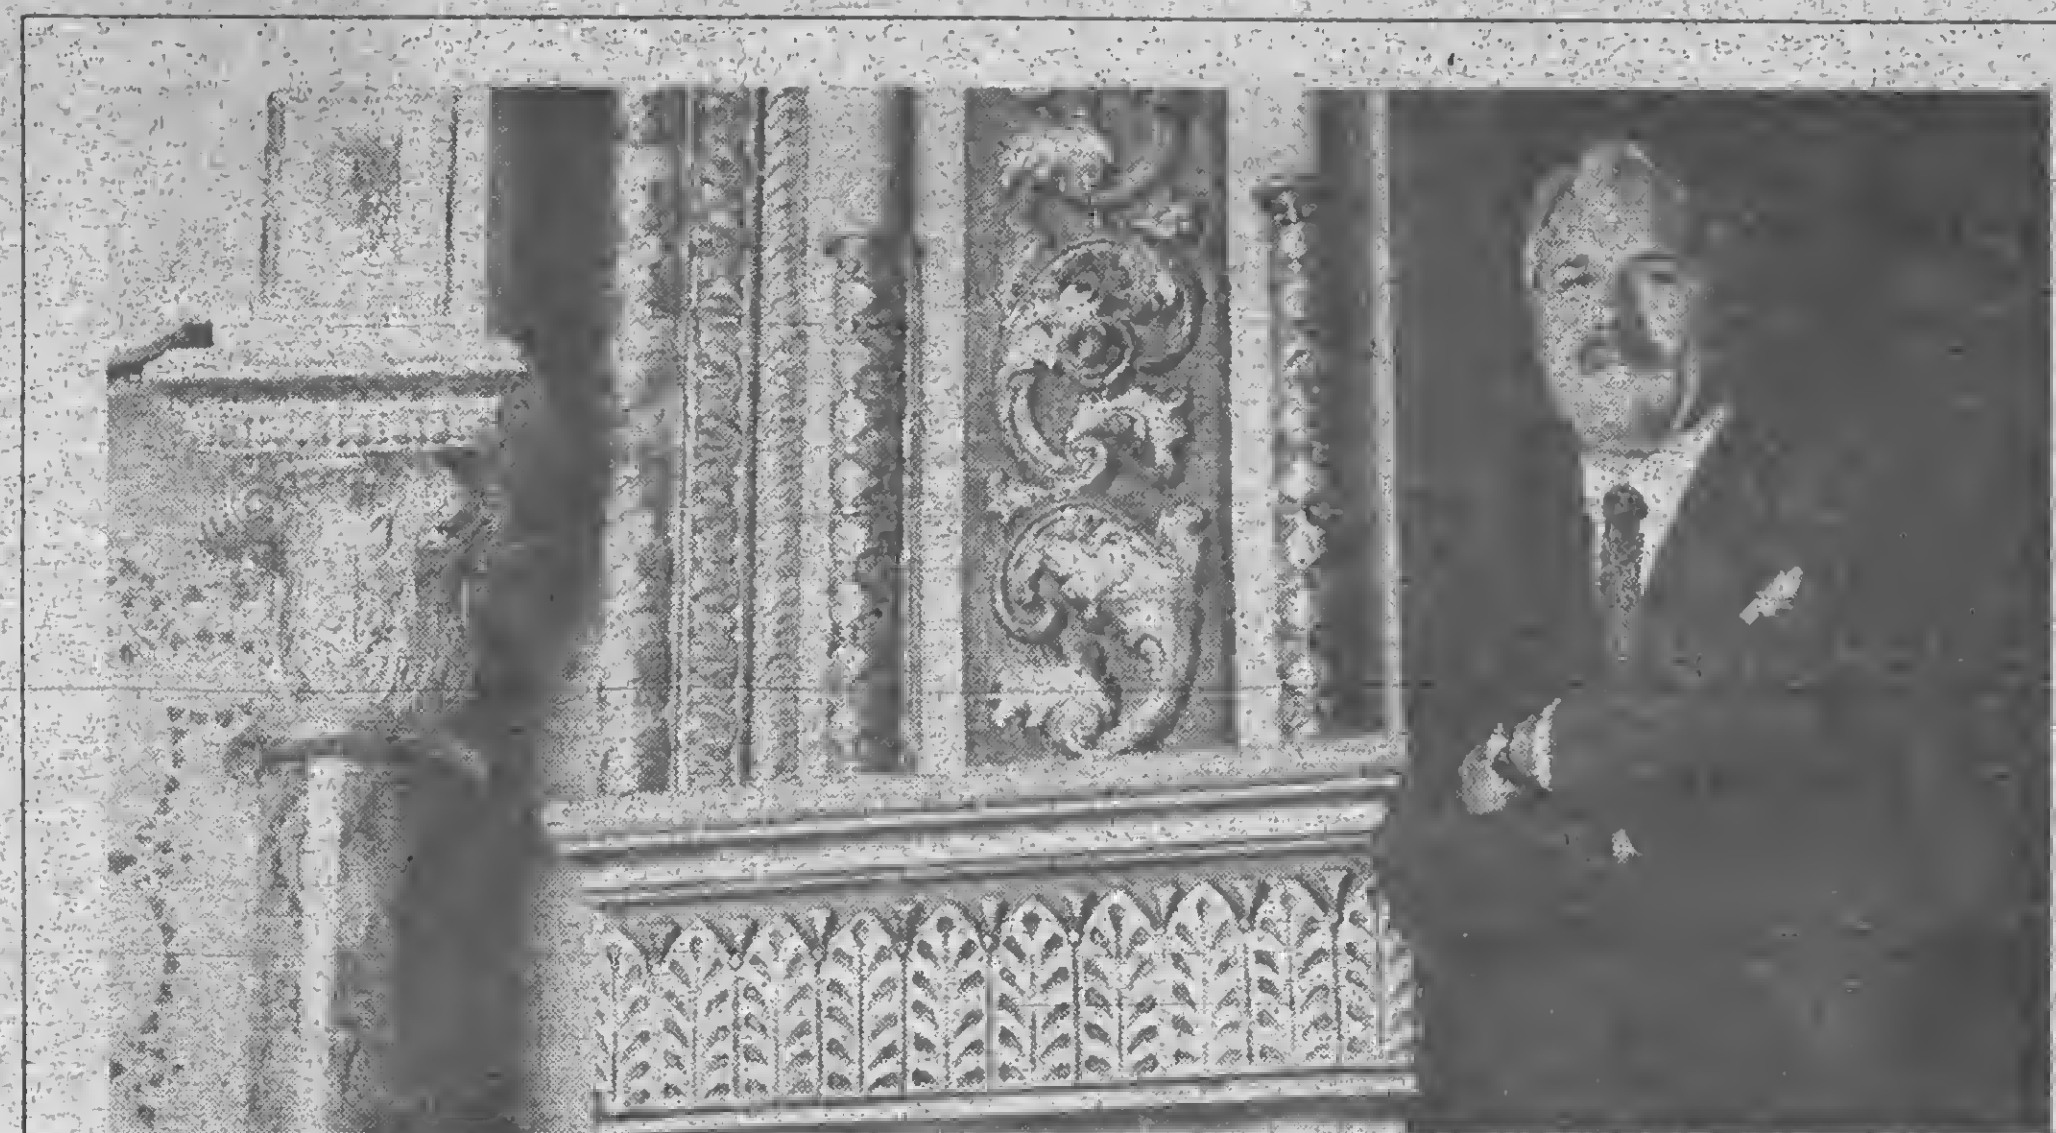

During the spawning season, the salmon are periodically harvested from the containment weir. A mesh over the containment area keeps the fish from leaping out. At the end of the weir there is a round harvest net on a boom.

Tempotech Industries of Hart,

Michigan has a contract with the DNR to remove the more than 1,000 fish a week that come into the weir during the peak of the run. The salmon are loaded into wooden crates with ice and trucked away.

At the Hart processing plant, the fish eggs are removed and will be sold for consumption as will the meaty parts once they are processed.

Most of the fish caught by fishermen will be pressure cooked and then canned in Mason jars. Some of the salmon is also smoked.

ONE OF THE REASONS WE CALL THEM SMART BUSINESS LOANS.

When Tim Burden wanted a line of credit for his Traverse City construction specialty company,

Scot MacDonald, Senior Vice President, First of America

Scot MacDonald helped with a First of America Smart Business Loan. Because smart business owners know the time has never been better to take advantage of low interest rates. And they're making their move.

First of America understands that by helping businesses succeed, we help the economy and the community. Burden Group, for example, will now be able to take on a multimillion dollar renovation job in Cleveland, which means more local jobs. And we can't measure the value of that investment in monetary terms alone.

Since the beginning of the year, we've loaned $600 million through our Smart Business Loan program. And we're ready to lend even more in the next few months.

First of America has always had a philosophy of supporting the communities we serve. So we work hard at providing competitive, customized commercial loan packages to local businesses.

If you think your business could benefit from a Smart Business Loan, call any of our First of America Bank offices listed below. You'll find our Smart Business Loans can give you a way to get things moving.

Flower garden: A hotbed of controversy

City Council hears flower bed in park arguments for a second time

By L. Scott Swanson

A flower bed controversy which bloomed in the spring has been tilled again in the fall.

The flora in question extends into a public park west of Park Avenue, near the end of Lake Street. Cheryl Georgi, who lives with her husband Richard in the home adjacent to the park's south end, planted the flower bed.

Charlevoix's City Council heard arguments about the flower bed at its May 4 meeting. At that meeting some people also maintained that in addition to the flower bed, a portion of the driveway at the Georgi home also extends onto park property. Discussion indicated the driveway may have been on public property for nearly 40 years. City attorney Jim Young advised the council that fighting in court about the driveway might very well prove pointless from the City's standpoint. He said a judge might rule that yes the driveway was on city property, but the city must still allow the homeowner to continue to use the driveway.

At the May 4 meeting, the council directed Young to draft a letter indicating that the City is not going to fight about the driveway, but is not relinquishing any rights to the property and might remove the flower bed when park improvement plans go forward.

Several years ago, the Charlevoix Womens Club began an improvement program in the park with the help of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service. Monday evening, June Cross of the Womens Club said the group would like to see the boundary lines of the park defined. She said defining the park boundary isn't a matter regarding only the Georgis, but whoever lives adjacent to the park.

Annabelle Webb, a resident of Park Avenue and a member of the Charlevoix Garden Club, opposed the city taking action which would lead to the removal of the flower bed. She said the flowers in question are a beautiful garden and the City needs more, not fewer, gardens.

Bob Gill, another Park Avenue resident, said the question is not one of aesthetics, but ethics.

"You don't do anything on your neighbor's property without consulting your neighbor first," he maintained. He said encroachment problems happen and they start from small things and snowball and the public suffers.

Dan Barron, an attorney speaking on behalf of the Georgis, said the property is undoubtedly a public park and the Georgis have made no contention to the contrary. He said the question is what the City is going to allow in its park. Barron said that decision should be made by the City Council, not by the Womens Club or any other group. Barron said this is by no means the only situation in which people plant flowers on public property. As an example, he pointed to Operation Petunia in which miles of flowers are planted on public property. Barron asked the council to consider if it is better for the park to tear out a flower garden and put in posts, boards and pine trees.

"Why don't we build with what we have? We have something that's very nice," Barron said.

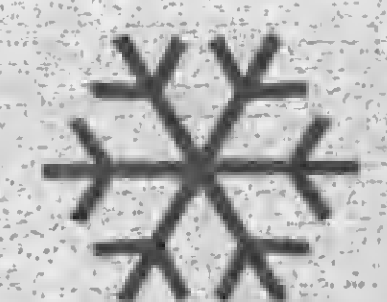

Former city council member Bob Timms characterized the argument as a "tempest in a teapot." He said it sounds like some people would do away with the flower garden just to prove a point - that the city owns the park. Timms suggested leaving the flower garden in place and putting it under the auspices of the Garden Club or some other civic minded group.

Charlevoix Garden Club President Rebecca Haney indicated that she would be willing to take a proposal to help with beautification of the park to the club's board of directors. She said the Garden Club would be more than happy to work with the Women's Club.

Carol Campbell and Larry Sullivan, both residents of the area near the park, said that there have been problems in the past with people camping in the park and litter and lack of upkeep. Sullivan said he feels there is a need for some type of demarcation of what is and is not the park.

After listening to discussion for more than half an hour the council decided to have Young draft a letter to the Georgis indicating that they have 15 days to remove any personal property from the park property and that after that the City would establish some type of boundary line and have the City Planning Commission work on a comprehensive plan for the entire park. The motion was made by council member Ted Felter and supported by Jackie Cross. It passed 4-2 with Pat Gaskin and Cheri Hoffman voting opposed.

By Tuesday morning, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful (KCB) and Garden Club officers were working on a plan which would allow the flower garden to continue to exist while also defining the park boundary.

According to KCB president Bruce MacArthur, the executive boards of KCB and the Garden Club are planning to have a joint meeting Nov. 9.

Haney is going to recommend that the Garden Club adopt the flower garden as its 12th garden that the club takes care of.

MacArthur is going to recommend that KCB provide funding for a split-rail fence that will clearly define the park's southern boundary.

The two groups will also consider the establishment of a similar garden and fence at the park's north boundary, near Michigan Beach.

OPINIONS

by EDITH GILBERT

People who own a video cassette recorder may be delighted to know that the Charlevoix Library is one of the few in Northern Michigan that has a well-rounded selection of video tapes for you. There are enough interesting subjects to choose from so that one could be entertained, amused, and instructed throughout the many long winter months ahead.

Let me name but a few topics among the 125 tapes that are available to those who live within the Charlevoix School District. Interested in military campaigns? There's a choice of observing "Schwarzkopf - How the War Was Won" or all five of the historic "Civil War Series" by Ken Burns. Interested in armchair travel? Choose from among a dozen or more major European and Asian countries; as well as a tantalizing video that caught my eye called, "Touring the Great Festivals of Europe." Interested in sports? In addition to videos on skiing and football, there's one that librarian Mary Beth Wallack says everyone will surely enjoy called "Sports Bloopers" from CNN's Play of the Day. Charmed by nostalgic, popular musicals? Borrow "Carousel," "Music Man," "My Fair Lady," or "Fiddler on the Roof." Want to entertain the children over the holidays? There's a huge selection of Walt Disney cartoons. Planning a wedding? There are two helpful wedding tapes that may give you a clue as to what kind of a wedding you'd like to have - or not have. Interested in space? There is a new four volume series on the "History of Space Flight" to stimulate your flights of fancy. For the homemaker, there are videos on garnishing, baking, sewing and parenting. For fitness buffs, "A Total Body Workout" would be the answer. There are also popular classic films available at the library, such as "Driving Miss Daisy."

For junior executives, salespersons and corporate go-getters interested in polishing their code of etiquette, I strongly recommend two videos produced by Marjabelle Young Stewart. Both are called the "Art of Dining." One gives invaluable tips on how to conduct oneself during a "Business Lunch", and the other guides one easily through a "Formal Dinner". (The latter video is a smoother production) Both include a chapter on how to handle tricky foods gracefully, such as artichokes, watermelons, lobster, spaghetti, and fried chicken. In addition, Stewart points out subtle signals such as putting the napkin on the table to end the meal. "We all know the napkin belongs on our lap when we sit down!"

Watching the "Business Lunch" video may also be of great comfort to a young man planning a dinner date in a nice restaurant before the senior prom. Becoming familiar with the law of etiquette can't help increase one's pleasure, popularity and success on any business or social occasion.

When the snow flies, remember what the distinguished writer, Oliver Goldsmith, said, "books have their time as well as cucumbers." And so do videos.

Candidate should make positions known

Editor,

The upcoming election reminds us of the importance of being able to determine just where the candidates stand on the issues. Well informed voters have always been the backbone of our democratic system.

Public office carries with it many responsibilities, not the least of which is the obligation of elected officials to advise the public of their personal positions on the issues. Without such information voters are, at best, forced to speculate as to what views a candidate may hold. By withholding such information, a candidate does disservice to the very voters that he is seeking to represent.

This unfortunate possibility has become reality in the first ward race for the Charlevoix City Council. The "Bridge Beat" publication of the Chamber of Commerce recently asked both candidates, Bill Haggard and Don Meggison, specific questions regarding the future of Downtown Charlevoix. Bill Haggard responded in detail. Don Meggison refused to provide a written response and instead verbally indicated that he would vote "the way his constituents told him to."

It is certainly important for an official to listen to their constituents. But when a candidate uses such reasoning as an alibi to evade the

Letters to the editor

A do-it-yourself State of the Union address

Editor,

What do you think would be contained in a State of the Union address if it were given today? Well first there is the national debt. This is a nice little problem to tackle, it is only around $16,532.26 per person. For a family of four that comes to about $66,129.03; give or take a few cents. So what is the problem, this is chump change of most of us. For those of you out of work (there are only about 20 million of you according to the government, and we know the government always tells us the truth), it is still no problem for you to pay your part of the debt because Americans save so much of their money.

Now is a good time to talk about the problem of unemployment. Unemployment in this country is not so bad. You can always go begging for a handout from the government or you pack up the family and move to Mexico to get your job back at all of fifty cents per hour. If you are real lucky you might be able to get a job in your own home town serving your neighbors hamburgers for $4.25 for each of those ten hours a week you're working. Now let's look at crime. This is the only country in the world where you can get mugged while walking down the street and then again pay another $37,000 for each year the mugger is in prison. All the facts about crime are not bad. Thanks to our justice system most of the criminals will never make it to prison so the bill to the tax payers will not be as high. Aren't those lawyers thoughtful?

If you didn't win the lottery this week, don't despair, you can find a lawyer that will sue someone for you for any reason you or he can think of. I know that I sleep better at night with the knowledge that the U.S. has 8 percent of the world's population and more than 10 percent of the world's lawyers. Just think, this legal protection is only costing a family of three $2,000 each and every year (this figure was provided by the American Bar Association).

Drugs are a big problem in this country. I wonder why. Some person flipping hamburgers taking home $120 a week, having more than a $16,000 debt and paying out $37,000 for some criminal, would want to take drugs and try to escape this wonderful life. If this person were to take a few too many pills then they or the tax payers could pay the highest rate in the world for standard medical care.

When I was in the Army I always wondered why they issued the doctors turbans and would not allow them to speak English. Now I know. We should change the inscription on the statue of Liberty to "Give us your tired, your hungry, and your whack doctors". Why shouldn't we be paying outrageous fees for some of the worst medical care in the industrialized world? We have been doing it for years with education. This country has the best education money can buy, but then again the dollar does not buy much today. I think all the concern over education is unwarranted. Just look at South America, they are doing fine without a good education system (they got our jobs). South America has proven you don't need a skilled work force to attract fifty cent an hour jobs; just the willingness to work 16 hours a day. If we let things stay just as they are, everything will be just fine. Maybe we can get other countries to send us food so most of us will have something to eat.

Things are looking good so far, but don't go away because there is more to come. We won the world war, the REDs are defeated and it only cost us our financial future. You know, we won that war with Japan too and we know what that cost us, looks like we would learn. You know we lost the Vietnam War, but the North Vietnamese issues, it brings into question their basic understanding of the issues and/or the reason they wish to withhold their views from the public.

Our frustration with this situation has grown with the recent refusal by Don Meggison to participate in the "Candidate Night" forum proposed by the Charlevoix Courier. Once again, Bill Haggard accepted and Don Meggison declined the opportunity to publicly present their views.

The business people of Downtown Charlevoix, like all residents of our town, have a right to know where the candidates stand on the issues. We have a right to know if Don Meggison intends, as he sometimes indicates, to eliminate programs, projects and events which benefit our businesses, our employees and the Charlevoix economy.

Mr. Meggison's failure to respond, in spite of numerous prior opportunities, indeed speaks loudly. Likewise, an eleven hour response through a newspaper candidate questionnaire would now ring hollow.

FAMILY

...Habitat group hosts open house

more than 50 individuals, businesses and church groups from Charlevoix contributed in one way or another to the project.

The local Habitat group was founded in the spring of 1990. Most of the first year was spent getting paperwork in order. Since that time, the group received a lot from the City of Boyne City and contributions of time and money from a wide variety of sources and have been able to construct a $30,000 home which will house a family of five.

Dan and Sherri Robinson and their three children are the family who will live in the home. They contributed more than 500 hours of work toward construction of the home and will also help build the next Habitat home.

Families chosen to live in Habitat for Humanity homes make a small downpayment and interest free mortgage payments. The mortgage payments go back into a fund used to construct additional homes. The goal of the Habitat for Humanity program is to make it possible for people to own their own homes.

Hough said the home built in Boyne City is not elaborate, but is very nice. It is a three bedroom home with ample closet space, a dining room, living room and front porch.

Heather Renee Bradley and Dean Thomas Behan were married September 19 in a garden ceremony held at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride is the daughter of Paul and Connie Bradley of Charlevoix. The groom is the son of Mrs. John Behan of Petoskey.

125 guests, including guests from California, Florida, and France, witnessed the double ring rites which were performed by Rev. Mike Mitchell. He was assisted by Rev. Cecil Drost, the grandfather of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The couple exchanged their vows under an arbor decorated with netting, cedar, and white satin bows with white doves. The bride wore a white tea length gown featuring a princess waistline, a deep scalloped V back, and a fitted bodice embellished with pearls and sequins. Her fingertip veil was attached to a crown accented with silk flowers, pearls, and sequins. County commissioners delay benefit decision

By Laurie Lounsbury
County employees about to retire will have to wait a little longer to find out if their dependents will receive health and medical benefits. The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners decided last Wednesday to delay their decision to cut benefits for retired employee's dependents. This is the fourth delay of the commissioner's resolution to eliminate retiree's dependent benefits.

"We had a resolution that passed six months ago, then we keep delaying implementing it," lamented board chairman Don Smith. "It looks like we're afraid to make a decision."

The commissioners originally decided to delay implementation of the resolution when county employees and department heads voiced complaints to commissioners, saying that the commissioners should have consulted the employees before making the decision.

Study based on national figures

The $1,500 actuarial study paid for by Charlevoix County actually didn't say much about the actual costs of retirement benefits for county employees. The figures in the study were based on national averages, which in reality were not close to Charlevoix's figures. A front cover sheet prepared by the Charlevoix County Clerk's office pointed out some discrepancies in the report, including:

* That the figures should have been amortized over 20 years instead of 8.85 years.

* That Blue Cross premiums for retirees for the year 1992 were listed at $31,022, which is 16 percent higher than the actual cost.

The commissioners decided to delay the implementation of the resolution until they had an actuarial study done. The actuarial study was supposed to provide commissioners with projections of the costs to pay retired employee's dependent benefits. The study was based on national averages, which differed significantly from Charlevoix's costs and figures. The study had a figure of $1,568,934 for unfunded accumulated post-retirement benefit obligation at the end of the year. This figure is important because government agencies must pre-fund any pension plans. "Pay as you go is going to be illegal. Any pension is going to have to be pre-funded, and it's going to be expensive," said Smith.

Several commissioners raised doubts about the accuracy of the study.

Commissioner Walt Hufford said, "We know it's going to cost us a lot. Whether that study is accurate or not, we know it's going to cost us a lot."

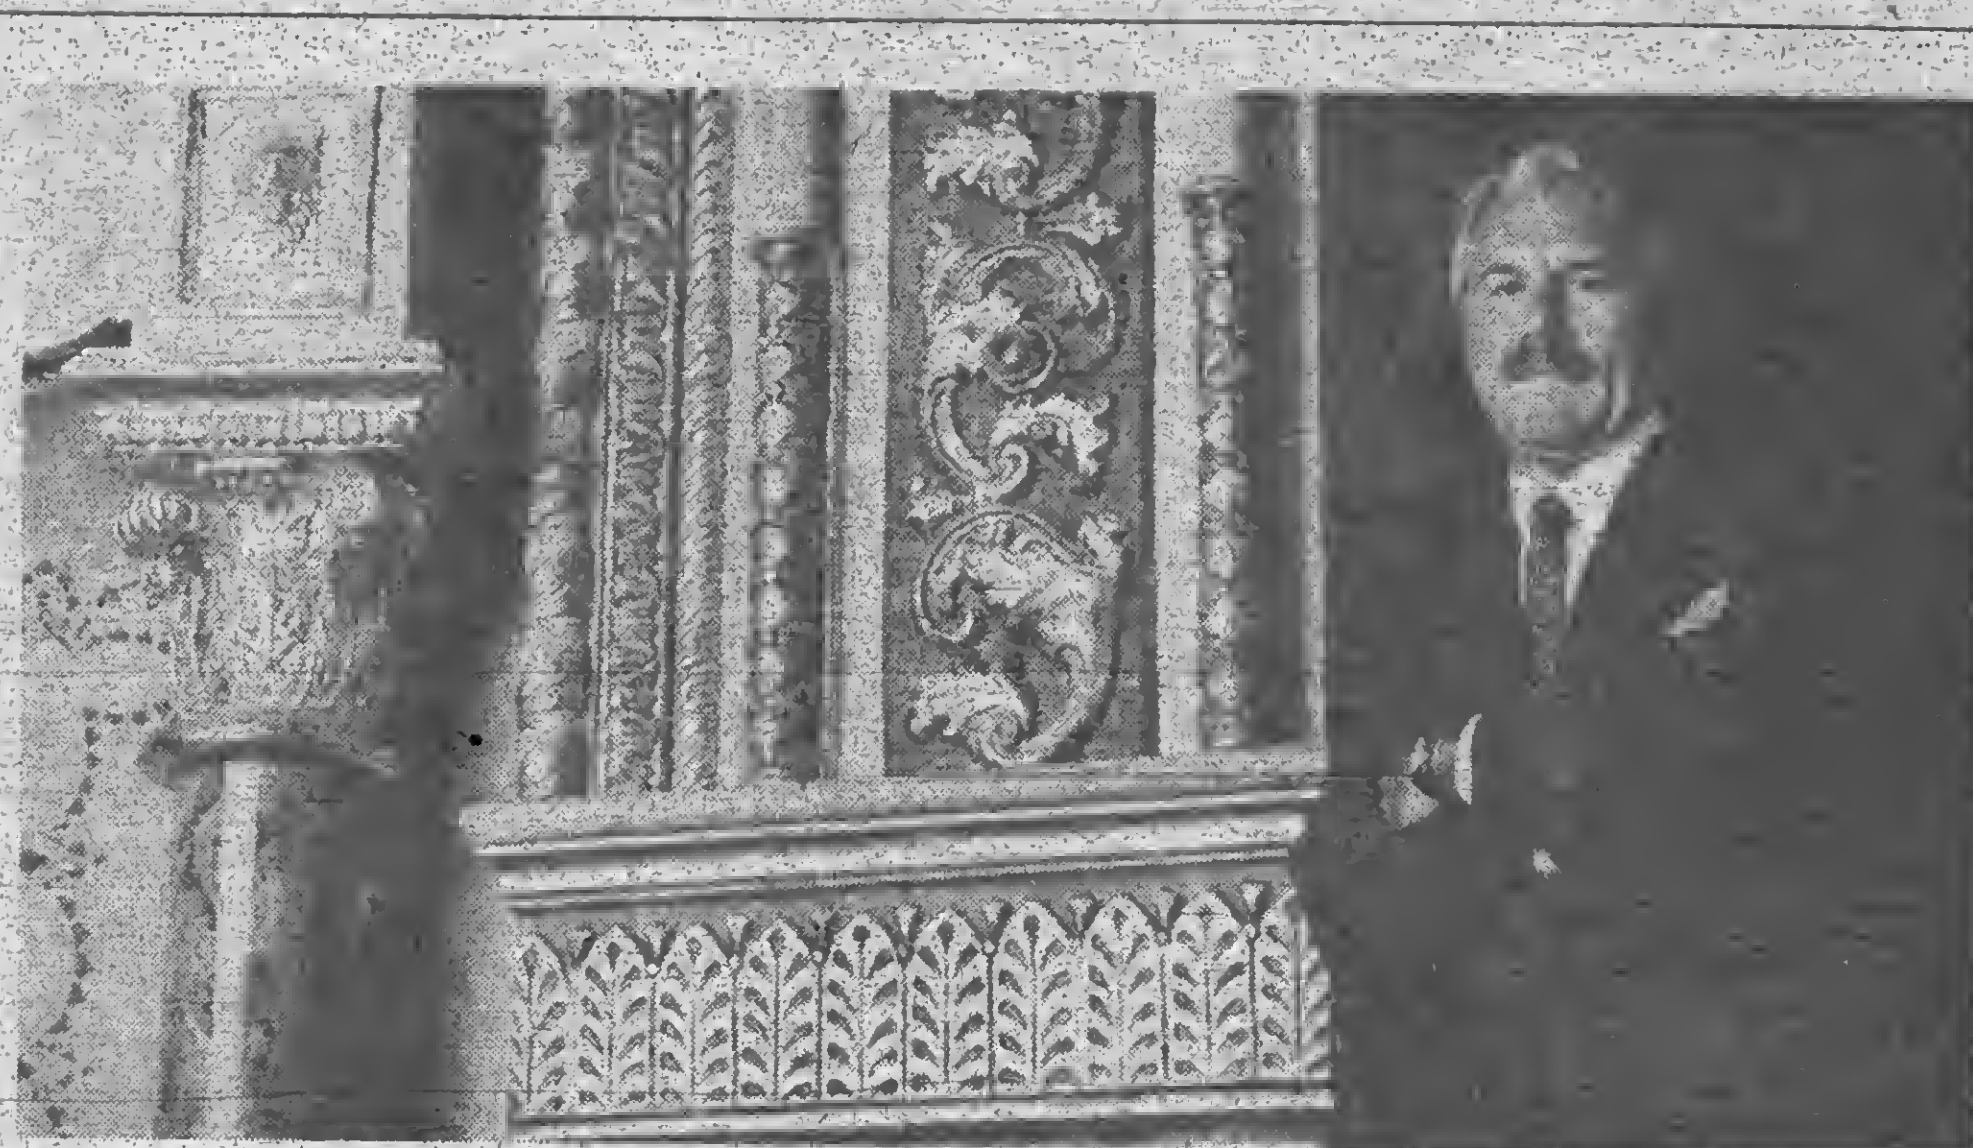

Hufford also suggested that paying benefits for retired employees and their dependents was an inequitable benefit, because some employees would need it and others wouldn't. "Maybe we should increase the pension itself. That would benefit the people who have been here the longest, the most," Hufford said. Hufford also said that he didn't think the board of commissioners that approved the benefit plan was aware of the long term costs that the board would be obligated to pay. "Basically what I'm saying is let's buy our way out of it. I think it's a lousy plan," Hufford said.

The 1986 board of commissioners voted to extend medical and health benefits to retired county employees and their dependents. "It was railroaded through, and there was much self interest involved with that board," said Smith. "I realized ever since I voted for it in '86 that it was a bad decision. I've really regretted it many times since," he added.

A motion to extend the implementation of the resolution until December 23rd was passed. "I want a final decision on this before the first of the year," Smith said.

Scott MacDonald helped with a First of America Smart Business Loan. Because smart business owners know the time has never been better to take advantage of low interest rates. And they're making their move.

First of America understands that by helping businesses succeed, we help the economy and the community. Burdco Group, for example, will now be able to take on a multimillion dollar renovation job in Cleveland, which means more local jobs. And we can't measure the value of that investment in monetary terms alone.

Since the beginning of the year, we've loaned $600 million through our Smart Business Loan program. And we're ready to lend even more in the next few months.

Administrative judge's ruling raises new questions for 9-1-1

By Laurie Lounsbury

Maybe Charlevoix County will have joint 911 service with the Antrim County 911 plan. Or maybe Charlevoix County won't ever get 911 service at all.

A decision made by Administrative Law Judge Robert Hollenshead for the Public Service Commission essentially says that Charlevoix County should form a joint 911 plan with Antrim County and if they don't, then they should not be allowed to have any other 911 plan. "We're being strong-armed into the 911 plan with Antrim," said County Prosecuting Attorney Kraag Lieberman. The decision was made in an effort to resolve Charlevoix County's complaint against Antrim County in regard to the three telephone exchanges that overlap in both counties.

Antrim County wanted to include the East Jordan, Boyne City, and Boyne Falls' telephone exchanges in their 911 plan in order to reduce costs. Since those telephone exchanges are primarily in Charlevoix County, Charlevoix filed a complaint against Antrim County, asking that they exclude those three exchanges from the Antrim County plan. The Antrim and Charlevoix County Commissioners got together to discuss the possibility of a joint, two-county plan which would eliminate the problem of the three exchanges in question. After reviewing the figures, Charlevoix County decided that being in the Antrim County plan would be more expensive to Charlevoix than if Charlevoix had their own 911 plan. Antrim County's basic basic cost per line was estimated at 38 cents per line for the first five years and 24 cents per line thereafter. Charlevoix's tentative basic cost per line was estimated at 28 cents per line for the first five years and 22 cents per line thereafter. If the Boyne City, Boyne Falls, and East Jordan exchanges were removed from the Charlevoix plan, the monthly cost per line would increase to 32 cents per line for the first five years and 28 cents per line thereafter. If Antrim and Charlevoix County had a joint plan, the basic cost per line would be 37 cents for the first five years and 26 cents per line thereafter.

Charlevoix's complaint was also filed against Michigan Bell Telephone and Century Telephone. If the 582, 536, and 549 phone exchanges were not excluded from Antrim County's 911 plan, then Charlevoix didn't want those exchanges to have to pay for 911 service. The phone companies claimed that billing according to county lines is cost prohibitive. Public agencies that fall in the three exchanges may be excluded and not billed, but the exclusion does not apply to residential phone lines.

Judge Hollenshead based his decision on his findings that Antrim County acted in accordance with the Emergency Telephone Enabling Act. The Judge also found that the most reasonable solution to the dispute is for Antrim and Charlevoix Counties to form a joint 911 plan. The Judge cited the Emergency Telephone Act and said that a joint 911 plan is in keeping with the Ten Russian dancers arrived in northern Michigan last week. Friday night, they brought to mind the Siberian portion of their home country with a trip to the Charlevoix-Petoskey football game. They will be performing in Charlevoix Nov. 7.

Russian dancers arrive

By Ralph McRae

Ten Russian dancers arrived in northern Michigan last Thursday. They left their hometown of Kazan Oct. 10 and came to Charlevoix via Moscow, New York, Detroit and Petoskey.

They arrived in Detroit Thursday afternoon and were picked up in vans by Paula Holmes-Greeley, Troy Bonar and Roger Srigley.

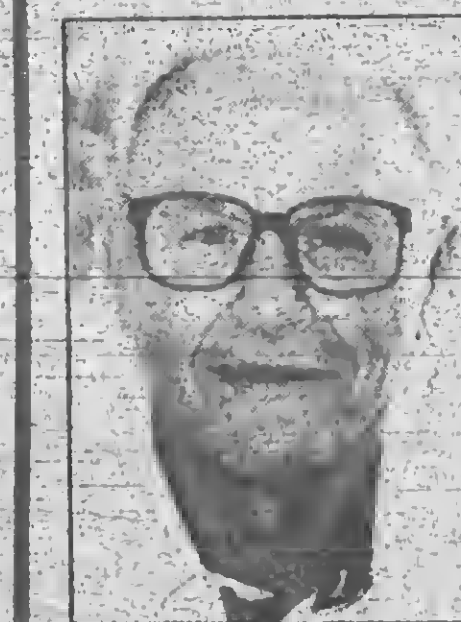

Several area people met the dancers later that evening at a welcoming party at the Srigley home.

Friday, the dancers visited the Petoskey schools and rehearsed their performance in the Petoskey Middle School Auditorium. Friday evening, some of the dancers braved the cold weather and attended the Charlevoix-Petoskey football game.

In coming weeks the dancers will be performing in Sault St. Marie, Mount Pleasant, Traverse City, Petoskey and Charlevoix. They will perform in Charlevoix at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 7 in the high school gym. Tickets for the performance will be $5 for adults, $3 for students more than 12 years old and $1 for children 12 and younger. Tickets may be purchased at the High School or at various stores throughout the community.

ATTENTION 1ST WARD VOTERS

It is time to stop the indiscriminate spending of OUR TAX DOLLARS. HAGGARD agreed to PURCHASE property for a NEW DEPT. of PUBLIC WORKS SITE for twice the APPRAISED VALUE. Only after tax payers complained did he reconsider. Final purchase price $90,000. Having purchased the property HAGGARD VOTED to purchase an EASEMENT for $4,000 to allow USE of the property. The city now owns a-UNNEEDED $94,000 LEMON.

HAGGARD says he has expanded the JOB BASE. Other than the employment of CHIEF of POLICE, PATROLMAN, FIRE CHIEF, FIREMAN, DOCKMASTER all paid by tax dollars. Where has he been responsible for development of any YEAR AROUND JOBS for LOCAL RESIDENTS?

HAGGARD VOTED to hire a FULL TIME CONSULTANT for the Electrical Dept. A 3 YEAR CONTRACT at $60,000 PER YEAR. Plus Liability, Life, Hospital Insurance. This was done without knowing what specific Engineering work will be required. Reasons given at the time included tasks that have already been done for the NEW SUBSTATION and for information for RATE INCREASES. This data was required also to determine the amount of the BOND issue required and obtained and is done. Cost of any ENGINEERING should be on an as NEEDED basis and by COMPETITIVE BID. As it was for the SUBSTATION and the DISTRIBUTION LINES. The CITY hopes to retire the BOND issue in 10 YEARS. LOCKING IN this sort of CONTRACT does nothing to assist early payoff, or reduce necessary RATE INCREASE.

The 1ST WARD needs a COUNCILMAN who will DEMAND that any EXPENDITURE of YOUR TAX DOLLARS will be thoroughly RESEARCHED, UNDERSTOOD AND JUSTIFIED by the Council before it is APPROVED, regardless of how long it takes. You have not had this kind of RESPONSIBLE REPRESENTATION from Haggard nor can you expect to get it.

AAA opens new office

By Laurie Lounsbury

The American Automobile Association does a lot more than give out road maps and provide towing service for members. In fact, AAA is the largest association in the world, according to Dan Michalski, the new AAA general agent in Charlevoix.

Michalski and his wife, Jeanine Morse Michalski, have opened up a AAA office in Charlevoix. They will be able to provide auto insurance, home, boat, and life insurance to their clients.

Dan and Jeanine Michalski have been with AAA for 11 and 13 years, respectively. They met one another in the Traverse City Office and got married in 1989. Jeanine Morse Michalski came to Charlevoix as a residential agent for AAA in 1988. AAA was interested in providing service to clients in small towns, so they began their residential agent program for the more rural areas. An agent could work out of the home and call on customers at their homes. The residential agent program also allowed AAA to test the market in small towns. "I was the guinea pig that came to Charlevoix," Jeanine said, smiling.

The market was favorable in Charlevoix, so Dan Michalski joined his wife and they opened a general agency at 1002 Bridge Street. They've spent the last nine months renovating the building that houses their business and their home.

The Michalskis offer a host of services to their clients. They have been joined by Dick Shavinski, who handles financial services, investment programs, and payroll deduction programs. Shavinski has 23 years experience in financial services, and is in the AAA Charlevoix office at least once a week.

AAA members pay annual dues of $35, and an initial joining fee of $15. Their membership will entitle them to discounts at hotels and motels, reduced prices on tours, oil changes, and even discounts at restaurants.

The Michalskis will be hosting an Open House Thursday, October 22, from 5 to 7 p.m.

Dan and Jeanine Michalski are assisted by Dick Shavinski in their newly renovated offices for AAA.

Foundation established to help area projects

A new charitable organization that will benefit residents of the Charlevoix County area has been formally launched with the election of a volunteer board of trustees, the appointment of an executive director, and the opening of an office in East Jordan.

Called the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, the organization joins a host of more than 400 similar foundations around the country whose purpose is to receive charitable donations and redistribute them to meet community needs.

Scott Beatty, a local attorney who serves as chairman of the board, says the new foundation will be a vehicle for those wishing to invest in the future of Charlevoix County. "We hope people who make their home in our area will come to see the community foundation as a worthy recipient of their charitable giving, and an important financial resource for addressing our area's social needs," he explains.

Examples of programs funded by community foundations elsewhere include adult literacy initiatives; recycling projects, nature conservancies, high school leadership training, community recreation centers, drop-out prevention programs, children's museums, companionship programs for the elderly, urban renewal efforts, and promotion of the arts. "The possibilities for enriching and improving life are almost endless," Beatty says. "We will be limited only by our imagination — and by the amount of our foundation's capital and our grantmaking capacity."

In addition to Beatty, other board officers include Michael Stowe, Vice Chairman; Velda Kammerman, Secretary; and William Lome, Treasurer. Members of the board are John Frey, Louis Hollow, Skip McDonough, Kitty McNamara, Gen Varnum, John Dixon, Joyce Boydston, The Reverend Philip Schairbaum, Steve Kircher, and Steven Weber.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation was spearheaded by a local steering committee with support of the Frey Foundation of Grand Rapids, which awarded a $100,000 grant to provide seed money for staffing and the beginning of a permanent endowment. The Malpass Foundation of East Jordan has committed operating capital for the community foundation's first year and donated furnishings and office space in the former Hite Pharmacy building in East Jordan, which soon will undergo renovation.

In August, the board hired Robert G. Tambellini as executive director of the foundation. Tambellini most recently served as City Administrator of Flint, Michigan, and has directed a number of non-profit, social service programs in the Flint area. He holds a bachelor's degree from St. Vincent College in Latrobe, Pennsylvania, and a Masters of Social Work from the University of Michigan.

Tambellini praises those civic leaders who have been working for nearly two years to develop the community foundation. "I applaud their vision and courage in laying the ground work for this foundation," he says. "Community foundations are of growing importance — not just as grantmaking organizations, but as a means of establishing a permanent source of capital to be used over the years for the common good of all."

According to Tambellini, because community foundations pool many different kinds of charitable funds under one umbrella organization, they are efficient, cost-effective, and very responsive to community need. Donors are offered various options for directing gifts to community foundation: they may designate funds for specific interests such as environmental projects or youth programs; or they may make unrestricted gifts. In any case, donors enjoy a number of tax benefits, and funds are carefully managed by the foundation's trustees.

Although the Charlevoix foundation is still in its infancy, Tambellini says they expect to begin making some community grants in this first year. The organization recently applied for a $150,000 challenge grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek. If awarded, that grant will match local dollars committed, helping to establish a special youth programming endowment within the community foundation.

...county foundation established

Over the next several months, Tambellini and board representatives will speak to local organizations and individuals to heighten awareness of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and explain its mission and purpose. Following that, board members will begin efforts to build the foundation's endowment, seeking local donors.

A county-wide youth advisory committee will identify problems and needs that relate to young people, advocate for programs, and guide the foundation's grantmaking for youth.

Members of the youth committee are Jennifer Wojan and Chad Crandall from Beaver Island; Jill Towne and Richard Hartwell from Boyne City; Tammy Goff and Don Kinchloe from Boyne Falls; Carrie Cunningham and Zachary Pajtas of Charlevoix; and Jennifer Ringler and Cliff Russell, representing East Jordan.

More information about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation may be obtained by writing the foundation, c/o P.O. Box 717, East Jordan, MI, 49727; or by calling the foundation office, 616/536-2440.

Former judge serving time on contempt charge

Incident occurs during hearing on indecent exposure charge

Former District Court Judge Art Reibel is now in the Charlevoix County jail serving a 10-day sentence for contempt of court. Reibel turned himself in Friday evening after drawing the sentence Tuesday morning and leaving the courtroom before police could take him into custody.

Reibel was in District Court Oct. 13 on a charge of indecent exposure. The indecent exposure charge is the result of a June 30 incident. The complaining witness in the case is Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputy Sherry Sproul. According to the charge Sproul was at the Castle Farms property making a liquor inspection and as she was leaving in a patrol car, Reibel, wearing only a towel, dropped the towel and exposed himself to her. Reibel is the owner of the Castle Farms property.

Reibel was arrested on the charge Aug. 11 and released on bond. At last week's hearing, visiting judge James R. McCormick denied a motion by Reibel to dismiss the case. At that time Reibel became displeased, made the comment "No balls" and walked out of the courtroom despite being told not to leave by McCormick.

McCormick then told Charlevoix County Prosecutor Kraag Lieberman that he wanted Reibel arrested immediately.

Later Reibel returned to the courtroom. McCormick told Reibel he had heard the comment and found the remark and Reibel's behavior in the courtroom to be inappropriate. Reibel said the comment was in reference to Lieberman, but McCormick did not accept that explanation.

McCormick found Reibel in contempt of court and sentenced him to serve 10 days in the county jail. Reibel asked for bond, but McCormick denied the request. Reibel then left the court again despite being told by McCormick to remain there. At the time there was no bailiff or officer in the courtroom.

Between Tuesday's incident in court and Friday evening when Reibel turned himself in at the sheriff's department, police looked for Reibel, but it was by no means anything which could be described as a manhunt.

The search ended Friday evening when Reibel simply showed up at the desk of the sheriff's department to turn himself in. Lasater said Reibel is currently in with the general prisoner population at the jail serving his 10-day sentence. "So far he's been a model prisoner," Lasater said Monday morning.

Although Reibel was arrested, and brought to the Charlevoix County jail in 1991 on a drunk driving charge, Lasater said that to the best of his knowledge this is the first time Reibel has ever gone beyond the booking stage and been lodged in the jail. In 1991, a Charlevoix City police officer arrested Reibel for drunk driving and resisting and obstructing police. Reibel later sued authorities claiming police brutality. Investigations by the State Police and Federal Bureau of Investigation indicated no reason to pursue charges of police brutality and the suit was thrown out of court. Reibel was convicted of the drunk driving charge this summer and that case is now on appeal in 33rd Circuit Court.

spirit of the Act, which is to provide 911 service throughout the state. The Judge's decision also states that Charlevoix County has the right to file for an exclusion from a 911 plan. If Charlevoix County files for an exclusion, they should not be entitled to select another 911 plan since they already had an opportunity to be in a 911 plan with Antrim County.

Lieberman recommended that the county file an exception to the judge's decision. Lieberman said of the decision, "The Judge has totally avoided the jurisdiction issue."

Commissioner Walt Hufford noted that Charlevoix could reconsider a joint 911 plan with Antrim County. "It's really only a few cents more each month with Antrim County," Hufford said.

There will be a 9-1-1 public hearing at 7 p.m. Oct. 21 in the East Jordan Civic Center.

Jody McGlinch was a force on both offense and defense Friday evening, running for 140 yards on offense and making several important tackles as a linebacker.

Jesse Beatty (42) finds the going tough against Petoskey. Charlevoix won the low-scoring game 7-6.

Thrills and chills: Rayders beat Petoskey 7-6

Charlevoix moves one big, cold step closer to post-season playoffs

By L. Scott Swanson
This is northern Michigan. And when it comes to the weather, only the strong survive.

The Charlevoix football team's postseason playoff hopes took a big step forward Friday evening when the Rayders held on in the bitter cold at Kipke Field to take a 7-6 win against Petoskey.

Bitter temperatures, a howling wind which brought tree limbs crashing to the ground throughout the community and drove sheets of rain, sleet and hail across the high school field were enough to keep most fans away from Friday evening's football game. But the smattering of diehards who showed up were treated to a thriller.

Petoskey took the ball to the Rayder one-yard line on the opening drive of the game, but then fumbled. Charlevoix didn't have time to celebrate for long as the Rayder offense promptly fumbled the ball back to Petoskey inside the 10 yard line. The Rayder defense held for three plays, but on fourth down the Northmen scored on a six-yard run. Then, on what turned out to be the deciding play of the game, the Northmen's extra point attempt failed.

Charlevoix scored their only touchdown midway through the second quarter. Following a defensive stop at the Charlevoix 24 the Rayder offense began an eight-play, 74 yard drive that concluded with an eight-yard touchdown pass from Don Jess to Keith Carey. Vince Voisin kicked the extra point, which proved to be a game winner.

Aside from Petoskey's opening foray down the field and Charlevoix's touchdown drive, sustained drives were hard to come by Friday evening. The teams spent the majority of the game crashing heads between the 20s.

Gale force winds from the north were at Charlevoix's back in the third quarter and with Petoskey in the fourth quarter. Late in the third quarter, Voisin unloaded a 63-yard punt which was aided by the wind and a good roll.

Entering the final minutes of the game, Charlevoix clung to a one-point lead. Is a one-point lead ever secure? Not really.

With time winding down, Charlevoix faced a fourth down situation from just inside midfield. The Rayders lined up in punt formation, but rather than snapping the ball to the punter and having him kick it into the teeth of the wind, Charlevoix snapped it to the up-man Jody McGlinch. McGlinch headed for the first down marker, but came up just short. Petoskey took over on downs.

Petoskey completed a slant pass to take the ball into Rayder territory and gave the Charlevoix team and fans cause for serious concern. But the Rayder defense then regrouped and shut the Northmen down.

Charlevoix took over the ball and picked up a first down with less than a minute left. For all the world, the game appeared to be two more snaps and it's over. But looks can be deceiving. Again, the question - is a one-point lead ever secure? Not really.

With 33 seconds left in the game, Charlevoix fumbled at their own 46 yard line and the Northmen had new life.

On third down, the Petoskey wide receiver ran a stop and go pattern. The quarterback pump faked on the stop and then heaved the ball toward the end zone. Charlevoix's corner back bit a little on the stop and pump fake, then wheeled to get back into position. Meanwhile, the Charlevoix safety rotated over to help with deep coverage. The Petoskey receiver leapt and touched the ball, but couldn't hang onto it. In fact, the ball ended up being intercepted by the Charlevoix safety.

At that instant, the question from Charlevoix's perspective was whether or not the safety had come down with the ball in-bounds? In other words was it an interception or an incomplete pass?

But wait. There was a flag on the play. The official called a penalty on the Charlevoix defender for face guarding. Now, the question became where would the ball be spotted. Face guarding is a pass interference penalty. In professional football, the ball is marked at the point of the foul on a pass interference penalty. In this instance, the point of the foul was inside the Rayders' 10 yard line. However, in high school football, when pass interference is called, the ball is not spotted at the point of the infraction, but is spotted 15 yards up from the original line of scrimmage.

When the commotion settled, Petoskey had the ball at the 29-yard line with nine seconds left in the game. The game ended with Petoskey attempting a 46-yard field goal. From 46 yards, the kick was short and off to the left. One can only speculate on what the outcome would have been had the kick come from 20 yards closer to the goal line.

In regard to individual statistics, McGlinch had an outstanding game for the Rayders. Offensively, he carried the ball 14 times for 140 yards. Defensively, from his linebacker position he had six solo tackles, four assists and one sack. Other defensive standouts for the Rayders were: Keith Parrish, who in his first game at nose tackle had 13 solo tackles and five assists; Ben Whitley who had 12 solo tackles; and David Donner who had eight solo tackles and four assists.

The win left Charlevoix with a record of 4-0 in league play and 6-1 overall. This coming Saturday afternoon the Rayders will travel to Traverse City St. Francis to take on the league's only other undefeated team.

Basketball team ends losing streak

Charlevoix broke a four-game losing streak with a 52-44 win at Boyne City last Thursday night. Charlevoix opened the game well and held off the Ramblers down the stretch.

The Rayders offense has been hit or miss this season, but in the first quarter of the Boyne City game it was all hit. Charlevoix closed the quarter with a 22-10 lead. By halftime, the Rayders had extended the lead to 37-20.

As things turned out, Charlevoix needed all of that lead because in the second half the Rayder offense went south, scoring only seven points in the third quarter and eight points in the fourth quarter.

Liz Grunch, a sophomore guard, led the Rayders with 20 points while junior forward Becky Bragg contributed a dozen.

Charlevoix won the junior varsity game 59-42. Sarah Ritt led the j.v. team with 16 points while Angela Bunday was also in double figures with 10 points.

Thursday, Oct. 22 the Rayders will be on the road, facing league-leading Elk Rapids.

Soccer team finishes tough season

Charlevoix closed out a tough season with a 2-0 homefield loss to Harbor Springs this past Thursday. It was Charlevoix's final game of a season which they closed with an 0-9-2 record.

The Rayders fielded a young team this year. This year's team will lose only three players to graduation.

Coach Tom Sikavitsas credited several players with good play in the Harbor Springs game. Jake Porath, Jason Firman and Chris Matye played well at midfield. Freshman Chris Mikulski did a nice job in goal while Scott Boyer and Seth Kilander keyed the front line attack.

J.V. football team falters in second half

Charlevoix's junior varsity football team stayed close to Petoskey in the first half, but the wheels fell off in the second half and left the Rayders on the short end of a 25-0 score.

Petoskey scored the only touchdown of the first half on its first possession of the game. The Rayder defense steadied itself after that drive. During the first half, the Rayder offense also moved the ball well, but was hurt by penalties in some key situations.

Petoskey set the tone for the second half by returning the kickoff for a touchdown. From there it was all downhill for the Rayders.

Charlevoix lost despite a strong performance by quarterback Bryan Jarema who threw for 155 yards.

This Thursday evening Charlevoix will host Traverse City St. Francis.

Mother follows son as contest winner

Judy Carey of Charlevoix won this past week's Charlevoix Courier football contest picking 9 of 11 winners. Last week's contest was won by her son, Keith Carey.

Several entrants in this past week's contest had eight correct selections, but Carey was the only entrant with nine. For winning this past week's contest, she will receive a free oil change at Pat McKeown Dodge City.

You too could have been 9-2

Courier Guru - Last week's record 9-2. Kansas City and Tennessee were all that stood between me and perfection. But then so many of you people wouldn't believe me and branched out on your own. Thus we saw a lot of 8-3 scores.

This week, I suspect that somebody will have to go at least 10-1 to win. You might even have to be perfect. There are some easy calls in this week's games. The Minnesota-Michigan game is a prime example. If you're not confident of Michigan beating Minnesota on Saturday, then you're probably one of those people who won't believe that the sun will rise on Sunday until you actually see it for yourself.

Charlevoix - Traverse City St. Francis: Can Charlevoix come up big two weeks in a row? Unfortunately, probably not. Pick - Traverse City High's back up team.

Alpena - Petoskey: Petoskey's still under the weather from last week's 7-6 loss. Pick - Alpena.

Gladwin - Gaylord: Does Gladwin play football? Pick - Gaylord.

Minnesota - Michigan: This won't be pretty. The only time Minnesota will cover any ground is when they run to and from the locker room. Pick - Michigan.

Ohio State - Michigan State: MSU's defensive shortcomings will be evident. Pick - Ohio State.

Brigham Young - Notre Dame: The WAC gets waxed. Pick - Notre Dame.

CMU - Ball State: Ball State gave Clemson a tough time. Pick - Ball State.

Detroit - Tampa Bay: Detroit's not as bad as their record. Pick - Detroit.

Washington - Minnesota: Minnesota's not as good as their record. Pick - Washington.

Harvard - Princeton: A text book match up. Pick - Princeton.

Air Force - San Diego State: Is Marshall Faulk the next coming of Barry Sanders? I'm a believer. Pick - San Diego State.

...a businessman's look at the State of the Union

have not sent us a dime in aid. In fact we sent them money. We are doing something wrong. When we win a war we pay and when we lose we pay.

I feel proud just knowing we are going to leave our troops in Europe to protect the Europeans from someone or something. The important thing is the money those 150,000 troops spend and the lease payments for our bases will help the European economy. They need it more than we do.

I can walk down the street a little prouder knowing the U.S. Armed Forces won Desert Storm and protected those Japanese oil supplies. Of course we were too proud to expect any help from the Japanese or was it that they did not offer?

Being a president of a small (and I mean small) corporation, I support the government in their efforts to use the tax dollars paid by the corporation and its employees to finance offshore ventures. We have too many jobs and small businesses in this country. We need to send some of them to other countries and quit hoarding them all for ourselves.

Now the fun starts. Who can we blame all of this on? We could start with every President since Lincoln, or maybe the last hundred years of congressmen and senators, how about the rich, all of these are good candidates. We should thank the big corporations and the rich for giving us the best politicians that money can buy. This is too easy. Do you think maybe someone else is to blame?

I feel not only did Jimmy Carter not know how to play the game, he did not even know where the field was. But he was the most honest and truthful president in my life time. President Carter was right when he told the citizens of this country that they created the energy problem and they were the only ones who could fix it. Now if you didn't like that you will hate this. YOU the people of this country have put yourselves in this fix and you are the only ones who can get yourselves out of it.

So how did you and I create this mess? By letting it happen! We bought the idea of a free lunch and gave the politicians our blessing. We wanted the good life and a standard of living that the world had never seen before, but we didn't want to pay for it. Well now the bill is not only due, it is PAST

DUE.

So what do we do to pay the bill? First, we start taking responsibility for our actions. Next, we face up to the fact that there are no quick fixes or easy answers and get ready for some hard work and a lot of sweat. Not only do we have to put our noses to the grind stone, but we have to prepare our children.

Life is not going to be easier for the next generation, but it can be better. With technology growing at such rapid rates, our kids are going to have to work harder in school than we did just to keep up with the rest of the world. We also need to pass on the work ethics of our forefathers to them. This is not to say that our children cannot have a better life than we did; they just have to work for it. You can see what happened when we were not willing to work for it.

In closing, let me leave you with this thought: We can either start paying our bills now, or we pay a much larger price later.

Students study ecology

The Little Traverse Conservancy education program sponsored a day-long ecology lesson for Beaver Island's kindergarten through sixth grade classes, Wednesday, Sept. 30, to promote environmental awareness in children. Conservancy education leaders Chuck Robbins and Jennifer Strigley led classes through Barney's Lake Nature Preserve on the north end of Beaver Island. The preserve is one of more than 60 areas protected by the conservancy.

The Conservancy's education program is in its fifth year, but the trip to Beaver Island was the Conservancy's first school program there. "The preserve has a variety of ecosystems, which helps us teach several different lessons to the students," said Chuck Robbins, Little Traverse Conservancy education coordinator. "It's great we had the opportunity to take our program to the Beaver Island students. We want the students to become more aware of their surroundings and realize how important nature is to us," Robbins said.

Birds, snakes, trees and bugs, which remained still in the students' science books, came alive at the 120-acre preserve.

Candidates to address environmental issues

Ten local groups are jointly sponsoring a Candidates' Forum on Environmental and Social Issues Monday, Oct. 26, at 7 p.m. in the Petoskey High School Auditorium. Candidates who have confirmed participation in the Forum include Jerry Adyloft, Lyman Clark, Phil Ruppe, and Bart Stupak for the U.S. House of Representatives;

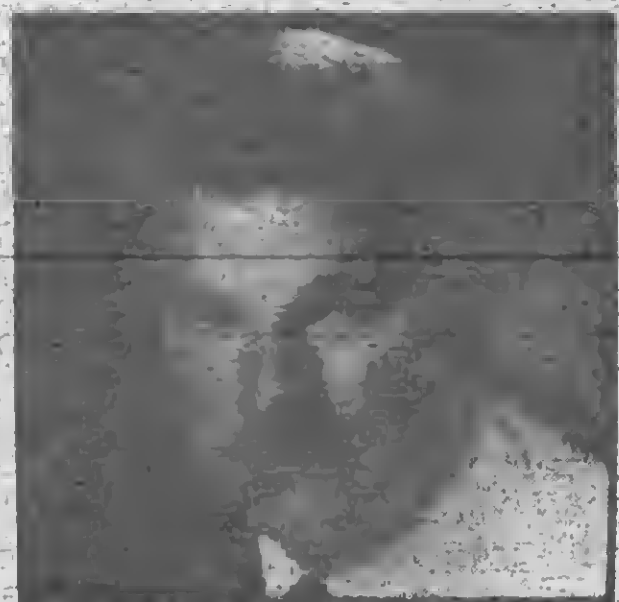

Beverly Bodem and G.T. Long for the Michigan House District #106; and Shannon Brower and Pat Gagliardi for the Michigan House District #107.

"This Forum is the only one that will focus on environmental and social justice issues in northern Michigan," said Mary Hyslop, Displaced Homemaker Coordinator for the Women's Resource Center and one of the co-sponsors of the event. "The sponsoring groups have prepared questions regarding issues critical to northern Michigan residents," said Hyslop. In addition to questions that have been sent to the candidates ahead of time, those who attend the Forum will have an opportunity to question candidates.

First ward candidates differ in approach to City issues

Haggard supports current path

Meggison prefers changes

By L. Scott Swanson

On a local level, the most highly contested race is in the city's first ward where incumbent Bill Haggard is being challenged by former county commissioner Don Meggison. Last week, the Courier sent questionnaires to both candidates. The questions and the candidates' responses to those questions follow:

Bill Haggard:

Why are you seeking a City Council position?

"I am seeking a City Council seat so that I may give something back to the community which has given so much to me. I was born and raised in Charlevoix. I was schooled in Charlevoix. Charlevoix gave me my business start. Charlevoix is my home."

"When I first ran for council six years ago, I dedicated myself to helping make Charlevoix a better place for everyone. We have made great progress because we have followed a well thought out plan. I wish to follow through with this important responsibility."

The issue generating the most criticism from your opponent is spending. Specific decisions addressed by your opponent include: the purchase of Department of Public Works property for $90,000 and the employment, without taking bids, of a full-time electrical consultant at a salary of $60,000 per year. Other spending decisions which have been questioned at council meetings in recent years are: increasing the City Manager's base salary by approximately $15,000 in one year; and the implementation of a 4 mill increase in property taxes for the City's infras-

Don Meggison:

Why are you seeking a city council position?

"I have lived in Charlevoix all of my life and I have a deep interest in the progress and welfare of the community. It would be my desire to see that all brackets of taxpayers are fairly represented."

Your opponent and people who have written letters to the editor have implied that you are dodging issues and not stating your position on issues. How do you respond to those charges?

"I would have answered a questionnaire that covered a broad range of subjects, similar to this one. I will not cater to a single group or agenda. I will not debate a single member of the council. Had all the council and the mayor, who are the ones responsible for the dissatisfaction with City operation, been invited, then all wards of the City would have had the opportunity to learn how the council justified its action."

You have said that, if elected, you would vote the way the people want you to vote. How do you go about determining how people want you to vote? How do you avoid voting the will of a vocal minority and neglecting a sometimes silent majority?

"By using common sense. If people feel strongly about an issue, it will be evident. There will always be vocal minorities and that is where experience and common sense prevail. I will ask the opinion of the people in the first ward and act accordingly."

Your opponent has consistently voted in favor of the Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and DDA projects. What are your feelings about the DDA? Do you feel it should continue, be modified or be abolished? Do you support or oppose DDA proposals such as: Bridge Park improvements; acquisition of the Kusina property for additional downtown parking; and the installation of new ornamental street lights downtown? If you favor the abolishment of the DDA, what alternative method of funding would you prefer to see used for downtown improvement projects?

"The DDA has to be modified. It has set up its own demise in the 1996-98 period."

Bridge Park - When Robert Bridge donated the park property to the City, he stipulated it remain a park in perpetuity. There are other legal questions. Also, the City infrastructure (sewage pump station) problem must be solved.

Additional parking is required only on event days, i.e. Venetian Festival, Art Fair, Craft Show and Apple Fest.

Ornamental Lighting - The existing lighting was installed because downtown merchants demanded increased illumination to insure security and safety of the area."

Earlier this year, the City Council agreed to make a grant application to the State seeking funds for a community swimming pool. At that time, members of the Council indicated that pool supporters would have to come up with approximately $3 million in cash or letters of credit (as opposed to pledges) to assure funding for the remainder of construction and operational costs, otherwise the council would decline to accept any State grant money. In recent months, pool supporters have received pledges of time and money (as well as some cash). If the State approves a grant and pool supporters come before the Council later this year or early next year with pledges of time and money, but without the cash specified earlier, will you favor declining or accepting the grant money?

"Pledges are not the same as cash. If pool supporters do not come up with cash or letters of credit, the project should be denied."

This is an example of a minority group anxious to have the taxpayers foot the bill for their project."

What are your feelings about the performance of the present City administrators (i.e. city manager, city planner, city treasurer, city police chief, city fire chief)? If elected, would you favor retaining them or would you investigate replacing them?

"All city administrators must be evaluated on a periodic basis as to their effectiveness on the job and how well all taxpayers are represented. This especially true in the matters of fiscal responsibility. The taxpayer depends on the city manager to manage all aspects of the City fairly and not allow the City to go broke, as so many cities around the country recently have. This responsibility was delegated to the City Manager by the council, however the council is still responsible for his performance."

OPINIONS

Letters to the editor

City political path debated

Editor,

In response to statements made by Donald B. Meggison in the Courier of last week:

It can be said that the mission of the City Council is to project a vision for the future health and well-being of the Community and to then follow through with sound decision-making to accomplish the goals set forth. Through the voting process, a majority decision is reached. In healthy communities the majority vote is accepted and citizens find ways to accept and integrate that consensus into their lives.

The issues that Mr. Meggison refers to were voted upon and positively passed by majority.

In looking to the future needs of the Public Works Building, a majority of council members believed it made sense to seek a more appropriate location for the future Public Works site rather than pour money into rehabilitating and expanding the building in the present location which happens to be a precious piece of public land adjacent to the most highly utilized park in our city. It is hard to imagine that a piece of valuable land purchased for future public works and compost recycling operation could ever be viewed by any thinking person as a lemon.

The establishing of a full-time salary for the electrical consultant who has provided years of consultation at no cost was a very well researched and thoroughly understood issue by council members who voted in the majority to bring him into city employment status. There is no one who has as comprehensive and knowledgeable an understanding of our entire electrical system as this man. It became a choice of taking the risk of losing his services or making the decision to offer him a three year contract. Since this consultant cost is included in the bonding amount, why would we offer this position to anyone who is unacquainted with our electrical system; a stranger would have to be educated to this sophisticated system at greater cost in the long run and an almost certain sacrifice of quality. $60,000 plus benefits is very little when you put into perspective that he has designed, planned and continues to oversee the operation and maintenance of a $3. million dollar substation. In years to come, there will be a need for another substation on the north side. Planning for that extension begins now. Can we apply a dollar and cents figure to the years of skillful dedication this man has given toward provision of electrical services in the past, now and into our future.

Mr. Meggison has given a great deal to this community. We have in the past respected his willingness to do for others and his hard-working ethic. But we cannot respect this current effort to tear down and try to destroy the decisions made by a majority of elected council members. It would be a great disservice to allow this kind of negative, fault-finding attitude to permeate our city government.

Pat Gaskin, City Council
John Gaskin

Editor,

That majority spoke of in another letter in this issue of this paper does not take the time to determine the wishes of the people they are elected to represent before they vote.

That majority probably was surprised to learn they paid $94,000 for property part of which was to become a compost pile.

That majority was led to believe that after the new substation was built adjacent to the existing substation, a new location of the DPW would reduce the congestion of the existing site. They weren't informed of a hidden agenda to move the new station. If they had been made aware of this, they would have considered that as sensible as plugging the kitchen toaster into the living room plug and then having to cover the cord with a rug.

It wasn't until a member of the audience asked, did they know the new DPW building for which they were told the property was needed, would cost $2.5 million. Now that would pay for one heck of a revamp of the existing DPW site where more than ample area is available now.

This majority didn't know until they received the Council meeting agenda on the Thursday afternoon before the scheduled Monday Council meeting they would be considering a three-year, $180,000 plus fringes contract for a full time electrical consultant. The questions asked by this majority indicated either they hadn't read the agenda or if they had, did not understand what they had read. One question asked was "Why was the contract written this way?" Answer: "That's the way Mike wanted it." Majority opinion? A one-year once its need was proven is prudent expenditure of tax dollars.

This majority spent more time arguing the question of whether the beauty of a flower garden excused the trespassing on to City-owned park land, than it did spending your tax dollars on this contract.

If this paper applied itself to informing the public of what the city administration and the council are up to by investigative reporting, every one would know what's cooking, rather (than) what's already on your plate for you to swallow. Who knows, might even increase circulation.

In closing, I resent and reject the statement that I'm trying to destroy the decisions of the majority. When, and only when, this majority votes for the wishes of an informed electorate can they make the claim, they have voted as the majority.

If elected, I'll build an informed electorate. All the City voters will have a truly representative form of government.

structure repair program. What is your rationale for supporting these expenditures?

"City spending, like the spending done by a business or a family on a fixed income, is a matter of common sense. The City, like a family or a business, must anticipate its immediate and future needs and budget for those needs. If you fail to plan for future needs, you live from hand-to-mouth and end up spending much more in the long run.

Each and every spending decision acted upon by Council has been thoroughly researched and discussed with City staff, fellow council members and constituents. All the alternatives are weighed before a final vote is taken. I, like the majority of our council, have taken the following stands on the issues which you cite:

A.) Public works property - The current public works facility is grossly overcrowded with no room to grow. The property which was purchased can accommodate all of our future needs at one site, at a price that we won't be able to match in the future. We will also one day receive the additional benefit of converting the existing site into prime waterfront park land.

B.) Electrical consultant - The bidding process is an important part of our city's cost control measures. Experience has also taught us that, in some situations, the lowest bid can cost more in the long run. There is no consultant in the country that knows our electrical system as well as Roger Westbroek. Council chose to retain the expertise of a local resident, Roger Westbroek, instead of wasting our money to teach an outside consultant.

C.) Infrastructure millage - Only a few years ago, our city's infrastructure was literally crumbling while decisive action was needed. I opposed the borrowing of funds. I would rather spend our money on improvements rather than interest payments. We have made great progress and everyone has a right to be proud of Charlevoix's improved appearance. The rate of 4 mills has allowed us to pay as we go."

In response to a Chamber of Commerce questionnaire, you indicated you support the continued existence of the Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and the DDA proposed Bridge Park improvements, acquisition of the Kustina Property for additional downtown parking and the installation of new ornamental streetlights downtown. Have there ever been any DDA projects you opposed? If so, what were they and why did you oppose them? While you support the continued existence of the DDA in the immediate future, the agreement upon which the DDA is founded expires in 1998. Do you view the DDA and the additional property taxes paid by property owners within the DDA district as something which should eventually expire or as something which should be a permanent part of Charlevoix's city government system?

"The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) affords us an opportunity to revitalize downtown Charlevoix, which is the focal point of our community. All citizens of Charlevoix, both today and tomorrow, shall realize the benefits of an improved local economy and expanded and enhanced park system.

The council is, and must remain, the guardian of our tax dollars. In this capacity, I have opposed demolition of the house located on the "White" property on Clinton Street and the purchase of the DPW building with TIFA funds.

While the citizens of Charlevoix shall continue to enjoy the benefits of the DDA for years to come, the DDA will, by law, expire in 1998."

Earlier this year, the City Council agreed to make a grant application to the State seeking funds for a community swimming pool. At that time, members of the Council indicated that pool supporters would have to come up with approximately $3 million in cash or letters of credit (as opposed to pledges) to assure funding for the remainder of construction and operational costs; otherwise the council would decline to accept any State grant money. In recent months, pool supporters have received pledges of time and money (as well as some cash). If the State approves a grant and pool supporters come before the council later this year or early next year with pledges of time and money, but without the cash specified earlier, will you favor declining or accepting the grant money?

"Earlier this year the City Council agreed to make a grant application for a community swimming pool. City Council has made a commitment not to burden city taxpayers with any obligations to build, maintain, or operate a community pool. I will keep an open mind to any proposals which can guarantee this commitment."

What are your feelings about the performance of the present City administrators (i.e. city manager, city planner, city treasurer, city police chief, city fire chief)? If elected, would you favor retaining them or would you investigate replacing them?

"The City Council has gone to great lengths to hire only the most qualified individuals as administrators. To ensure that their performances live up to their qualifications, I favor regular review of all city administrators.

"The citizens of Charlevoix, likewise, have the right to expect that only qualified individuals will be selected for employment by the City. If there are qualified local applicants for such positions, they should be hired. There has been considerable controversy surrounding the recent fire department hirings. Unfortunately, this proved to be an instance where there were no qualified local applicants."

Alpert - DeVries

Eden Rue Alpert of Irvine, California and Jeffrey J. DeVries of Charlevoix were married August 15.

The bride is the daughter of Herb Alpert of Malibu, California, and Sharon Alesia of Beverly Hills, California. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernie DeVries of Charlevoix.

Two hundred and forty guests came from Arizona, Michigan, Florida, and Illinois to attend the early evening ceremony that took place in the garden of the Four Seasons Hotel in Beverly Hills. A gazebo made of white roses, lilies, and gardenias was built for the occasion.

Rev. Robert Ringler performed the double ring rites for the couple.

The bride was given in marriage by both her father Herb Alpert and stepfather Frank Alesia. She wore a custom-made dress by Venas. It was a white, off-the-shoulder gown with a fitted bodice made of Italian imported lace with hand beaded crystals throughout the bodice. Hand made roses ran along the shoulders and down the skirt and train of the dress. The full skirt of the dress was made of Italian silk taffeta and had a mid length train. The bride's headpiece was made of porcelain roses with a mid length tulle veil. Her bouquet was made of white roses, lilies, and gardenias.

A three piece string ensemble, La Follia, provided music for the ceremony.

The bride's sister, Aria Alpert, acted as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Lisa Ladd, Dana Vecce, Laura Gordon, Mandy Cohan, and Ellen Alpert. They wore Waters and Waters outfits, with full length skirts and jacket style tops. The outfits were raw silk, off the shoulder in a pastel pink with white lace running along the front and back of the shoulders. They carried flowers of white lilies and gardenias.

The flower girls were Kern Lynn Bewick and Alesia Bewick.

The best man was Christopher

Edwards. Groomsmen were David Heckendorn, Chad DeVries, Kevin DeVries, James Gaskin, and Vic Whitsett.

A reception was given by Sharon and Frank Alesia at the Grand Ballroom of the Four Seasons Hotel. Entertainment was provided by West Coast Productions. A special presentation was performed by Herb Alpert, father of the bride, in honor of the newlyweds.

A barbeque rehearsal dinner was hosted by Sharon and Frank Alesia at the Four Seasons Hotel.

The couple took a wedding cruise around the Caribbean Islands. They currently reside in Orange County, but plan to move to Manhattan Beach, California.

The bride works as an account coordinator for the fragrance company, H. Alpert and Co. The groom is attending Chapman University in California where he is studying to complete his bachelor's degree in business. He plans to attend law school upon completing his degree.

Pantry work begins

A lay off, sickness, repair bills, a work injury, or food stamps that just don't stretch far enough, are some of the reasons that people come to the East Jordan Care & Share (EJC&S) emergency food pantry for assistance. These very reasons led to the formation of this organization several years ago, with an aim of providing food to all families in an emergency situation. Through the efforts of church, organizations, businesses and individuals, EJC&S has provided food to prepare 20,620 meals this year.

As we approach the holiday seasons, the food pantry is once again starting its annual drive to raise funds to provide holiday good baskets for the needy in our community. These names are submitted by the churches, the school system, Salvation Army, Social Services and individuals. Each family will be provided with a food basket containing a turkey or roasting chicken plus all the trimmings to ensure a full holiday meal.

Grandvue schedules luncheon

Russian dancer describes life in her hometown

(The following story is written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city council member who continues to be involved in a number of civic matters. His most recent project involved working with a number of people to bring a group of 10 Russian dancers to the United States.)

By Ralph McRae

By now, most people in our community know that 10 dancers from the Russian city of Kazan are visiting Charlevoix. The will be appearing at 7:30 p.m., Nov. 7 at the Charlevoix High School gym.

There are five men and five women in the group. This story will focus on just one of them - Guzel Shakenova.

Guzel is 19 and graduated from high school in 1990. She is now taking a five year course of study at the University of Kazan. The University has 15,000 students and 15 major courses of study to choose from. Guzel is studying astronomy and physics. She lives with an older sister and her parents on the sixth floor of a 12 story apartment complex. Their home is a small two-bedroom apartment leasing for 150 rubles a month. At the present value of rubles, that comes out to 50 cents a month. Included with the rent are all utilities, including cable TV, but excluding the cost of the telephone. The family has a washing machine, but no the cost of the telephone. The family has a washing machine, but no clothes dryer.

Guzel's father works in a factory making airplane motors. her mother is a doctor, specifically a pediatrician in a health clinic. Sixty percent of the doctors in Russia and their yearly income is comparable to what a truck driver receives. Male doctors work in hospitals. Most doctors are public doctors, very few have a private practice. The average patient pays no money at any doctor's office. Going to a hospital and staying until fully recovered is also done at no charge. Patients often wait in line, but not behind more than four or five people. They do however believe the medical system could be much better.

Guzel's family owns no car. In fact, none of the 10 dancers have a family car. Of course there are no driver training classes since so few students have cars. You have to be 18 to drive in Russia.

Of high school students, most drink both beer and vodka and 60 percent of them smoke cigarettes. For entertainment, they attend ballet, comedies and drama costing about two cents in American money. Movies are more expensive, costing about five cents in American money.

They have plenty of food. Household furnishings are available. Clothing is in short supply, but is inexpensive. Guzel was wearing a very beautiful and extravagant blouse. In Russia it sells for about $5, but here would cost about $60.

Kazan, 500 miles east of Moscow, is 10 degrees farther north than Charlevoix - so they have snow too. In the country, all farms are of the collective kind. Farmers don't own their own land. A few years ago the Soviet Union owned every inch of land in the country. The farms raise many of the same vegetables raised here.

City people seldom drive into the country as the roads are not good. Around Kazan the countryside is not as hilly as Michigan and there are many forests. The city of Kazan is on that famous river, the Volga.

Kazan has a population exceeding 1 million. It has many kinds of industries and very little unemployment. The average income is below $100 a month. There are no property taxes. In fact the only taxes are 12 rubles a month out of 200 rubles received in

Have the children or grandchildren in your life been acting a little differently this week? There is something about this last week of October that always seems to get them excited. I have a hard time with what the holiday represents but I don't have a hard time with the pretending that goes on.

It has always fascinated me to watch what costumes are in and what ones are out. There are years that ballerinas are big. Seasons where pirates make a comeback. Ninja turtles seem to be fading (thankfully). I miss some of the old fashioned comic book ones like Archie and Jughead. Am I the only one who remembers kids dressing up like soldiers or nurses? The costumes used to reflect what we thought we might want to be when we grew up.

Watching the little ones pretend, a lot of adults do a little thinking too. They have been known to get caught up in the excitement and wonder about where their own lives are heading. I am here to tell you that it is never too late to make changes. If you have the courage and strength inside you, I know someone who would just love to help you become an entirely new person. Costumes let the kids imagine that they are someone or something else for a few hours. If you are contemplating a new direction for your life, you don't want it to be just a temporary thing; You want it to last. In our own power, that can be hard to do. You can get started down a new road but it is all too easy to revert to your old ways. You need real help to make those changes last, to really adopt that new lifestyle.

Who is this friend of mine that can help you with more than a costume change? One of his most successful clients says of him that "if any man (or woman) be in Christ, he (she) is a new creation. Old things are passed away. All things have become new." You knew who it was already. Jesus is the only one who can come into a heart and life and really help make changes that will last. He can do that because He knows us from the inside out. He can help us come face to face with the emotional scars that our past hits us with. He can bring healing to memories that have long dampened our spirits. He can breathe new life even into the oldest of bones.

The kids may have their fun. But don't settle for just pretending. For changes that really last, there is only one way to go and one person to turn to. Turn to Jesus Christ!

Video learning center opens educational doors

North Central Michigan College will host an Open House for its new Interactive Video Distance Learning Center Monday, Nov. 2, from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

The Distance Learning Center (or DLC), located on the Petoskey NCMC campus in the former President's home, utilizes the latest in digitally compressed video

(DCV) technology. The NCMC electronic classroom can transmit and receive audio, video, graphics, and computer data to and from any such similarly equipped facility in the world. It has been specifically designed as a state-of-the-art educational video facility that can be operated by a single instructor or student using simple touch-screen controls.

Grants from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek and from the Frey Foundation of Grand Rapids totaling $127,000, plus the placement of $46,000 of electronic equipment by Central Michigan University's Telecommunications Department, helped to make possible the electronic classroom and reconstruction to the DLC structure.

Classes from Lake Superior State University are currently being delivered to the NCMC main campus via the DCV technology. Central Michigan University is also planning to deliver classes to the NCMC DLC beginning in the Fall of 1993. Additionally, NCMC is in preliminary discussions with Michigan State, and the University of Michigan on the delivery of video classes from those institutions to the NCMC campus and to NCMC students in Gaylord attending the alpine Regional Education Center (AREC) electronic classroom (a similarly equipped video classroom also designed by NCMC).

In June of 1993, NCMC will extend its video linkage to the PACE (Providing Academic Cost Effectively) network which has interactive video sites in St. Ignace, Mackinaw City, Cheboygan, Indian River, and Topinabee. The College will then be able to interact with those sites and with those on the PACE ITES (Instructional Television Fixed Services) channels.

The NCMC site was the first on the statewide Michigan Collegiate Telecommunications Association's (MiCTA) DCV Network. The total "Technology package" for all colleges and universities in MiCTA was developed jointly by NCMC's Eric Grandstaff, Director of Library/Media Services and by Gary Green, NCMC Director of Physical Plant/Technical Services, along with CMU's Kenneth Johnson, Director of Telecommunications and Philip DeLong CMU's Associate Director of Telecommunications.

The DLC was recently demonstrated in video interconnections with Central Michigan University, Lake Superior State University, the University of Michigan and the Otsego County Alpine Regional Education Center for Governor Engler, and as well for the Michigan Public Service Commission, NASA, and British Telecommunications.

Several video interconnections have been planned for the public open house with Central Michigan University in Mt. Pleasant, Lake Superior State University in Sault Ste. Charlevoix's boys' cross country team won their 13th straight conference championship this past week. How dominant were the Rayders? Each team is allowed to have only seven runners in the varsity race. The rest run junior varsity. Three of the Rayders' junior varsity runners would have made honorable mention All Conference had they run in the varsity race.

Girls and boys win cross country titles

Charlevoix took a broom to Elk Rapids for the conference track meet Oct. 20 and swept both the boys' and girls' titles. For the boys' team winning the conference title is old stuff. The 1992 title is Charlevoix's 13th straight. For the girls, winning the conference crown was a new thing.

Both Rayder teams were not at full strength due to injuries and illness, but depth paid dividends.

In the girls' race Charlevoix beat Elk Rapids by just a single point 49-50. Rogers City took third with 70 points. The top 10 finishers in the race were named to the All Conference team while the second ten received honorable mention. Charlevoix placed two runners on the all conference team. Elsa Conlan placed fourth with a time of 20:51 and Becca Chamberlain finished ninth with a time of 21:24. Charlevoix loaded the honorable mention squad with five Rayders finishing 11th through 15th. Their places names and times are: 11-Trina Holm, 21:24; 12-Nicole Moore, 21:23; 13-Lisa Hoadley, 21:33; 14-Aimee Livingston, 21:50; 15-

Michelle Keem, 22:49.

Charlevoix's Anne Schairbaum won the junior varsity girls' race with a time of 22:08 followed closely by teammate Lara Tank who finished in 22:09. Both would have been named honorable mention all conference had they run in the varsity race. However, each team may only run seven runners in the varsity race.

In the boys' race, the Rayders were without the services of Matt Dickinson, who broke his foot and is out for the season, and Josh Scheels who had a twisted ankle. Another of the Rayders' top runners, Zach Pajtas was running ill. Despite that, the Rayders won handily finishing with 37 points, 14 better than second place Kalkaska which had 51. Rogers City was third with 96.

Charlevoix's Matt Smith won the conference meet for the second year in a row. He covered the course in 15:54. In addition to Smith, sophomore Mike Bush and junior Erik Hess also made the All Conference team. Bush placed third with a time of 16:25 while Hess ran seventh with a time of 16:55. Sophomore Chris LeButt missed the All conference team by one second, placing 11th with a time of 17:15. Joining LeButt in receiving All Conference honorable mention were: 15-Gary Arnold, 17:24; and 17-Justin Davis, 17:33.

Josh Dhaseler won the junior varsity race in 17:51 followed by teammates Eric Dickinson, 17:55 and Jason Frabis 18:00. All three would have made All Conference honorable mention in the varsity race.

Charlevoix returned to Elk Rapids this past Saturday for the Elk Rapids Invitational. The boys' team placed third with 98 points behind Cadillac with 91 points and Big Rapids with 97 points. Smith placed second in the race four seconds behind a Kingsley runner who set a new course record at 15:35.

Other places for the Rayders in the boys' race were: 9-Mike Bush, 16:19; 19-Josh Scheels, 16:40; 33-Chris LeButt, 17:09; 35-Josh Dhaseler, 17:15; 52-Eric Dickinson, 18:02; 55-Gary Arnold, 18:10. In the girls' race, Charlevoix placed seventh with 168 points. Big Rapids won the race with 30 points. Places for the Charlevoix girls were: 24-Elsa Conlan, 20:40; 30-Becca Chamberlain, 20:47; 32-Trina Holm, 21:04; 39-Lisa Hoadley, 21:27; 43-Nicole Moore, 21:40; 45-Anne Schairbaum, 22:10; 50-Aimee Livingston, 22:59.

This Saturday Charlevoix will be competing in the Regional meet.

Football team beaten, but playoff hopes remain

41-14 loss to St. Francis drops record to 6-2 going into final game

Things started out all right for the Rayders in Saturday's league showdown against Traverse City St. Francis, but then matters took a dramatic turn for the worse.

Early in the game, Charlevoix led 7-0 and 14-7, but then they ended up losing 41-14. Despite the loss, Charlevoix still remains in contention for a postseason playoff spot. The Rayders will have to beat East Jordan at home Friday evening and then hope that things fall into place.

Charlevoix's offense took off like a house a fire Saturday at Traverse City. On the second play from scrimmage, Rayder quarterback Don Jess hit Jason VanLoo with a short pass which VanLoo turned into a 75-yard touchdown. Vince Voisin kicked the extra point.

St. Francis promptly answered with a long touchdown drive to tie the game. Charlevoix then re-established its lead on a second touchdown pass, this one from Jess to Brandon Webb for 20 yards. Voisin again added the extra point.

The Rayders' second touchdown came with four and a-half minutes left in the first quarter. From there, the game was all downhill for Charlevoix. St. Francis scored two more touchdowns in the first half to take a 21-14 lead. In the second half, the Gladiators scored three unanswered touchdowns. St. Francis passed less than half a dozen times. They simply overpowered the Rayder defense with their with their ground game.

Charlevoix's offense was nicely balanced. There just wasn't quite enough of it. Jody McGlinch carried the ball 10 times for 84 yards. Entering the East Jordan game, he needs just 20 yards to reach the 1,000 yard mark for the season. Jess completed seven of 16 passes for 148 yards. In addition to the 75-yard pass to VanLoo, Jess connected with Webb three times for 38 yards and with receiver Keith Carey three times for 33 yards.

Defensively, Ben Cunningham had a big game from his linebacker position with 17 tackles and five assists. David Skeel had eight tackles and three assists. Chris Pease had seven solo tackles and one assist. Webb intercepted a pass and Bill Dreyer recovered a fumble on a punt return.

The loss dropped the Rayders' league record to 4-1 and season record to 6-2. St. Francis is 5-0 in league and likely to be league champions for the third straight year with Charlevoix second for the third straight year.

The Rayders' opponent this coming Friday evening, East Jordan, has had a tough season. The Red Devils are 0-5 in league play and 1-7 overall.

Basketball team loses to top team

Charlevoix was overpowered by the top ranked Class C girls' basketball team last Thursday night. The Rayders lost 91-43 to Elk Rapids. Elk Rapids scored more than 20 points in all but the last quarter and had four players in double figures.

A bright spot for the Rayders was the play of junior forwards Becky Bragg and Jamie Doan.

Bragg had 16 points and seven rebounds while Doan had 10 points. Elk Rapids led 28-9 after the first quarter, 49-18 at the half and 72-28 after the third quarter.

The loss dropped the Rayders' record to 4-6 in league play and 5-9 overall. This Tuesday the Rayders will host Mancelona.

Lawson wins on tie-breaker

Norm Lawson won this past week's Charlevoix Courier football contest and will receive a free oil change at Crown Motors.

Lawson and Dave Olach each correctly picked the winners in nine of 11 games. However Lawson edged Olach in the tie-breaker picking the total points in the Air Force - San Diego St. game. Lawson guessed 42 points while Olach guessed 63. The actual total was 37.

You too could be 18-4

Courier Guru - Last week's record 9-2. Season record 18-4.

Had it not been for the Petoskey Bright team showing up in place of Petoskey Dark and were it not for a fumble-rookie and a bad call getting Air Force a win, I'd have been perfect last week. But then, had it not been for last minute comebacks by Ball State and Washington, I could have been 7-4. Such is life.

Here are this week's picks.

East Jordan - Charlevoix. I took a lot of heat for not picking the Rayders last week. I note that all of this heat came prior to the game. Would I go against the mighty Rayders two weeks in a row? No way. Pronounce me reformed. Once again my head and my heart are in alignment and all is well with the football universe Pick - Charlevoix (Big, Real Big.)

Gaylord - Grayling. Tough game, but let's take Grayling. Pick - Grayling.

Ludington - Petoskey. Could Petoskey make a liar out of me two weeks in a row? Nah! Pick - Ludington.

Michigan - Purdue. Purdue's not Spoilermaking anything this year. Pick - Michigan.

CMU - Akron. CMU nearly took Ball State. They will beat Akron. Pick - CMU.

Michigan State - Northwestern. As the season progresses, MSU is developing into an average team. Pick - MSU.

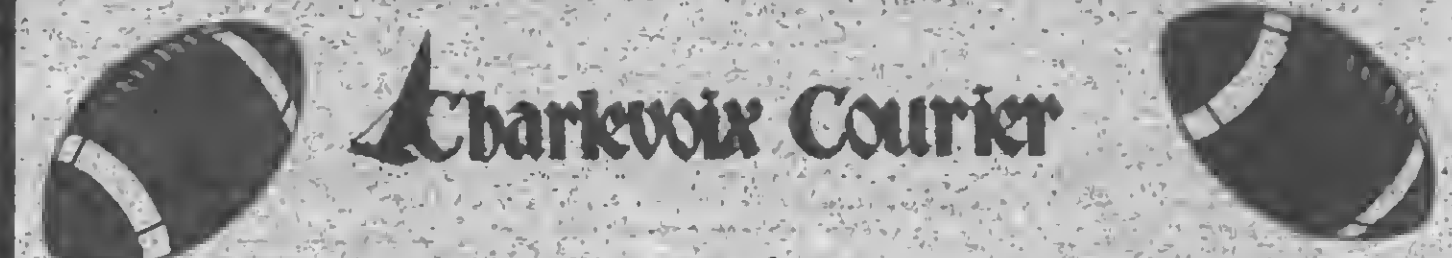

Green Bay - Detroit. Green Bay now has a decent quarterback. But that's about all. Pick - Detroit.

Minnesota - Chicago. Take the team which has a coach with at least a little class and dignity. Pick - Minnesota.

Costs broken down on 9-1-1 proposal

By Laurie Lounsbury

Many parallels have been drawn between Charlevoix County initiating 9-1-1 emergency dispatch and buying a car. In both cases, there are many styles and options available that can affect the total cost.

Despite significant support for a 9-1-1 system, there have been several questions raised about the steep price tag that goes with it. Terms like enhanced 9-1-1, central dispatch, and CAD systems often add confusion and cost to the issue of having 9-1-1 service.

A proposal on the November ballot seeks one mill for two years to construct and equip a 9-1-1 central dispatch system. Central dispatch and the equipment costs are two large options involved with 9-1-1 service. (A mill is $1 per every $1,000 of a home's state equalized value with state equalized value being half of market value. Think of it this way, for every $10,000 your home is worth, each mill costs you $5 per year.)

Costs included in a 9-1-1 system can be broken down into four categories. Two of the four categories would be funded by the millage proposal. Funding for the other two categories has yet to be determined.

A breakdown of the categories and costs follows:

1) Central dispatch equipment. This includes office chairs and desks ($1,100), typewriters ($3,000), a Computer Aided Dispatch system ($84,000), a 20 channel communications recorder ($35,000), computer processor ($20,528) remote printers and modems ($17,000) and a radio system $1,500,000. Total central dispatch equipment cost $1,660,628.

2) New radio equipment for all emergency vehicles so that all emergency vehicles in Charlevoix County are on the same radio frequency. ($560,000)

3) Annual operating costs. Operating costs cover employee wages, health and life insurance, worker's compensation costs, office lease costs, and any other miscellaneous office costs: ($408,798)

4) Monthly charge from the phone company to cover the cost of 9-1-1 service.

Figures for all of these costs could vary depending on whether Charlevoix operates a 9-1-1 system as a single county, or enters into a two or three-county system. The costs will also vary depending on whether Charlevoix County enters a multi-county system with Antrim County, or with Emmet and Cheboygan Counties.

Millage would provide funds for the first two categories which encompass start-up costs. Annual operating costs and telephone line charges (the second two categories) are not included in the millage proposal. For the first two years after the 9-1-1 system came on line, the county would cover that with available funds. After that, operational costs would probably have to be funded either through a phone surcharge or another millage increase.

The millage proposal also won't determine whether Charlevoix County will be entering a single or multi-county plan.

If Charlevoix passes the Nov. 3 millage proposal for 9-1-1 there will be enough funds available to buy a 9-1-1 enhanced central dispatch system. Enhanced service means that a computer in the dispatch center would be able to pinpoint the location of the caller, even if the caller hung up or the connection was broken.

Commissioner Howard Hosler has consistently maintained his interest in having a single county operation on a smaller scale. His reasons are: He would like to have Charlevoix County be solely in charge of the 9-1-1 system, and be able to run it themselves. With a multi-county operation, a 9-1-1 board would have to be created with representation from all the participating counties, thereby creating another layer of bureaucracy. He would also like to see the county start small and build up. "There are the little guys, the widows. They haven't got the money to pay for it. You've got to think about them too," Hosler said. Hosler has cited Crawford County as an example of a single county operation that started without a millage and has grown as their budget will allow. Hosler also said, "I think you have to take it to the people, see what they want, and go from there."

Students to collect bottles and cans

Among the ghosts, goblins, super heroes, and assorted witches this year in Charlevoix, will be the high school Performing Arts students, asking not for candy but returnable bottles and cans.

Out knocking on doors from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 31, the students will collect the returnables to help pay for their many competitions in debate, drama, and speech.

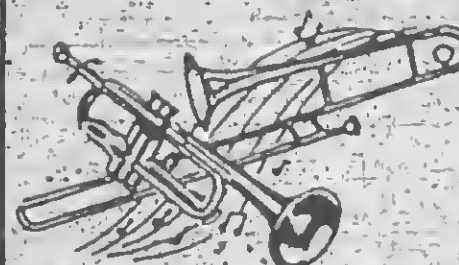

"The burden to pay for not only our trips, but costumes, music, and other expenses, is increasingly on the students and parents," commented Performing Arts Parent Committee President, Cherie Browe. "Budgets are tight everywhere, and we must work harder to make these really valuable competitions possible for our children."

With 60 high school students on the Performing Arts Team, some twenty students are now competing in state-wide Debate meets. A large contingent of varsity members are preparing for the December speech competition known as Pentathlon. Drama competition begins after Christmas, for the entire team.

Nov. 3 election offers something for everyone

Analysis

By L. Scott Swanson
It's the political version of Disney World. The Nov. 3, 1992 general election has something to entertain virtually everyone. You like local politics? How about the race for city council in Charlevoix's first ward. A little less local? Ok, there's a county proposal to fund a 9-1-1 emergency dispatch system. And what about Lansing, surely there's something cooking in Lansing. Of course there is. There are four ballot proposals. There's the Bodem and Long race in which curiously both candidates have been Lansing insiders for years, but to listen to their campaign ads Lansing is a dirty word. At the federal level, there's the Ruppe-Stupak race. This is a cold weather race. Stupak is from the Upper Peninsula, but Ruppe's wife has been ambassador to Norway. And then there's that presidential thing. This race began, oh what was it, a hundred years ago? Currently there are two and a half or three major candidates, depending upon which poll you believe. Incumbent, George Bush; saxophone player Bill Clinton and, as of today, Ross Perot.
It's all out there, waiting for voters to make a final decision. Here's a brief synopsis of what local voters can expect when they walk into the ballot booth.

City

The only city council race is in the first ward where six-year incumbent Bill Haggard is being challenged by former county commissioner Don Meggison. (For a detailed prospective on this race, see page 1.)

In the second ward, incumbent Ted Felter is unchallenged as is incumbent Jackie Cross in the third ward and Mayor Dave Novotny.

County

Funding to initiate a 9-1-1 emergency dispatch system is back on the ballot. County commissioners are asking for one mill for two years to update emergency service department radios throughout the county as well as construct and equip a central dispatch center. This proposal will be familiar to Charlevoix County voters as it also was on the ballot in the August primary election. In fact, it passed at that time. But it was part of a two-proposal package and the other proposal in the package failed.

In August, the millage proposal to fund 9-1-1 start-up costs passed, but a proposal to put a surcharge on phone lines to pay for 9-1-1 operational costs failed. Now the county is back with the start-up proposal. Commissioners have said they will use available county funds to pay for the first two years of 9-1-1 operations. How the operation will be funded after that is anybody's guess. Commissioners have mentioned the possibility of making another ballot request for the phone surcharge or an additional millage levy for 9-1-1 operations.

Debate about the 9-1-1 proposal has been lengthy and complex. With the election just around the corner, some issues have yet to be resolved. Charlevoix County might end up with a 9-1-1 system of its own or be part of a multicounty system. Charlevoix County might end up with Antrim County or possibly Emmet County or possibly Emmet and Cheboygan Counties.

There has been debate over how elaborate a system Charlevoix County should have. The ballot proposal would fund an enhanced system which means the dispatch center would be more than a phone operator. There would be a computer giving the 9-1-1 dispatcher a variety of information about where the call was coming from.

Proponents of the 9-1-1 proposal argue that a 9-1-1 system will save lives. Opponents of the proposal argue that Charlevoix County could have a simpler system for less money, the money could be used to upgrade emergency service departments in other ways, that there are presently too many unknowns to make it reasonable for Charlevoix County to commit to 9-1-1 and that there should be some provision for long-term operational funding before a 9-1-1 system is constructed.

State

The race for 106th District State

Representative features G.T. Long, a Democrat from Horton Bay, against Beverly Bodem, a Republican from Alpena. A redistricting plan approved by the State Supreme Court earlier this year makes Bodem theoretically the incumbent. Prior to the redistricting the Charlevoix area was represented by Ralph Ostling, R-Roscommon. For the past several years, Long has been employed by the State Democratic leadership, first

When Tim Burden wanted a line of credit for his Traverse City construction specialty company,

Scot MacDonald, Senior Vice President, First of America

Scot MacDonald helped with a First of America Smart Business Loan. Because smart business owners know the time has never been better to take advantage of low interest rates. And they're making their move. First of America understands that by helping businesses succeed, we help the economy and the community. Burdco Group, for example, will now be able to take on a multimillion dollar renovation job in Cleveland, which means more local jobs. And we can't measure the value of that investment in monetary terms alone.

Since the beginning of the year, we've loaned $600 million through our Smart Business Loan program. And we're ready to lend even more in the next few months.

First of America has always had a philosophy of supporting the communities we serve. So we work hard at providing competitive, customized commercial loan packages to local businesses.

If you think your business could benefit from a Smart Business Loan, call any of our First of America Bank offices listed below. You'll find our Smart Business Loans can give you a way to get things moving.

by former State Senator Mitch Irwin and later by House majority leaders Gary Owen and Lou Dordak. Bodem was formerly a staff member for representative John Pridnia from Alpena. When Senator Connie Binsfeld became Lt. Governor and Pridnia was appointed to her Senate seat, Bodem took Pridnia's spot as state representative. The campaign has featured fax machine warfare. Long's campaign has claimed Bodem supported spending cuts in programs which benefited northern Michigan. Bodem has charged that Long is more attached to Lansing than to Horton Bay.

There are four constitutional ballot issues for Michigan voters to decide. They are known as proposals A, B, C and D.

Proposals A and C are property tax limitation proposals. Proposal A was put on the ballot by the state legislature with legislative democrats serving as the driving force behind getting the proposal on the ballot. Proposal C was put on the ballot through a petition drive sponsored by Gov. John Engler and other Michigan Republicans.

A detailed explanation of the possible effects of the two proposals could fill a book. Before giving you just the highlights, it may help to give you a brief refresher on some basic property tax terms. Market value is the price your house would theoretically sell for. State Equalized Value (SEV) is half of market value. A mill is $1 for every $1,000 of SEV. The amount of property taxes you pay is calculated by multiplying mills times SEV.

Proposals A and C both address the issue of increasing SEV. In Michigan, for the past several years increasing SEV levels have led to increasing property taxes.

Proposal A would limit SEV increases for homestead property (that's residential households) excluding new construction to five percent per year or the rate of inflation, whichever is less, until the house is sold. Whenever a house is sold, the SEV would be adjusted back up to half of market value. Proposal A would also create separate millage rollback calculations for other types of property besides residential and agricultural.

Proposal C (also known as Cut and Cap) would begin changing the way SEV is calculated for school operating property taxes and make it a smaller percentage of market value. This would decrease school property taxes by 10 percent in 1993, 15 percent in 1994, 20 percent in 1995, 25 percent in 1996 and 30 percent in following years. Proposal C would require the State to reimburse school districts for tax revenue lost due to the cuts up to the millage rate levied in 1991. The

- 4) State Senator: two times.
- 5) State Representative: three times.

Office terms beginning on or after January 1, 1993 would count toward the term restrictions. A person appointed or elected to an office vacancy for more than 1/2 of a term would be considered elected once in that office.

Should this proposal be adopted?

PROPOSAL C

A PROPOSAL TO EXEMPT PROPERTY FROM A PORTION OF SCHOOL OPERATING PROPERTY TAXES AND LIMIT ANNUAL INCREASES IN ALL PROPERTY TAX ASSESSMENTS.

The proposed constitutional amendment would:

- 1) Exempt property from the following proportion of school operating property taxes: 10% in 1993; 15% in 1994; 20% in 1995; 25% in 1996; and 30% in following years.
- 2) Require the State to reimburse school districts for the property tax exemptions described in paragraph (1) above, up to the millage rate levied in 1991.
- 3) Limit for each parcel of property (excluding new construction) the annual assessment increase to 3% or the rate of inflation, whichever is less, until the property is sold. Whenever property is sold, adjust assessment according to current market value of property.

Should this proposal be adopted?

cap part of Proposal C calls for limiting SEV increases (excluding new construction) to three percent or the rate of inflation, whichever is lower. However when the property is sold, the value would be reassessed based on market value.

Both proposals have their proponents and opponents. Proposal C has drawn wide spread support from the business community while incurring opposition from educational and local governmental groups.

Business groups, led by Engler, maintain Proposal C will spur Michigan's economy. Educational groups feel the proposal will cut local funding and they don't believe the State will make up for that loss.

Charlevoix's school board and administration have gone on record as opposing both proposals. School business manager Rich Kelly estimates that the proposals could mean a loss of revenue totaling $3.6 million over three years for the Charlevoix school district. School superintendent Roberta Jackson said the school essentially loses the dollars without any guarantee they could be made up. She said the school could go back to voters to make up the SEV loss through additional millage, but the school would very quickly reach the State's total 50 mill limit.

If both issues pass, the one which receives the most votes will go into effect.

Proposal B was also placed on the ballot through a petition drive. It calls for limiting the terms of Michigan legislators. Terms would be limited as follows: U.S. Senator - two times in any 24-year period; U.S. Representative - three times in any 12-year period; Governor, Lt. Governor, Secretary of State or Attorney General - two times per office; State Representative - three times.

Proponents argue that term limitations put new blood and fresh ideas in office while keeping career politicians from passing laws that they wouldn't want to have to live with when they go back into the private sector. Opponents argue that term limitations would reduce Michigan's influence in the seniority based U.S. legislature and that people are already able to vote politicians out of office if they so choose.

Proposal D was placed on the ballot through a petition drive spearheaded by AAA of Michigan (auto insurance company). The proposal would reduce auto insurance rates by an average of 20 percent for policyholders accepting $250,000 in personal injury protection. It would require profit refunds when insurance underwriting profits exceed five percent. It would permit the State Insurance Commissioner to waive insurance company refund profit and reduced rate requirements to assure a fair rate of return. It would also reduce the right of people to sue by setting higher standards for injuries and preventing drivers who were more than 50 percent at fault from collecting damages.

Proponents say the proposal will reduce insurance costs and lawsuits by people who cause accidents. Opponents say the proposal will prevent injured people from having insurance companies pay for all necessary care.

Federal-

Congressman from Michigan's First District, Former Congressman Phil Ruppe, a Republican is seeking to regain the seat which has been held for the past 14 years by Bob Davis. Davis is not seeking re-election. Standing in Ruppe's path is Democratic candidate Bart Stupak. Both candidates beat out primary opponents for a position on the general election ballot. Stupak is a former state representative. Both candidates are party moderates and despite certain party line differences have expressed views which are quite similar on a number of issues.

There are also two third party candidates in the race: Libertarian Gerald Aydlott and Natural Law Party candidate Lyman Clark.

Presidential race: For anyone who hasn't already heard more than they wanted to on the presidential race, incumbent George Bush is being challenged by Democrat Bill Clinton and independent Ross Perot. Beyond those three, Michigan voters will also find on the presidential ballot - Tisch Independent Citizens' candidate Howard Phillips; Libertarian Andre Marrou; Workers League candidate Helen Halyard; and Natural Law Party candidate John Hagelin.

Charlevoix City voters will cast ballots at City Hall. There will be handicap parking available on the Mason Street side of the building. Voters who are unsure if their voter registration is still current and valid may wish to call the clerk in the city or township in which they reside prior to election day.

Pool proposal broadens scope to health center

Charlevoix pool supporters have now changed their name from Friends of the Pool to Friends of the Charlevoix Health and Fitness Center. The name change reflects a decision to include a health and fitness area in the design of the proposed facility.

Earlier this year, the City Council agreed to sponsor an application for a State grant to help construct the grant. If the City accepts any grant money from the State, the City will be responsible for seeing that the pool remains operational for 20 years. Due to that provision, when they agreed to sponsor the grant application, city council members told pool supporters that before the city accepts grant money from the State, pool supporters will have to have either cash or letters of credit in place to assure adequate funding for pool operations.

In the months since the grant application was submitted, pool supporters have received commitments from five local organizations to contribute $1,000 each annually for pool operations. Crews of the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Acacia and Lifeboat station have agreed to provide life guard services in exchange for use of the pool by their families. An additional 16 pool charter members also have contributed to operating funds by pledging their annual membership fees for three years in advance, at a 10 percent discount. Charter membership fees are limited to 50 and cost $250 per year for families and $150 for individuals.

Pool supporters have made more than 40 presentations to various groups.

The State grant program awards grants of up to $500,000. The City will know the results of the grant application later this year or early in 1993.

Pool supporters are also seeking a $175,000 challenge grant from the Kresge Foundation and will find out the results of that application in March.

Barnard Grange receives award

Grange members from across Michigan gathered in Grayling last week for their annual awards dinner. Charlevoix's Barnard Grange placed sixth in the service project category for their efforts in purchasing CPR manikins and supplies to help local ambulance crews.

Three Barnard Grange members were also elected to the State Grange Board. They are: Richard Smith, Steward; Donna Stevens, Chaplain; and Kay Empey, Pomona.

Methodist Church to host annual fall buffet

The Charlevoix United Methodist Church will be hosting their annual fall buffet luncheon bazaar and bake sale from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday, Oct. 30 at the church. The cost will be $4.50 for adults and $4 for senior citizens. There will be hot meat dishes, salads, rolls, beverages and pie for dessert.

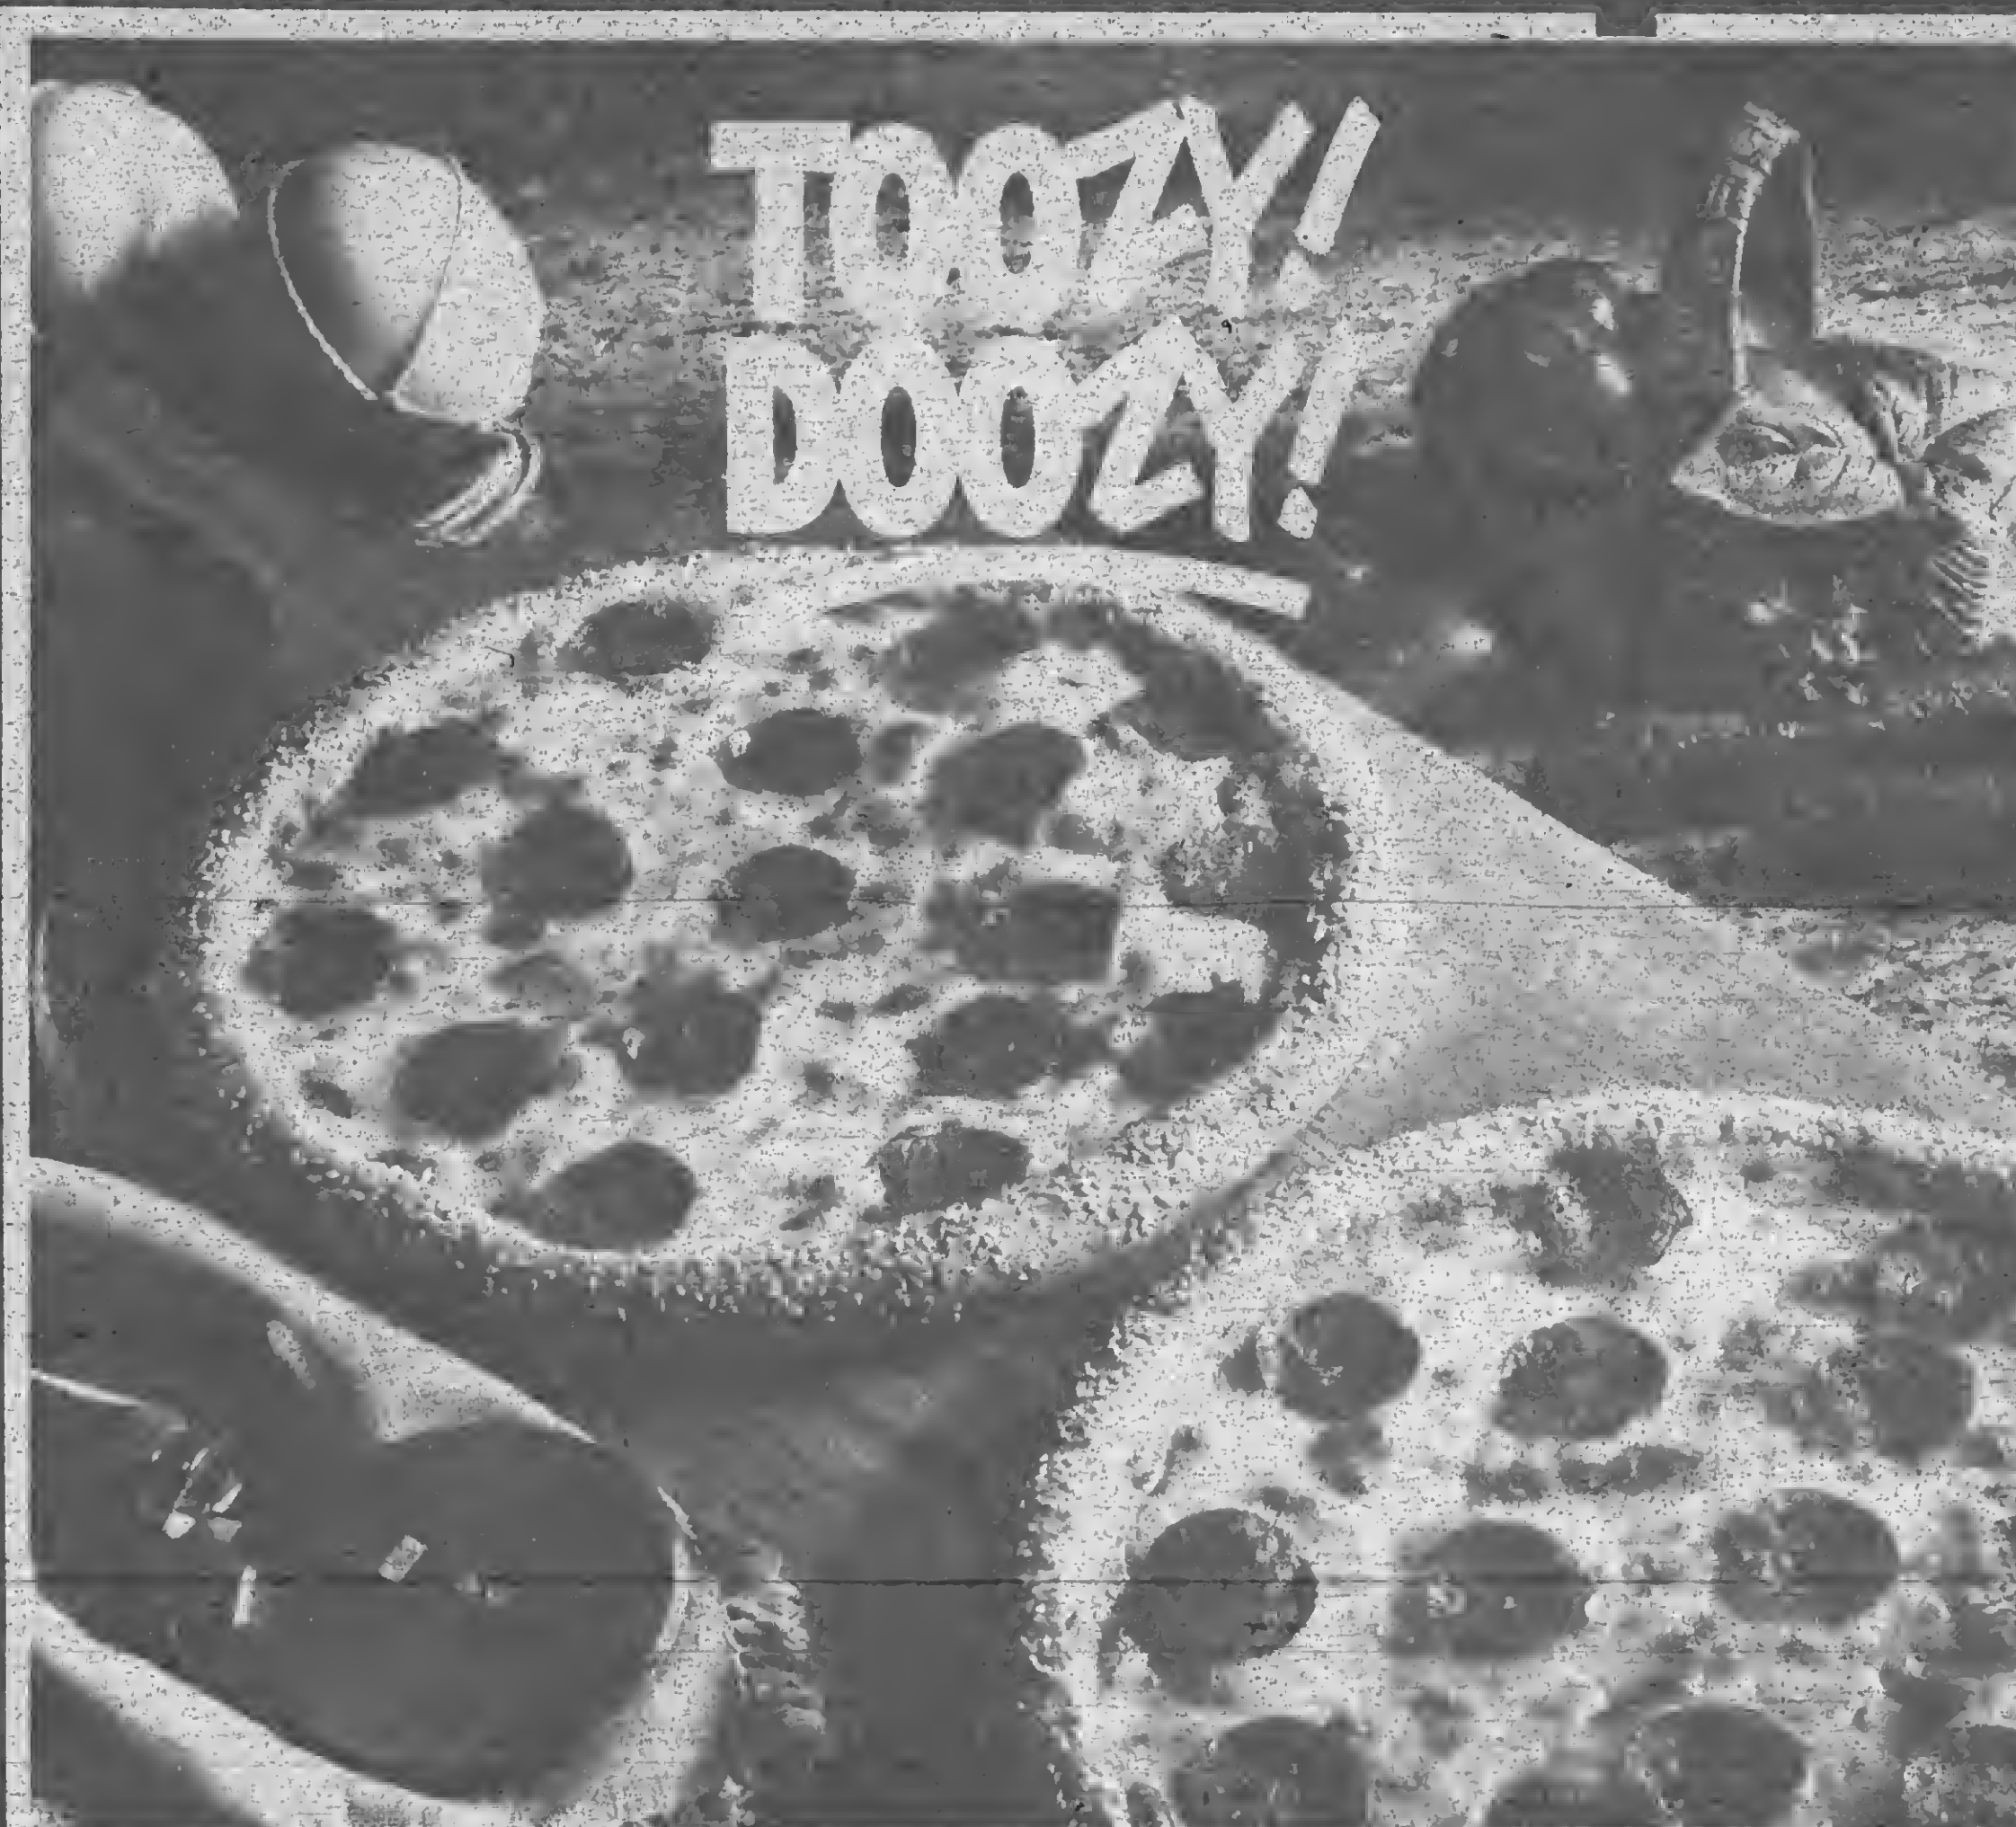

Many handmade gift items will be available along with a selection of baked goods to take home.

Club 77 drawing kids, but falling short of funds

By L. Scott Swanson
The Club 77 youth center is drawing kids, but falling short of money. This past Saturday evening between 80 and 90 middle and high school students attended a Halloween dance. However Club 77 is running short of revenue by $400 to $900 per month.

Club 77 opened this past spring in the old Maxbauer Dairy building on Lincoln Street. Although expenses have been outpacing revenue, the center still has some money from a reserve fund it had when it opened. The club's expenses are about $2,000 a month. They pay $500 a month in rent, $500 for a manager and another $1,000 for heat, electricity and other odds and ends.

"I'm not getting the support I'd hoped for," said Club 77 director Earl Weir. "If this thing is going to work, there's gotta be a commitment from the community at large."

The club has a total membership of about 400 kids; most of them are middle school students or high school freshmen or sophomores. The club is open from 3 p.m. to about 9:30 p.m. on weeknights. Saturday evening's dance went from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. During the summer, there were, on average, about 30 kids at the club. Occasionally there would be 40 to 50.

"The kids love it. They like to come in there and hang out," explained Swance Lee Alden, another board member.

The club offers young people a variety of activities, some cost money and some don't. Among the activities available are video games, a snack bar, cards, board games, puzzles, pool and ping-pong tables, and a basketball court. Weir said the popularity of the various activities seems to go in cycles. When the basketball hoop went up this summer, several kids were playing basketball. In fact, they even had a small tournament one day. Then for a while puzzles got to be popular and the kids were spending hours putting together puzzles.

In addition to the day to day activities, the club also periodically has special programs. Paul Bunyan Lanes and Flight Deck brought their karaoke equipment down one night and the club hosted a karaoke night. This past Saturday evening a DJ from the KHQ radio station played music for the Halloween dance and costume party. Barbara Scully and high school student Tiffany Wojan have been coordinating the club's special events. The club hasn't had any shortage of ideas for events. The shortage has been in cash and adult volunteers.

Club treasurer Vickie Moses said that although there have been donations from churches and service clubs and occasional personal donations, the club's financial resources are dwindling and the board is worried about being able to continue to keep Club 77's doors open. Moses says what the club needs is a funding source it can count on each and every month.

Alden says: "I know a lot of people care because I've talked to Russian Dancers to perform Saturday evening

By Ralph McRae

After performing in Sault Ste. Marie and East Jordan, the ten Russian dancers from Kazan are now in Charlevoix. They arrived late Tuesday night and will be performing in the high school gym at 7:30 p.m. this Saturday, Nov. 7.

In between performances, the dancers have had and are continuing to have a busy schedule. Sunday, in East Jordan, Mariya Elova, the youngest of the dancers had her sweet sixteen birthday party. Tad Malpass of East Jordan hosted a party for the dancers at his home.

Tuesday evening the dancers stayed at the WeatherVane Terrace in Charlevoix courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Bernice Cannan. During the rest of the week they will be staying with ten area families whose hospitality has been coordinated by the local Zonta Club. During the evening many of the families are planning to host get-togethers to allow the Russians to meet their friends.

Bernice Cannan has organized a variety of activities to keep the dancers busy during the day. There will be several excursions throughout Charlevoix. The dancers will visit Charlevoix Public School and St. Mary's school. They will also be touring the Big Rock plant and the Medusa Cement plant Wednesday evening there will be a dinner for the dancers at the Charlevoix Congregational Church. The public is welcome to attend. The cost is $3 per person.

Several local businesses have contributed in a variety of ways to make the Russian's visit a success. For example, each Charlevoix elementary student is receiving a free ticket to the Saturday night performance, courtesy of Pat McKeown Ford. Other people wishing to obtain tickets for Saturday evening's performance may purchase them at the high school or at any one of several local stores. Ticket prices are $5 for adults, $3 for students and $1 for children younger than 12.

Soccer proponents address school board

By Laurie Lounsbury

A determined group of about 100 soccer supporters appeared before the Charlevoix Board of Education to plead their case for a sanctioned high school soccer team.

A non-sanctioned soccer club has existed for the last ten years. Organization and funding for the club has come from the 4-H organization and soccer participants.

Eric Kammerman addressed the board to point out key reasons why the soccer club should become a sanctioned sport. His reasons were:

*As a school sanctioned sport, the kids would receive additional recognition.

*Players' skills would improve if they were playing against other sanctioned teams. Currently, the number of teams they are able to play is limited because sanctioned teams often won't play against non-sanctioned teams.

*Players could potentially qualify for college scholarships that are currently unavailable to them because of their non-sanctioned, club status.

Kammerman estimated that start-up costs for a soccer team would be approximately $250 per student, or $6,000 for the first year. Costs would decline after that, since equipment and uniforms usually last six to seven years.

The issue of having a sanctioned soccer team is not new. The soccer club approached the board of education in 1989 asking for a sanctioned team. The extra-curricular committee at the time turned the club down.

The board's concerns in the past are still concerns today. They include:

*Financial ability to support another team.

*The ability of the school to maintain another fall sport at a high quality level.

*The possible adverse effect of another fall sport on the existing fall sports, due to the possibility of soccer drawing kids away from other sports.

Kammerman responded to the last concern by saying, "We're not asking you to add a new sport. This is already existing, and it has for ten years."

Athletic Director Richard Swenor acknowledged that soccer is one of the fastest growing sports in the country, and that 19 schools in northern Michigan have sanctioned soccer teams. Swenor also pointed out that of those 19 schools, most are class A, B, or D schools. Only two class C schools have soccer teams, Elk Rapids and Harbor Springs. Swenor said those them." She says she feels the club takes care of something precious and irreplaceable: our community's children. "I think this is a worthwhile cause. I can't think of a more worthwhile cause," she adds. "If it has to fold, I'm going to cry and cry."

Have you ever heard of a video scavenger hunt?

I hope you weren't too surprised if last Sunday, you ran into several teams of enthusiastic women, each team clutching a video machine. They're all members of the Preceptor Beta Mu Chapter — a local chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority. A long list of items to be videoed in an hour and a half included: a beach scene taken at the Depot Beach, the Ferry Avenue Beach and the Michigan Beach; somebody wearing a Charlevoix sweatshirt, a scarecrow, a commemorative plaque on a building, and the ever present ducks in the park.

But that's not all. Come the opening of the hunting season, when husbands go off to hunting camp, this vivacious bunch of women is not going to be left here to stoke the home fires. On the contrary! They are planning a trip of their own to one of the newest tourist attractions, the largest mall in the world, the Mall of America, located in the Minneapolis and St. Paul area. According to Terry Lee Rowe of Passageways Travel, who arranged the tour, this 78 acre complex, has a miniature golf course, and amusement park, 14 movie theaters and 40 eating establishments.

Ann Hufford, one of the founders of Beta Sigma Phi, tells me that there will be eight other women going on this year's trip. — Kay Beatty, Kay Ball, Pat Pence, Thelma Dittlow, Janet Freidinger, Judy Edger, Linda Moore and guest, Vivian Mettler. "There are sixteen of us in the Preceptor Chapter and most of us have been together for over 12 years. We have such a good time together," laughs Ann.

The first trip they took several years ago was to Toronto to see the "Phantom of the Opera". The following year they went to Chicago for three days, and last year they booked a Carnival Cruise to Nassau.

On the boat the usual entertainment, a passenger participation stage show was scheduled. Kay Ball, a former professional singer in the Detroit Area, was coaxed to do her popular "Dr. Ruth" imitation. Sorority sisters were scattered in the audience, primed to ask her very incisive questions. Don't you wish you could have been there? We'll never know who had more fun, the actors or the audience.

Ann Hufford was teased for winning the prize for carrying the most pictures of her seven grandchildren.

Belonging to Beta Sigma Phi is not only fun and games. Although the sorority is primarily a social and cultural organization, the women also undertake numerous service projects throughout the year, including planning the successful Home Tour for the benefit of the Charlevoix Area Hospital; they staff the canteen for the Blood Bank; and organize the Santa Luncheon for Children during the Holidays.

Today there are three chapters of Beta Sigma Phi in Charlevoix. New members join the Kappa Sigma chapter. After four years they move on to the Xi Epsilon Gamma Chapter. After eight years they move on to the Preceptor Beta Mu Chapter. Each group meets twice a month, usually in a members' home.

Video scavenger hunts, cruises, fund-raisers, and benefits all keep these friendly, responsible women active socially and involved for the benefit of their community. Many members have told me that even tho' they give a lot of themselves, they gain more than they give in friendships and personal satisfaction.

Club 77 needs support

by EDITH GILBERT

Editor,

C'mon Charlevoix, we can do this!

It was planned for, it was long overdue, it was needed, and it is a dream come true. I'm talking about Charlevoix's recently opened youth center, "Club 77."

Do you know that there are almost 400 kids signed up for membership, and that they visit the "Club" frequently?

Do you know that if they are visiting the "Club" that they are not downtown or in stores being tempted to shoplift or commit vandalism?

Do you know that if they have a place to go with their friends, they will possibly not be in danger of contact with drugs, or alcohol, or other "kid killers"?

As a citizen, I supported, and worked for, and even fought for, a place that would be "drug-free", alcohol-free, and safe for our own precious, bright, priceless, irreplaceable, kids to go.

I thought that the merchants would welcome, and support, a place for the kids to go, and then they would not be "hanging out downtown" with their friends, and costing time and money for the store owners.

I thought that the parents would be delighted that they could let their kids go to the "Club" and not have to worry about them.

I thought that the city, and the citizens would welcome a haven for our kids. At least that's what I thought.

Well, I was wrong. "Club 77" is doing a good job of trying to provide interesting, low-cost fun and games, and snacks for the kids who like coming in and "hanging out." The board members have had meetings trying to make the activities fit what the kids want, and what can be accomplished with the limited funds coming in. We've had parents meetings trying to drum up interest in the need for "chaperones", people to set up programs, and run them, maybe to run the snack-bar, or help with activities, and in the most prevalent need, fund-raising. We have a very vital item here, folks. Our children, and the future.

Charlevoix seems able to create and keep many programs going, planting petunias, and maintaining Nature's pharmacy holds the key to cures of many of our diseases. The anticancer compound, Taxol, derived from the bark of the Pacific Yew, is now used in treating ovarian and breast cancer. Digitalis, a compound found in Foxglove, has long been used for heart treatment. Alkaloids, from the Madagascar Periwinkle, are used in the treatment of Hodgkin's Disease. A compound from Stinging Nettle and Evening Primrose aids in the relief of arthritis... and the Alkaloid Sangivarin, contained in Bloodroot, has demonstrated antiseptic and anticancer properties, and is widely used in toothpaste and mouthwash. The NCI is investigating St. Andrew's Cross, for it shows promise in their anti-Aids screen. Lobeline, an ingredient used in anti-smoking gum and lozenges, comes from the blue and white-flowered native Annual Lobelia Inflata. So as you button down this year's garden, start planning some space for some of our native plants for next year. Their natural habitat is too rapidly diminishing, and who knows, you may be actually planting seed for your retirement!

them for years, parks, and fire equipment, the Rainbow Shoppe, and a food pantry, seniors programs, and many more. Hey, guys, these are our very own kids, and they have shown that they have a need for, and like the "Club". Can anyone please show interest and help the few of us that are trying to keep it open?

Fund-raising is desperately needed. We have lots of suggestions, but they need hands and feet, and brains to run them. We have lots of ideas for activities, but there again, we need caring people to give just a couple of hours week to "our very own kids".

After all the effort that has gone into creating and opening up the "Club 77", we surely do not want to have to close it and show our kids that we just don't have the interest and the love for them that we like to pretend we do.

We are desperately in need of funds to keep going. It isn't like we are taking money for frivolous things. These are our kids. Just five bucks a month, or ten, or even twenty, or a donation for a year. It is cheaper than supporting a prison, and prisoners, or drug and alcohol rehabilitation.

If you have heard my cry, and have a loving heart for our very own kids, please, please call me at 547-6165, or Earl Weir, at 547-6026, or Vicki Moses at 547-9795.

Remember, we are an example to our young people, let's show them how to treat the next generation, and not pass on an attitude of apathy. Charlevoix is beautiful. Charlevoix is a nice place to live. Charlevoix is growing. Charlevoix is caring. Let Charlevoix also be a place of love for the young, and a place with a bright future.

Love our kids,

schools reported that soccer did take away from their other fall sports.

Board member Stephan Czerkes addressed the possibility of soccer attracting players from other sports. "If we don't have enough players for a certain sport, then maybe it's time to stop playing that sport," Czerkes said.

A female member of the soccer club pointed out that women play soccer, but women have never played football and never will, so they aren't taking away from an existing sport.

In a statement that drew applause from the crowd, Hagen Manker said, "The key here is the kids. If we try to impose on the community the concept of a 'quality sport'...

we're missing the point of sports. The point is teamwork, being a part of something, building self-esteem and participating. If we have a losing team from now until the year 2,000, it doesn't matter as long as the kids learn something from it."

Board member Max Novak waited until all comments had been heard from the floor and then said, "We don't want to deny any of our young people in the community anything. I'm just worried about our finances."

Superintendent Roberta Jackson said that adding a soccer team should be considered along with the extensive curriculum changes that are being considered. Extra-curricular sports should be looked at as part of the package.

The board will have a decision regarding a sanctioned soccer team by January 18th.

Community Choir to present Requiem

The Charlevoix Community Choir will be performing Mozart's Requiem Nov. 8th at 3:30 p.m. The performance will take place in the Congregational Church. The 400-year-old piece was written as a tribute to the dead. The performance will feature a 15-piece orchestra along with the community choir.

The concert is free and open to the public; however a free-will offering will be taken to help cover costs of the performance.

Featured performers are: Nancy MacArthur Smith, soprano. A former resident of Charlevoix, Smith now resides in the Washington D.C. area where she has performed in several musical comedies. She is a member of an ensemble of light opera singers who call themselves "Opera and

by JAN BOSS

I'm getting older. Just ask any of the Junior High kids I have the privilege to hang around with. They seem to remind me weekly that I'm OLD. When we are young we desire with such energy to be older. "When I grow up..." is one of the most-used phrases in our vocabulary as children. We hate to hear "when you're older" coming from our parents' lips. So why is it so difficult to accept our age after 30, huh?

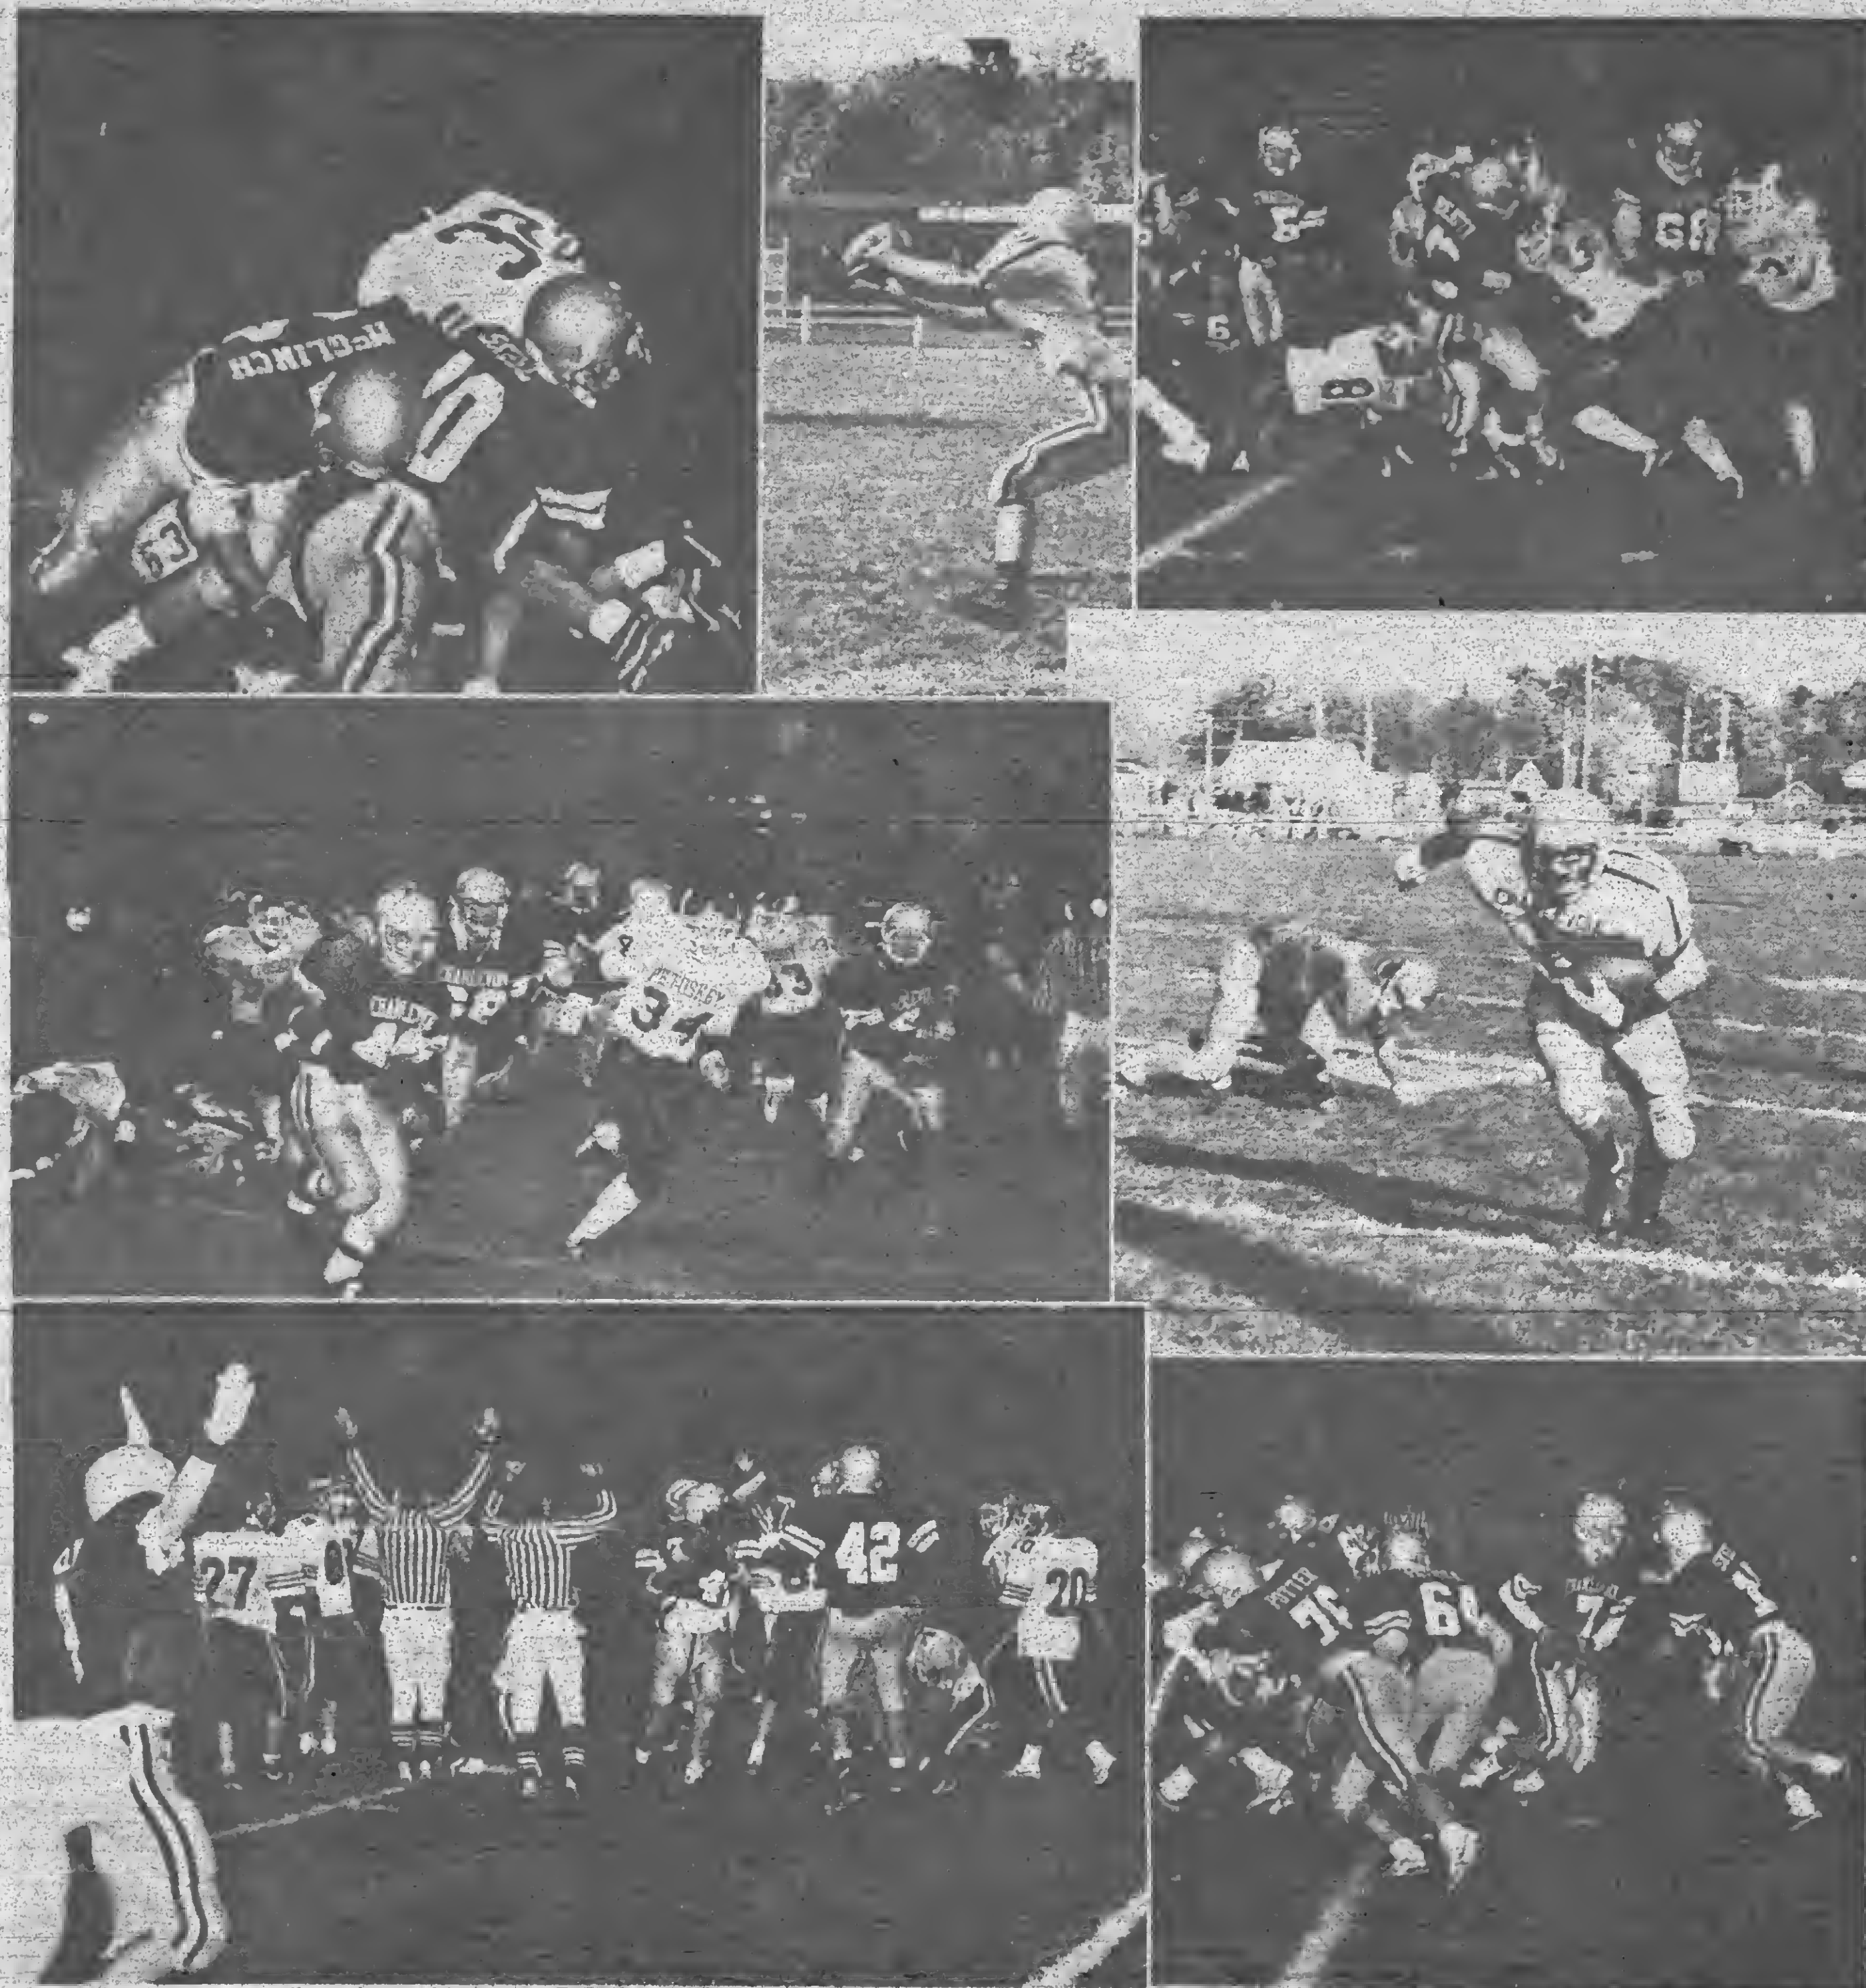

There are times that I feel that just last year I was in high school creating all that mischief. Or wasn't it yesterday that my marching band performed at Michigan State. And what about getting my drivers license or being able to take the car for the first time alone. Wasn't that just last week. The truth is that it wasn't. It's been many years ago now but the memories are so vivid in my mind that I forget at times how fast time passes and that I need to live in the present with the fond memories.

We each spend our lives wanting to be older or younger than we are. We think that there is something great around the corner or did we miss it in the past. The truth is, it's right here in our present. God promises to be here with us now and forever. He tells us in Matthew not to worry about tomorrow, for it will take care of itself. Live today.

Every age is a great age. Every age has its limits and its freedoms. We can easily miss the great part of life by wishing we were older or younger when the great part of our life is TODAY because it is the only part we have control over!

Football team to make playoff debut

By L. Scott Swanson

So just where is Montague anyhow? Must be somewhere to the south. Charlevoix had to go through East Jordan to get there.

The Charlevoix Rayder football team will be making its first appearance in the state postseason playoffs this Friday following a 42-16 win over East Jordan this past Friday. The Rayder playoff game will be against Montague on Montague's homefield this coming Friday night at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 apiece and will be on sale at the high school office beginning Wednesday afternoon.

But to get to Montague, Charlevoix had to wrap up its regular season with a win against visiting East Jordan. The Red Devils came into the game with a 1-7 record, but certainly didn't look like a 1-7 team early in the game.

Charlevoix opened the game's scoring with a 15-yard pass from Don Jess to Brandon Webb. Webb got behind two East Jordan defensive backs deep in the end zone and Jess whistled a strike. Vince Voisin kicked the extra point.

East Jordan didn't fold. They came back with a long scoring drive capped by a 37-yard touchdown run by junior fullback Chad Raymond. The Red Devils' interior line were pushing the Rayder linemen around on the drive and opening some big holes. Raymond wasn't encountering people early in his runs and was hitting hard when he did. Quarterback Karl Redmer ran in the two-point conversion and lo and behold East Jordan was up 8-7.

This trailing stuff did not set at all well with the Rayders. They took steps to rectify that situation while still in the first quarter. A sideline pass from Jess to Keith Carey was overthrown and fell incomplete. But seconds later, the Rayders went back to the same combination. This time Jess was on the mark, hitting Carey on an inside cut. A couple of quick moves and Carey was on a 44-yard expedition to the end zone, putting Charlevoix ahead to stay. Voisin kicked the extra point and the Rayders led 14-8.

Coming into the game, Rayder fullback Jody McGlinch needed just 20 yards to go over the 1,000 yard mark for the season. He took care of that early in the game. In the second quarter, he added a touchdown on a six-yard run. Jess passed to Voisin for a two-point conversion and Charlevoix took a 22-8 lead into the locker room at halftime.

McGlinch scored again in the third quarter, this time on a 13-yard run. Voisin's extra point attempt failed, just missing wide to the right.

East Jordan got its second and final touchdown late in the third quarter when Jerry Neumann swept to the left and went 59 yards. Jeremiah Lucas ran in the conversion.

Charlevoix closed the door with two more touchdowns in the fourth quarter. Webb's speed and a couple of good blocks by some pulling linemen turned a routine play into a 60-yard touchdown and McGlinch got his third touchdown of the night on a three-yard run.

For Charlevoix, Webb had 239 yards rushing on nine carries for a downright gaudy average of almost 27 yards per carry. McGlinch had 108 yards on 14 carries, going over the 1,000 yard mark. Carey caught five passes for 142 yards. Jess completed nine of 13 passes for 176 yards and ran his season passing total up to 1,418 yards.

Defensively, Charlevoix's leading tacklers were Ben Whitley and Chris Pease.

Rayders win 42-16

David Skeel (10) wraps up this East Jordan runner as Ben Whitley (68) moves in to assist. The Rayders started slowly against East Jordan, but righted themselves in time to put to rest any ideas of a Red Devil upset.

Cross country team qualifies for Class C state finals meet

A sixth straight state title may be hard to come by, but the Charlevoix boys' cross country team has qualified for the cross country state finals for the 16th straight time.

Suttons Bay won Saturday's regional meet at Benzonia, but the Rayders placed second which was good enough to qualify them for the Class C State Finals race Saturday, Nov. 7 at Frankenmuth. Suttons Bay finished with 40 points while Charlevoix finished with 81. Clare placed third with 114.

Matt Smith was Charlevoix's top individual runner, finishing second with a time of 16:28 on the 3.1 mile course. Sophomore Mike Bush also ran well, placing seventh in a time of 16:48. Josh Scheels was 14th with a time of 17:07.

Charlevoix's girls' team just missed qualifying as a team for the state finals, although senior Elsa Conlan did qualify as an individual, placing 17th in 21:03. Sophomore Becca Chamberlin, who has had an excellent year, narrowly missed qualifying for the state finals individual race.

Rayders beat Mancelona

By L. Scott Swanson

It wasn't anything spectacular. It was just a nice solid win. Perhaps, most importantly the Rayders played four solid quarters, not just three in beating Mancelona 64-52 last Thursday evening.

Several times this season, the Rayders have played well for three out of four quarters, but had their offense go absent without leave for one quarter. That problem has been responsible for more than one of the Rayders' nine losses.

Thursday, Charlevoix put together four good quarters against the visitors from Mancelona.

In the first quarter, the game was close. Charlevoix's offense was functional, but not completely in synch. Meanwhile, Mancelona was shooting well from the perimeter. With about two minutes left in the quarter, Charlevoix trailed 9-7 and coach Toni Felter called time-out. Coming out of the time-out, Charlevoix went into a full court press which flustered the Ironwomen and shut them down for the remainder of the quarter while Charlevoix scored five unanswered points.

For much of the second quarter the game was a draw with Charlevoix maintaining, but failing to extend a small lead. But once again Charlevoix closed the quarter with a flourish. Junior forwards Becky Bragg and Jamie Doan led a Charlevoix run which left the Rayders with a 28-22 halftime lead.

In the third quarter the Rayders pressed, controlled the boards and ran when the opportunity presented itself. Charlevoix extended its lead to double figures and ended the quarter up 47-37.

Charlevoix maintained its lead in the fourth quarter and was never seriously threatened.

The Rayders had excellent scoring balance, placing three players in double figures. Bragg led the Rayders with 15 points while Liz Grunch had 13 points and Jodi Allison a dozen points. The three also were each in double figures rebounding. Allison with 13, Bragg with 11 and Grunch with 10. Mary Jane Grunch and Sheila Siegwart keyed the full-court defensive pressure, harassing the Mancelona players into several errors.

The win raised Charlevoix's season record to 7-9 and league record to 5-6. The Rayders' next game will be at Kalkaska Nov. 6.

Heidi Miller (10) of the Charlevoix junior varsity basketball team finds out that sometimes basketball isn't a non-contact sport. Meanwhile, Liz Kelly (22) pleads innocent to having fouled anybody. Charlevoix's j.v. team split two games last week, losing to Petoskey, but beating Mancelona.

Tie-breaker decides football contest

Judy Carey won this past week's Courier football contest, but she had to go to the tie-breaker to beat Jill Dreyer. Entering Monday night's Minnesota-Chicago game, Bill Carey, Judy Carey and Jill Dreyer each had seven correct picks. Bill Carey had Chicago and his wife and Dreyer had Minnesota, the team which won.

In the tie-breaker game, Dreyer had selected 42 points and Carey 53. The actual total was 59 as Nebraska stomped Colorado 52-7.

The prize in the contest was a large box of laundry detergent, good for 180 loads, from Sears of Charlevoix.

Forget about last week

Last week, 6-5: Season record, 24-9.

All right, all right already. I was 6-5 last week. I could have done that well flipping a coin. Still, I didn't pick as miserably as the Lions played. Fomes has got to dump that bend until you break defensive philosophy.

Did last week's miserable showing make me timid? Hardly. I've gone out on a limb with some upsets this week, including Charlevoix over Montague.

Michigan - Northwestern: So Michigan struggled against Northwestern. Big deal. Pick - Michigan. Wisconsin - Michigan State: Wisconsin should have beaten Illinois. Meanwhile Michigan State quarterbacks have been dropping like flies. Pick - Wisconsin.

Washington - Arizona: I'm picking this as an upset. Pick - Arizona. Boston College - Notre Dame: Another upset. Pick - Boston College.

Dallas-Detroit. An upset of a different kind. Any Detroit fan has to be upset with the way they've played this year. Pick - Dallas.

Pittsburgh - Buffalo. The Bills are fading fast. Pick - Pittsburgh. Nebraska - Kansas: Another game from the who-cares conference. Pick - Nebraska.

Charlevoix - Montague: Charlevoix got hammered by St. Francis and didn't play all that well against East Jordan. Yet, I'll go out on a limb. Pick - Charlevoix.

St. Ignace - St. Francis: Overall, St. Ignace has played better competition during the regular season. Pick - St. Ignace.

Cheboygan - Fruitport: Cheboygan has playoff experience. Pick - Cheboygan.

Grayling - Saginaw Swan Valley. Grayling let me down last week, but they won't do it again. Because I'm not giving them the chance. Pick - Saginaw Swan Valley.

County commissioners discuss $3,000 bill for extradition

By Laurie Lounsbury

When Charlevoix County funds weren't available to extradite a man found in Wyoming, a Boyne City police officer simply mastered the moment with his personal credit card. Loren Wilson, who was charged with fraud in Charlevoix County, was flown back from Wyoming Oct. 10 by two Boyne City police officers. The plane tickets for the three men cost $3,000, which was charged to officer Jeff Gettel's credit card.

When Gettel learned that Wilson had been picked up by Wyoming authorities, he asked assistant prosecuting attorney Karen Neumeier to authorize the funds to extradite Wilson. Neumeier authorized the extradition, but informed officer Gettel that the prosecutor's budget didn't have the funds to pay for the plane tickets. Gettel charged the tickets to his personal credit card with the hope that the county would reimburse him.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners was asked to authorize the transfer of funds from the contingency fund to the prosecutor's budget to reimburse officer Gettel. The commissioners were surprised that a police officer would have received permission to charge $3,000 on his personal credit card for official county business. "I'm just trying to figure out how we got ourselves in this position," Commissioner Walt Hufford asked. Commission Chairman Don Smith said, "An officer can't pay for extradition on their personal Mastercard. That's like me funding 911 out of my personal checking account."

County commissioners authorized the transfer of funds, but made it clear that they want to know what procedures are required in extradition cases.

Wilson is housed in the Charlevoix County jail now, where his incarceration costs are mounting. Wilson has numerous health problems that require a daily blood test and a daily check-up from a physician. The cost for these two services is $72 a day. This cost does not include the cost of the ten medications that Wilson is taking.

Sheriff George Lasater said that the County has a $6,000 budget to pay for health care for prisoners. The cost of keeping Wilson will undoubtedly exceed the budget. Lasater said. Lasater explained that the sheriff's department normally pursues extradition in the case of major felony assault charges or major drug related charges.

The charges against Wilson relate to an incident that took place at the Boyne City Farm Co-op last spring. After receiving a line of credit, Wilson allegedly ran up a $4,200 bill at the co-op and left the state with the bill unpaid. According to officer Gettel, Wilson may have done the same thing at the East Jordan Co-op.

Neither Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Kraag Lieberman nor Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Karen Neumeier responded to numerous phone calls from the Courier.

State police win law enforcement shoot

Four sharpshooters from Post 78 of the Michigan State Police shot down the competition and captured top gun honors at the Bog Rock Point/Charlevoix Police Turkey Shoot held October 16 at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

Officers Brad Meyer, Jeff Ruthig, Andrea LeFevre and Tim Shibata from Post 78 scored 1,126 points out of a possible 1,140 for the best team score, out-pointing four other teams.

LeFevre's perfect score of 285 was tied by Kevin Goldworthy of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and required an extra shootout to determine the individual champion. Goldworthy again shot a perfect score and claimed top honors when LeFevre's gun misfired in the extra session.

The Boyne City Police Department team had the second highest score; the City of Charlevoix Police came in third, the Burns Security team from Big Rock Point was fourth and the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club came in fifth.

The competition required contestants to complete a standard competition course specified by the Michigan Law Enforcement Officers Training Council. The competition tested shooting accuracy from different distances and positions at various speeds.

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, November 4, 1992 - PAGE 17

It's prime time for car/deer accidents

An all-time high of 48,233 car-deer crashes with seven fatalities and 1,732 injuries were reported on state roads last year, a 5 percent increase over 1990, AAA Michigan reports.

The 1990 tally was 45,945 crashes in which one person died and 1,957 suffered injuries. In 1989, the previous peak year, there were 46,784 reported crashes with six deaths and 1,857 injuries.

Car-deer crashes are not strange to Michigan. There are thousands every year, and they're increasing in number. They happen throughout the year, most occurring during fall and early winter months. Last year, 18,001 were recorded during October and November, 31.6 percent of the yearly total.

This year an estimated 760,000 firearm deer hunters are expected to take to the woods between Nov. 15-30, adding to the normal traffic flow and tourist travel.

Ironically, the size of the herd was 1.7 million last year, down from the peak year of 1989 when the herd numbered 2 million strong. This year's deer numbers are projected at 1.75 million.

"Last year was tough," said Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan's Community Safety Services manager, of the seesaw statistics. "A look at the southern tiers of counties shows this. There may be fewer deer per square mile than you'd find in the Upper Peninsula, but the number of car-deer crashes is uniformly high because there are more roads and more vehicles on those roads. In short, the fewer number of deer stands a greater chance of being hit."

Last year, the top five counties in the number of car-deer crashes reported were Kent with 1,662; Calhoun, 1,363; Montcalm, 1,239; Jackson, 1,222; and Menominee in the Upper Peninsula, 1,117.

The fewest number of such crashes were recorded in the U.P. counties of Keweenaw with 16; Luce, 132; Houghton, 164; Gogebic, 172; and Alger, 192.

While there is no reasonable way to eliminate all car/deer crashes because of the unpredictability of the animal, AAA Michigan advises motorists to always wear safety belts and heed the following tips:

-Car-deer crashes most often occur on paved local and county roads, although freeway motorists are not exempt.

-The hours just before dawn and just after dusk are the most likely times to have deer move from area to area.

-If you see a deer, drive slowly and assume that others are nearby.

-If you should approach a deer in the road, do not take unsafe evasive action. It is usually safer to strike the deer than another object, such as a tree or other vehicle.

-Be aware of eyes reflecting from your headlights. Drive at a speed that allows you to brake safely if you spot a deer.

-Should you strike one, report it to local or county police authorities. Also, to your insurance company. Repair bills for car-deer crashes generally average $1,300 per car. If you choose to keep a deer you hit, first get a permit from the police department or Department of Natural Resources.

Organization of 1993 Venetian Festival begins

There's no point in waiting 'til the last minute. The first organizational meeting for the 1993 Venetian Festival is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 12 at City Hall. Anyone who would like to volunteer to help with the 1993 festival is invited to attend.

Venetian Festival Chairman John Taylor says that about 50 volunteers are needed to help with the various events. Chairmen for the four main segments of the festival will be: Joe Trojanek, street parade; Jodi Ager, lighted boat parade; Gary Stutzman, drum and bugle competition; and Fran Tollas, East Park musical tribute to Ode.

Taylor said that the focus of the first meeting will be determining interest in different events and doing some brainstorming. The meeting will be limited to an hour with the purpose being to plant some seeds for thought without taking up a lot of time.

Emergency funds available

Charlevoix County will receive $21,399 for emergency food and/or shelter from the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Private voluntary or public organizations wishing to apply for a portion of these funds should contact Vasco Zucchiatti at the Department of Social Services, phone 547-4471, by Nov. 9.

Local Brownie troop wins award

Charlevoix Brownie Troop #261 was honored this past summer to receive a national award in the 19th annual "Colgate Youth For America" campaign. The first year Brownies were awarded a fourth place prize of $100 in the search for best community projects in the country by young Americans.

Troop #261 used the 1991-92 Girl Scout theme, "Girl Scouts care for the earth" for their service project. They began by following the "be a good reader program" and earning the program's patch which centered on caring for your environment.

From this study, they organized a plan to distribute recycling literature provided by the local recycling center to area businesses. The recycling company's records showed their main volume of recyclers were residential rather than commercial. The girls wanted to inform business owners how they could improve our community and help to reduce landfill waste by recycling. They also suggested that smaller businesses who didn't generate as much recyclable material join together and have a combined pick-up site and share in the cost for bi-weekly or monthly pickup.

Members of Troop #261 are: Nikki Wheat, Krystal Meredith, Kelly Ward, Brianna Chapais, Stephanie DeKorte, Megan Arnold, Erika Louks and Lizzie Peterson. Troop leaders are Sandy Meredith and Judy Wheat.

Historical Society to host veterans

The Charlevoix Historical Society will host a program entitled "Salute to our Veterans" at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 10. The event will take place at the Harsha House at 103 State Street.

All Charlevoix area veterans are invited to attend the informal program. Veterans are asked to wear their uniforms if possible and bring service pictures, news articles, etc. Families of deceased veterans are also encouraged to attend. Refreshments will be served.

Hunters prepare to leave for deer camp

By L. Scott Swanson

Next to Labor Day and the end of summer, Charlevoix's second biggest annual mass exodus is triggered by the Nov. 15 opening of firearm deer season. Once again this year several local men will be heading for deer camps in the Upper Peninsula. Several other hunters will be hunting either in the Pigeon River State Forest or close to Charlevoix.

In more than one instance, U.P. hunters report that news about the deer herd is not good. However, the hunters also note that whether or not the deer cooperate, the prognosis for a good time in deer camp is always excellent.

Jerry Russell, Mike Webb, Gary Spencer, John Fiedorek, John Nelson and John Ferguson will be hunting up by Curtis, a town near the western edge of Mackinaw County. Russell said their camp is on 40 acres of property the hunters purchased in 1989. Housing is a 10-foot by 40-foot mobile home with a 10-foot by 16-foot addition. Russell estimates the original trailer section was probably built in 1940-something. But there is electricity and the camp is on a plowed road and quite comfortable.

Last year the camp killed two deer. Russell got them both. He got the first one on the afternoon of opening day and the second one a few days later. He shot the second one, a ten-point buck, out of the just kind of nice to get away," he said.

Don Voisin of the High Banks camp 18 miles northwest of Ralph wasn't sure how many the hunters of their camp really want to get. Due to conflicts with college and high school basketball they don't have any high school kids in camp. "We're without draggers this year," Voisin noted.

This is the camp's 21st year and Voisin's 11th with High Banks. As to the prospects for hunting success, Voisin said, "I don't know what to think." He said he's been up bow hunting a couple of times and seen very little. Last year the High Banks hunters got two deer. In camp this year will be Voisin, Dr. Robert Anderson, Bob Winch, ester, Bob Tallas, Dick Pajtas, and Dane Tollas.

Old Charlevoix Couriers, some dating as far back as 1883, have been incorporated into the tabletop decor at The Beantry coffee house on Park Avenue.

Yesterday's news is today's conversation piece at the Beantry coffee house on Park Avenue. Beantry customer and decorator Janette Reynolds convinced Beantry owner Paul LeFevre to resurface his cafe tables with old Charlevoix Courier newspapers. Each table has a Courier issue laminated to its surface and is topped with many coats of polyurethane.

Reynolds went to the Charlevoix Library to get help with her project. Librarian Mary Beth Wallick loaned Reynolds many old Couriers dating back as far as 1885. Reynolds then made copies of the newspapers and glued them to the tabletops.

Reynolds' choice of issues was not a randomly executed task. She pored through hundreds of old papers, trying to pick the most interesting papers from each decade. "I looked for interesting stories, things representative of the era," Reynolds said.

On one table Reynolds displayed the cover of a 1885 issue of the Charlevoix Journal, which was the forerunner to the Courier, along with a different issue's story of a hundred year old woman who was born in 1885.

A 1937 issue was chosen for its dated, log style typesetting. Other issues from different decades were picked because of the looks of the old advertising, and the prices of the products. Allan's Lung Balsam, cough and croup medicine for "25-cents a bottle" is prominently displayed on one table.

A 1944 issue lists the names of Charlevoix soldiers in WW II and includes local stories of the town's politicians. "I wanted to find stories that made a comment about Charlevoix," Reynolds said. Another table shows a picture of the beautiful old Charlevoix public library, gracefully framed with tall, leafy maples.

One table of particular interest shows the Charlevoix High School graduating class of 1963. "It has pictures of the people that come in here," Reynolds explained.

The tables have old newspapers laid out in a crisscross manner, leaving the corners free for resting coffee cups. Reynolds hand painted the corners with coffee beans and art that lent itself to the coffee shop.

"It's really great," LeFevre said of the table decor. "We considered putting other newspapers on the tables too, like sports pages from the Detroit news, but I decided I wanted to keep it completely local."

Hunters prepare for 1992 deer camps

Kraig Swanson from Charlevoix and Don Williams III from East Jordan. Although it is only Swanson's first year in camp, he has already risen to a high level position of responsibility. As of this past Friday evening's camp organizational meeting he was officially notified of his first assignment upon arrival at camp. He has been placed in charge of excavating a hole and erecting the canvas structure which will serve as the camp restroom for the week. It is a longstanding camp philosophy that you've got to have a kid or two in camp to handle such matters.

Crane Lake camp is located near the Upper Peninsula town of Michigamme. The camp has a history dating back more than 30 years. For many years the hunters stayed in a large tent, but since 1990 the camp has been in a Whitey-engineered portable cabin arrangement which the hunters haul back into the woods on a flatbed trailer. In camp this year will be Bob Geer, John Whitley, Mike Whitley, Ed Whitley, Kevin Swanson, his son Kraig, Don Williams, his grandson Don III, Junior Ward, Dave Swanson, Larry Swanson and his son L. Scott.

Last year the Crane Lake hunters killed four bucks. The word from an area forester is that this year there are a lot of does around, but not many bucks. Despite that report, the hunters don't plan on coming home empty handed. Junior Ward's always good for at least one buck.

Not far from the Crane Lake camp is Camp Charlevoix. In fact, an inspired hike will get you to one camp from the other. Warren Shapton said this is the 32nd year that the Camp Charlevoix camp has been where it is. Shapton said he's been going to deer camp for a few more years than that. "I've been going since I was in sixth grade and I'm 75 now," he notes.

Camp Charlevoix is in a nice little cabin on 40 acres. Last year Camp Charlevoix hunters got four deer. As for the deer herd this year, Shapton says, "I don't know. I think they had a rough winter."

In camp this year will be Shapton, Mark White, his son Mark White Jr., Chum White, Bruce Henley, his son in-law Bruce and Ken Watson.

At least three camps with Charlevoix people will be staying south of the bridge.

Jerry Pease, his son Chris Pease, Bob Holtzman, Bruce Meggison, Jack Erber, his son Rick Erber, and Chuck Pease normally go to a cabin in the U.P., but this year they will be hunting over by Black Lake. Last year they got four in the U.P., but they're not sure what to expect at the new site.

Chris Pease already got a deer with his bow and he and his father and mother will be cutting up more deer whether or not they're successful during rifle hunting season. Jerry is the owner of Jerry's Meats on East Lincoln Street and during the course of hunting season he and his wife and son process about 80 deer. Working together, the three of them can cut up and package six deer in an evening. The cost to have a deer cut up is $45 and an average deer will yield about 40 pounds of meat in a variety of cuts.

Doug Bergmann will be following a family tradition which encompasses four generations and dates back to the 1920s when he goes to hunting camp in the Pigeon River. Bergmann's grandfather and uncles began hunting in the Pigeon River. Bergmann said that when he was young, between his grandfather, his uncle and any kids who were old enough and wanted to go the Bergmanns would have as many as 14 or 15 hunters in camp.

This year Bergmann, his wife Louise and son Douglas will be in camp along with Rick and Jeanne Davis, their son in-law Jeff Stevens and their daughter Shelly Stevens and grandson Brandon. The campers stay in travel trailers. This was the only camp interviewed which had women along. The hunters said that works out well and that sharing a bunk with their wives is far better than bunking with another hunter. Although in Doug Bergmann's case bunking with his wife is bunking with another hunter. A couple of years ago Louise decided that she wasn't just going to go along, she was going to join in the hunt.

Last year just Doug and Louise Bergmann went to camp and Doug got a buck. This year he said he's only seen one deer where he hunts. Earlier in the year, frost wiped out the acorn crop and all of the deer have been staying down in the swamp instead of coming up in the hardwoods.

Charles Bergmann will be in a camp closer to Charlevoix. He and a group of other hunters will be in a shack north of town. They've hunted there for about the past 20 years. In camp this year will be Bergmann and his stepsons Richard and Randy Wurst along with Gordon Betts and Bruce Bergmann. Last year they did well on deer, but they don't feel the outlook is as good this year.

DNR officer says deer abundant here

Although some hunters hunting away from Charlevoix aren't especially optimistic, local Department of Natural Resources (DNR) officer Roger Bush says there will be plenty of deer, and plenty of hunters, in the Charlevoix area.

"I think it's bigger than last year," Bush said of the deer herd. He noted that bowhunters have been doing well and that there have been a lot of car-deer accidents. Bush said that even in town, "We have lots of deer in the city that go from garden plot to garden plot."

There should also be some big deer taken. Bush said that with recent mild winters there should be a lot of deer with good racks out there.

The deer herd is currently larger than the DNR and many farmers would like it to be. In response to that problem the DNR has issued a lot of doe permits, landowner preference permits and block permits for farmers in Charlevoix County. Bush said that farmers with block permits do encourage hunters to come and help them get rid of the deer.

With the size of the deer herd, Bush says, "If we had a winter with any severity at all, we'd have quite a die-off."

Some things for hunters to keep in mind are:

Don't trespass. If you're hunting on land which you don't own or the state doesn't own, then you need permission to hunt there. Bush said that during hunting season, area deer officers field on average about half a dozen hunter trespass complaints each day.

In addition to not trespassing, hunters are also reminded of the 450 foot safety zone around buildings. In other words hunters should not be hunting closer than a football field and a half to buildings; be they occupied or out buildings.

A question which comes up more and more frequently with the growing popularity of bow hunting is if people can hunt with a bow during firearm hunting season. The answer is yes, but the bowhunter must have a firearm license and be wearing hunter orange.

Two other reminders: questions about lost licenses can be handled by places which sell licenses; and deer carcasses taken to be processed must have a validated tag attached.

Seven Charlevoix students named to Honors Band

Monday afternoon, Nov. 3, several hundred student musicians from 28 area schools met at Charlevoix High school to audition for the 1992 Honors Band sponsored by district II of the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association. Each student was required to perform music selected by the Honors Band committee for the auditions. As a result of the try-outs, seven Charlevoix High School Band members were selected as members of the Honors Band. Local students who will participate in this year's Honors Band are: Jake Forath, flute; Janel Campbell and Chris Cupp, clarinet; Sheila Siegart and Amy Parrish, trumpet; Anne Schairbaum, French horn; and Russell Hand, trombone.

The Honors Band members will meet as a group at the end of November to rehearse. Then, on the weekend of Dec. 5 and 6, the students will come together in Petoskey for two days of intensive rehearsals, culminating in a concert at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 6 in the Petoskey Middle School Auditorium. The guest conductor for this year's 24th annual Honors Band Concert will be Mr. John E. Williamson, Director of Bands at Central Michigan University. The concert is open to the public. Tickets are $3 for adults and $2 for students, and will be sold at the door.

OPINIONS

Letters to the editor

Chamber political activity criticized

Editor,

Should the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce endorse a political candidate for public office? I think not! I think the Board of Directors used very poor judgment in doing so. I don't think they (the Board) took into serious consideration the effects it could have on merchants paying dues to the Chamber.

WHAT IF: Don Meggison won? WHAT IF: All 339 people that voted for Don told 4 friends or family members from out of town to shop, dine, bowl, golf or just to visit to go somewhere else out of town? That's 1,356 people; the merchants need all the people they can get without the Chamber sticking its nose into politics.

I know that Don Meggison doesn't want any of the 339 people who supported him to do this because he loves Charlevoix as I do and would never do anything to hurt the merchants that live here year around and have to make ends meet through the hard months (winter).

At the Flight Deck Business After Hours (BAH), Jacqui Mera welcomed everyone and asked them to support their candidate. Again in the BRIDGE BEAT they supported him. Then in the BUSINESS FOCUS (published by the Chamber) the Chamber came out openly in support of Bill Haggard, a fine man no doubt. It gave an account of what Bill stood for and his support of the City.

I and many others who worked on Don's campaign never, I repeat never once said we were not in support of the City of Charlevoix that we all love, and most of us have lived here longer than most of the people on the Board of Directors, Executive Directors, President, 1st Vice President, 2nd Vice President, Treasurer, Downtown Coordinator, and Office Manager. (There, did I get all the Chamber heads, if I missed any I'm sorry!)

The Chamber of Commerce should be here number one to support the merchants not hurt them. The merchants who pay dues should take a long hard look at the Chamber and see if its worth their money.

Come January, election time for the Board of Directors and Executive Director let's see if it's not time for a change to help dues paying Merchant Members.

Keep the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce out of politics and doing its job of promoting dues paying ing Merchant Members of Charlevoix.

Please support your Charlevoix Merchants and shop, dine, bowl, golf, or just visit.

Thank you
Concerned Citizen
Thomas G. Meggison
P.S.: See a movie if you have time!

Additional criticism

Editor,

In the opinion of many local citizens and numerous merchants, the Chamber of Commerce brought shame upon themselves and upon the City that supports them with tax dollars.

You Chamber members who are supposed to represent all Charlevoix residents made a very, grave error when you used taxpayer funds to promote a local, political candidate at the expense of yet another local candidate.

Do you Chamber members contend you spent only special and non-tax payers' money on your political ads, your brochures and all other connected expenses that supported your political beliefs? One Chamber member remarked at a Council Meeting that the Chamber didn't use city funds or keep two sets of books. So how do you keep city income separate from other income unless you do keep separate records? How many taxpayers do you think believe this kind of horse hockey?

You Chamber people made a double-edged error because not only do taxpayer dollars help defray your expenses, taxpayers surely make up the bulk of your retail sales, or aren't those sales as important as a political candidate telling you what you want to hear?

What percentage of merchants supported your political activities? Publish a list of them. It will prove the courage of all your convictions and the taxpaying public who frown on such political actions will know who to support in the future.

Soccer endorsed

Editor,

Nov. 3, 1991

Last evening I had the pleasure of witnessing a most extraordinary event. Hundreds of citizens convened at the Charlevoix School Board Meeting intending to convey to that Board the necessity and innate fairness of according the Charlevoix Soccer Club varsity status within the system.

The adults behind the drive were thorough and data-based in their presentation; the adults there to support that drive were orderly, articulate and convincing.

Most important however, and the point of this letter, is that there were also 40-50 student soccer enthusiasts at the meeting. What pride this community should take in that group of young people! To a student, they were alert and courteous as they observed the 'political' process of trying to affect change through appropriate channels. When discussion was opened to the floor, many many students presented their views with fairness, poise and clarity. I feel that all the adults at that meeting were touched and even inspired by their example. I extend my personal appreciation to them for their maturity and would only wish that all Charlevoix taxpayers had been there to observe this event.

Sincerely,
Sulane Hamilton

Soccer supported

Editor,

I would like to thank the Charlevoix School Board and Administration Staff for their consideration of varsity status for the high school soccer team.

I would also like to thank the 188 people who signed the petition requesting soccer be sanctioned, the 80 (plus) people who sent letters of support and the more than 100 people who attended the School Board meeting Monday

Oh Boix

A collection of praises, accomplishments and awards involving Charlevoix people.

After graduating from Air Force basic training in San Antonio, Texas, Paul Cunningham received leave to come home to Charlevoix. He arrived just in time to attend the second half of his sister Carrie's basketball game. When she saw her brother walk into the gym, Carrie looked to coach Toni Felter and asked, "Can I go see him?" Felter said yes and Carrie left the bench and went over and gave her older brother a big hug for a background of applause from the basketball crowd.

Airman Paul Cunningham has graduated from Air force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, TX.

During the six weeks of training the airman studied Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Cunningham is the son of Betty J. Martin of Charlevoix and Glenn Cunningham of Grand Haven.

He is a 1992 graduate of Charlevoix High School.

Navy Chief Petty Officer Scott R. Egler, son of Charles and Audrey M. Lehman of Barnard Road, Charlevoix, recently participated in UNITAS aboard the dock landing ship USS Portland, homeported in Little Creek, VA, a multinational exercise that brings together ships, aircraft and ground forces of the U.S., Atlantic Fleet, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Paraguay, Uruguay and Venezuela, under the command of the Commander, South Atlantic Force. Held since 1960, UNITAS involves a series of combined naval warfare exercises designed to improve the interoperability of U.S. and South American forces at sea. The four U.S. Navy ships assigned to the Task Force trained with each of the eight South American navies or air forces while traveling clockwise around the southern continent. The exercise involved more than 15,000 service members.

Crop Walk raises $6,647.60

Charlevoix County CROP Walkers are celebrating a near-record fund-raising Walk which generated $6,647.60 for world and local hunger, according to Mary Glenn Malpass, walk treasurer.

In Charlevoix 42 walkers contributed $2,500, hiking 6 miles to Ironton to fulfill their pledges according to local co-chairpersons Mary Helen Riggle and Kay Smith. Boyne City's 44 walkers raised $2,230.10 and in East Jordan 27 walkers netted $1,917.50.

One-fourth of the total amount will be returned to food pantries in each city. Last Year each pantry received $559.95 for local hunger needs.

Service organizations from the three cities take turns providing refreshments at the Ironton destination. In 1992 the Charlevoix Kiwanis, with contributions from Olson's, Glen's and Rosenthal Orchards, served the walkers.

The 1992 walk was marked by an unusual occurrence when the Ironton ferry experienced a mechanical malfunction while on the Charlevoix side of the South Arm. This marooned the Boyne City walkers on the opposite side with no way to complete their hike.

The CROP Walk is sponsored by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

Russian dancers perform to a packed house

"I think your school system is better than ours, but that's only my opinion." That opinion belonged to Mariya Elova, one of the Russian folk dancers that came to Charlevoix last week. Elova and the other dance troupe members toured the Charlevoix elementary school last Thursday, and were impressed with what they saw.

One big difference in the Charlevoix schools and schools in Russia is the size. Russian school buildings house grades Kindergarten through 12 in one building. In a city with 1,300,000 people, there are 150 schools to accommodate the students, meaning thousands of students will be in one school building.

The fine arts program in Russia differs with ours as well. Russian schools offer music to their students in grades one, two and three, and art in grades five, six, and seven.

All subjects in Russian elementary and middle schools are compulsory. At the high school level, elective classes are available, but they are in limited supply. "We don't have business or marketing classes in school," said one Russian student. "At least, not yet."

Saturday evening the Russian dancers performed to a packed house in the Charlevoix high School gym.

Social Services volunteers honored

More than 50 volunteers and foster parents were recognized by the Charlevoix County Dept. of Social Services in October for their services on behalf of the department.

The 16th Volunteer and 7th Foster Parent annual recognition dinner took place at the Grey Gables Inn in Charlevoix. Entertainment was provided by the Charlevoix Senior Citizen Band, Loreta Swanson and Joe Stutzman.

Services Supervisor Doug McCombs and Social Services Board Member Eliene Rouse presented certificates and recognized the contributions of the following foster parents:

One Full Year: Paul & Deborah Gelderblom, William & Patricia Keehn, and James & Sandra Malewitz.

Two Years: David & Phyllis Priest and Brad & Lynn Sweeney.

Four Years: Robert & Rosaria Davis and Joan Janack.

Six Years: Lawrence & Sandra Bergmann.

Seven Years: Michelle Zimmerman.

Ten Years: Jack & Charlene Bush.

McCombs commended and thanked the foster parents for all they give to children and their families. Through the frustrations of budget cuts and emotional strains of the legal system, these foster parents provide the stability so desperately needed by the children placed in their homes. Foster parents have much more to deal with than providing housing and meals. They must assist children in making the adjustment to leaving their family and living with someone else. They must assist the child in understanding the problems their family needs to resolve as well as the behaviors the child may need to change.

Volunteer Services Secretary Cathy Tillen and Social Services Board Member Eliene Rouse presented the following volunteers with certificates:

Up to One Year: Julie Carter, Thomas King, Kathy Roehrig, Beverly Robb, Mildred Walden, Susie Walley & Carla Wilson.

One Year: Phillip Decker, Edward Elliott, Jane Elliott, Gilbert Fox, Loreta Goldsmith, Jacquelyn Hull and Les Vander Jagt.

Two Years: Chester Laginess, John Miller, Mel Morrison, Harold Nelson, Marguerite Stokes, Danny Thomas and the Full Gospel Truth Church.

Three Years: Linda Barnes, Lloyd Cummings, Donna Decker, Louis Hooper, Fran Hooper, Ethel Kerner, Millie LaBrecque, Margaret Landman, Lucy Martin, Floyd Peck, Kay Peck, and Sheila Rake.

Four Years: Frank Birdsall, Doris Birdsall, J.O. Crawford, Sara Cummings, Oma Darrah, Raymond Giffin, Lillian Martinek, and East Jordan Care & Share.

Five Years: Dianne Penfold.

Six Years: Robert Thomas.

Seven Years: David Ecker, Dennis Gocha & Mildred Gocha.

Eight Years: LaVern Cole & Charlevoix Community Food Pantry.

Nine Years: George Hamlin and Anna Willis.

Eleven Years: Raymond Ecker.

Twelve Years: Connie Fraley.

Thirteen Years: Luella Barnes and John Daniels.

Wellness program helps keep people on the job

Michigan workers lead the nation in deaths from chronic disease. But there is something that can be done to reduce the incidence of chronic disease and improve work or health. Employers may apply for up to $3000 in grant funds for screening and risk reduction programs at the worksite.

Funded services include blood pressure and cholesterol tests and control, fitness tests, health risk survey, weight loss, health eating and smoking cessation. Services must be provided by a vendor approved by the Michigan Department of Public Health (MDPH). Public and private worksites are eligible to apply, but those with high risk employees, little or no wellness programming and fewer than 500 employees will receive higher priority.

These grants are part of the Worksite and Community Health Program (WCHP) of the Michigan Department of Public Health and are administered by District Health Department #3 in the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego.

Application forms and vendor lists are available from the health department and are brief and easy to complete. Grants will be awarded in December for services to be provided in January and February, 1993. There will be additional funding cycles in March and April, 1993.

For more information call or write Ann Smith at District Health Department #3, 220 West Garfield, Charlevoix, MI 49720, phone (616) 547-6523.

Unhealthy lifestyles account for more than 50 percent of Michigan's deaths. For every 100 workers, 78 don't get enough exercise, 50 have high cholesterol, 43 report severe stress, 30 smoke, 2 in 30 have high blood pressure and 25 are overweight. Worksite health promotion programs help to identify employees at risk and recommend plans to reduce those risks.

1993 Venetian Organization is already beginning

There's no point in waiting 'til the last minute. The first organizational meeting for the 1993 Venetian Festival is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 12 at City Hall. Anyone who would like to volunteer to help with the 1993 festival is invited to attend.

Venetian Festival Chairman John Taylor says that about 50 volunteers are needed to help with the various events. Chairmen for the four main segments of the festival will be: Joe Trojanek, street parade; Jodi Ager, lighted boat parade; Gary Stutzman, drum and bugle competition; and Fran Tollas, East Park musical tribute to Ode.

Taylor said that the focus of the first meeting will be determining interest in different events and doing some brainstorming. The meeting will be limited to an hour with the purpose being to plant some seeds for thought without taking up a lot of time.

Big Rock employees lend a hand to area service programs

The Consumers Power Foundation's Volunteer Investment Program (VIP) has made financial contributions to two area agencies on behalf of Big Rock Point plant employees. The Foundation's VIP program recognizes and encourages employee participation in local community programs through its financial support.

The Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan was granted $300 on behalf of Carolyn Moeggenberg, a human resources specialist at Big Rock Point. Moeggenberg annually donates about 60 hours of her personal time assisting at the Center. The Center offers a domestic violence and emergency shelter, day care and latchkey program, a program for educationally at-risk children, a crisis hotline and counseling programs. To recognize the efforts of Senior Engineer Daniel J. Gaiser, Boy Scout Troop 46 of Elk Rapids was awarded $350. Gaiser, a Troop leader, commits over 170 hours a year to the Scouts' mission of developing character, citizenship and personal fitness in young men.

The Consumers Power Foundation's VIP program encourages the utility's employees to volunteer to community services organizations and activities. Those who volunteer a minimum of 60 hours per year to a non-profit organization can apply for a grant which is then reviewed by a local Corporate Citizenship Team.

The Consumers Power Foundation provides funding in Michigan for education, cultural, scientific and charitable purposes.

Football team loses 49-22 to Montague

Bad start and turnovers end playoff hopes

Shortly after the coin toss things took a turn for the worse in Charlevoix's football playoff debut in Montague Friday evening.

Montague, the number three ranked Class CC team in the state scored the first five times they got the ball and left the Rayders in for a long night.

Charlevoix turned the ball over six times during the game which was played in 20-degree weather and snow. By the end of the first quarter the Rayders trailed 14-0 and by halftime they were down 33-0. Montague scored 16 more points in the third quarter to build a 49-0 lead. The Rayders scored 22 unanswered points late in the game, but it was far too little, far too late.

Offensively, Montague picked up 259 yards rushing in the first half alone. Defensively, Montague held Charlevoix to just 26 first half yards.

Highlights for Charlevoix were sparse, however linebacker Ben Whitley did intercept a pass in the second quarter and defensive back Chris Pease tackled the Montague quarterback for a loss on fourth down later in the quarter.

Charlevoix got on the board in the third quarter on a four-yard run by quarterback Don Jess. Vince Voisin kicked the extra point. In the fourth quarter the Rayders scored on a 20 yard pass from Jess to Pease. Voisin caught the two-point conversion pass. Charlevoix final score came on a 26 yard pass from Jess to Keith Carey. Voisin kicked the point after.

In terms of individual statistics, Jess completed 12 of 21 passes for 125 yards. He was intercepted three times. Voisin caught seven passes for 78 yards.

Defensively, Pease had 10 solo tackles and an assist. Ben Whitley had 10 solos and three assists and Keith Parish had seven solo tackles and two assists. John Hess also recovered an onside kick.

Montague, now 10-0, will play Ironwood this weekend. Charlevoix arrived home from the 370 mile round trip to Montague at 3:15 a.m. Saturday morning with a 7-3 season record.

Mens' Recreation League basketball begins season

The Charlevoix Mens' Recreation Basketball league began its 1992-93 season with two games Monday evening.

In the first game, First State Bank beat Sears of Charlevoix 66-44. First State Bank opened a big lead in the second quarter and led 34-20 at halftime. For First State Bank Doug Waha had 17 points and Dennis Dominic 14 points. Ross Miller was the only player in double figures for Sears. He scored 16 points.

In the second game Russell's Auto Body beat Village Inn Pizza 78-59. Russell's led 32-30 at halftime. Dave Norton led Russell's with 30 points. Larry Brock had 16 points and Jim Parrish 10. For Village Inn, Steve Spiegel had 21 points.

Cross Country team places fifth in State Class C meet

Matt Smith finishes second

Charlevoix's boys' cross country team failed to win the Class C State Cross Country meet for the first time in six years. However, Charlevoix senior Matt Smith did place second overall, six seconds behind Chad Rich of Sandusky, the team which won the state title.

Sandusky took the Class C crown with 86 team points. Suttons Bay placed second with 102 points, Carson City-Crystal third with 121, Leslie, fourth with 134, and Charlevoix fifth with 163 points.

The Charlevoix team and first-year coach Ken Plude had a trying season due to illness and injury.

In Saturday's race two of the team's top three runners, junior Zach Pajtas and Mike Bush ran subpar races. Pajtas has been fighting bronchitis and Bush has a strained leg muscle.

In addition to Smith's second place finish in a time of 16:42, other Rayder places and times were: Josh Scheels, 23rd in 17:31; Erik Hess, 34th in 17:46; Bush 35th in 17:46; Chris LeButt, 69th in 18:22; Josh Dhaseler, 87th in 18:40; and Pajtas, 98th in 18:56.

Smith and Scheels are the only seniors from that group. Bush and LeButt are sophomores and the others are juniors.

Charlevoix's girls team did not qualify as a team for the state finals race, however Elsa Conlan did qualify as an individual.

Conlan placed 36th in the girls' individual race in a time of 22:03. That was about eight places higher than she finished in the same race last year. Conlan is a senior.

Although the Charlevoix girls' team failed to qualify for the state race, they did have one of their strongest seasons in recent years. They had more girls on the team this year than in the past. Among the returning runners to next year's team will be sophomore Becca Chamberlain, who placed ahead of Conlan at the Clare Martin Invitational in Charlevoix and just missed qualifying for state at the regional meet. Trina Holm, a junior, is also expected to be among the team's and area's top female high school runners next year.

Basketball team loses to Kalkaska despite 35 points from Bragg

They're redoing the nets in the Kalkaska high school gym this week. Last Friday evening, Charlevoix junior forward Becky Bragg toasted them in the process of scoring 35 points. Despite Bragg's performance, the Rayders ended up losing 79-70. The game was close until the end.

Bragg was also in double figure in rebounding, collecting 13. Sophomore Liz Grunch also played a strong game with 16 points and four assists. Junior forward Shannon Rowell had eight rebounds and senior center Jodi Allison, seven boards.

The loss dropped the Rayders record to 8-10 overall and 6-7 in league play.

Charlevoix's final regular season game will be at home Friday night against Harbor Springs.

Nunemaker wins contest in a tricky week

Larry Nunemaker won this past week's Charlevoix Courier football contest. Nunemaker and Hugh Mayne each correctly picked nine of 11 games. In the tie-breaker game between Pittsburgh and Buffalo there were a total of 48 points scored. Nunemaker predicted 47 while Mayne predicted 39.

For winning the contest, Nunemaker will receive a free oil change at Pat McKeown Ford.

Missing one of two big upsets

Courier Guru. Last week 5-6. Season record 29-15.

There were two big upsets last week. I foresaw one of them; Arizona's upset of Washington. I failed to foresee the other; how upset I would be about going 4-6 in the rest of last week's games.

This week's picks:

CMU - Western Michigan. Western's dismal this year. The Chips have bragging, and car-burning, rights at the postgame bash. Pick - CMU.

MSU - Purdue. MSU is down to their fourth string quarterback. That's Mill Coleman and he threw some hideous ducks when he filled in on spot duty last week. Pick - Purdue.

Penn State - Notre Dame. With three, soon to be four, losses, is Penn State sure they want to join the Big Ten? Pick - Notre Dame.

Detroit - Pittsburgh. Start Ware. Let's see what he can do. And what could it hurt? Pick - Pittsburgh.

Houston - Minnesota. Minnesota's record will soon start to fade, but not quite yet. Pick - Minnesota.

Iron Mountain - Traverse City St. Francis. St. Francis is lucky to be here, but they're good for one more week. Pick - St. Francis.

Central Lake - Lake Linden-Hubbell. Central Lake's had an excellent year, but it's probably going to end here. Pick - Lake Linden-Hubbell.

Ironwood - Montague. As recent Rayder experience indicates, obviously Montague can play. Pick - Montague.

New Orleans - San Francisco. One of the premier match-ups of the season. Young's doing a nice job with San Francisco, but I've always been a Hebert fan. Pick - New Orleans.

Washington - Kansas City. Another good pro game. Pick - Kansas City.

Michigan - Illinois. Moeller's revenge. U of M wraps up the Big 10 title against a team Moeller used to coach. Pick - U of M.

"Volunteers are so vital to our department getting the job done, that if the volunteer program was eliminated today I'm not sure we would be able to continue to provide the services to our clients that are so necessary," Zucchiatti said.

"Volunteers are called upon to provide such a variety of services it's nice to have such a diverse group of individuals and groups to call upon. Our office is very fortunate to have such caring people willing to give of themselves," he said.

School committee proposes additional in-service days

Proposal would change five full days of school to half days

By Laurie Lounsbury

Charlevoix students are entitled by State law to 180 days of learning. Charlevoix teachers are contractually obligated to 180 days of teaching. This ratio works quite well until additional variables are thrown into the equation.

The Charlevoix School system is currently having to cope with a dilemma brought on by additional variables, being thrown at the school system. Because of new state educational mandates, there are too many tasks for the teachers to accomplish in the existing number of days available in the current teachers' contract.

In an effort to accommodate this situation, the Scheduling, Time and Bus (STB) committee has recommended to the Charlevoix Board of Education that teachers be given five additional half days of in-service time. The half days would tentatively be scheduled for one morning each month from January through May of 1993.

The five in-service half days of school would allow teachers to work on state mandates such as new accreditation requirements, core curriculum changes, and outcome-based curriculum planning. The five in-service half days would also take away two and a half full days of learning from the students.

Half days of in-service were chosen instead of full days because a half-day of school counts as a full day in the legal eyes of the state. By having half days of school, the missing half day doesn't need to be made up at the end of the school year. If full days of school are lost, the time must be made up or Charlevoix schools lose 1/180 of state aid for every school day lost. As an out of formula school, Charlevoix receives state aid only for teachers' social security benefits.

Many parents expressed concern to school board members over the loss of school time for their children. Board member Stephen Czernik said parents also mentioned that having half days of school is disruptive to schedules. As it stands, Charlevoix already has eight half days of school scheduled in this school year. "My biggest concern is children losing class time," Czernik said. He is in favor of extending the teachers' contract to extend the school year when contract renewal negotiations begin this spring.

Teachers in the Charlevoix schools are feeling the pinch of the present time constraints. Many teachers have given a lot of their free time to work on curriculum changes. School superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson said of the teachers, "The majority of the staff is interested in working towards improvement."

Jackson said that nothing definite has been decided regarding the five additional half days of in-service for teachers. When asked if students might suffer from the loss of class time for in-service time, she said, "Students will not be short-changed if we end up with a more vibrant, current curriculum."

Jackson also pointed out that while the state mandated educational changes, it didn't provide any funds to help facilitate the changes. "The state just said, 'Thou shalt change' and then did nothing to help effect the changes," Jackson said.

...school in-service days proposed

Ann Golski is a former teacher and a member of the STB committee. While Golski is not in favor of taking school time away from students, she does support the five in-service days for teachers. "Five in-service days are a small price to pay if we can improve our educational system," Golski said. "In the short run, the kids are the losers, but in the long run, I hope they'll be the winners."

Golski also said that there is too much down time (time spent on non-learning activities) in the school right now, and if class time was better utilized, then missing five days of school would have little, if any impact on the student's education. Golski estimated that about 40 days of school time are lost each year because of down time.

School board member Ardith Wieland said that people in the community are critical because kids are not in school during in-service time for teachers. "There has to be time someplace for teachers to learn new ideas to be prepared for teaching," Wieland said. Wieland said of the proposed five in-service half days, "It's a band-aid solution for the rest of this year, until we work on the next teacher contract."

Elementary school principal Vane Smith hears concerns from many elementary school parents over the number of school half days on the schedule. "In most cases, it's a custodial issue, not a learning issue," Smith said.

Second grade teacher Stan Martin expressed the same sentiment. When Martin spoke to the School board about the increased in-service time and the resulting loss of class time, he said, "We are not in the business of day care."

One concerned parent said, "Many working parents do rely on the school to be open while they work. But more than that, the half days of school are a disruption to schedules, both the parents' schedules and the kids' schedules. It's hard to learn when your schedule is frequently being disrupted."

Golski doesn't consider in-service half days of school as a perfect solution for educational reform and change, but she quoted the words of Dr. Larry Lazati, a promoter of educational reform. "If you want things to stay the same, continue to do exactly what you're doing."

Community will miss Edwards brothers

The community of Charlevoix was doubly blessed with the kindness of brothers Dick and Louie Edwards. And so, this town will feel its sadness twice as deeply with the passing of both brothers within days of each other.

Louis Edwards

Dick Edwards

The two brothers were different in personality yet similar in nature. They both spent many years in the grocery business, yet business thrived only because they were in the business of caring for others first. Together, Dick and Louie ran the successful Edwards' IGA for 30 years, each acting as professional businessmen, yet they both managed to retain their own child-like wonder and joy with life. Perhaps it was that quality that endeared them both to so many people in this community. While the rest of the world went racing by and folks became increasingly cynical, the Edwards brothers maintained their steady pace, always allowing time for a warm conversation or a helping hand to someone that needed it.

Dick Edwards was a man whose gentle blue eyes were a window to his equally gentle soul. "He was everybody's friend. He loved to have fun, and he loved people," said Dick Martin, a long time friend of Dick Edwards.

Dick built up a strong catering business out of the grocery store through hard work and his willingness to go the extra mile for customers. Sometimes Dick literally had to go an extra mile or more for customers. Close friend Laurie Gilbert recalled a wedding that Dick was catering for a local family. They wanted him to use one of their old family recipes for the potato salad he was to make. Dick gave him their word to follow the family recipe to the letter. "Dick ended up driving out to get potatoes from the family farm in order to recreate the recipe," Gilbert said.

Gilbert also recalled Dick's willingness to share anything with others, even prized secrets like favorite mushroom spots. When Gilbert first moved to Charlevoix, she was bemoaning the fact that she didn't know any good morel mushroom hunting spots in the Charlevoix area. Dick took Gilbert along with him to mushroom hunt that spring, and continued to take her mushroom hunting every spring afterwards.

Gilbert made an observation about Dick's good nature. "When you're in business as long as Dick was, you're bound to anger someone, but he never did. Every-

City settles potential lawsuit over youth's arrest

A potential civil rights lawsuit between the City of Charlevoix and a Charlevoix family was averted by an out of court settlement last week. City manager Mike Wiesner made the decision to settle the case at the recommendation of the city's insurance company, the insurance company's lawyers, and city attorney Jim Young.

The case involved an arrest made by city police officer Charles Myers on July 15, 1992. Myers arrested 15-year-old black youth named Jerry Duhart for riding his bike on the sidewalks at Bridge Street and Clinton Street. Myers handcuffed Duhart and took him to the Charlevoix police station. The city's ordinance regarding this violation calls for the youth's bike to be confiscated rather than arresting the minor. "He (officer Myers) used poor judgment, and improper application of his training," Police Chief Dennis Halverson said in a recent interview. Myers was a seasonal police officer, recently certified from Northwest Michigan College.

The incident continued when Duhart's father, Reggie Burks, came to the police station to retrieve his son. According to the police report, Burks became very agitated when he was unable to see his son promptly. A verbal and physical dispute ensued, and Burks was eventually arrested and charged with escaping lawful custody, drunk and disorderly behavior and resisting and obstructing a police officer. While Burks was being held at the county jail, Duhart was released to his mother and the complaint against him was withdrawn by Chief Halverson.

The charges against Burks were eventually dismissed by the prosecutor's office. Burks retained attorney Dick Joseph to represent him on the criminal charges against him. Joseph had reason to believe that the father's and the son's civil rights had been violated in the process of their arrests.

Joseph notified Wiesner of a possible lawsuit regarding the matter. Wiesner in turn contacted the city attorney and the city's insurance company. The United States code regarding civil rights lawsuits states that if the case is found in favor of the plaintiff, then the defendant must pay all legal fees. Because legal fees for a suit in federal court can mount very quickly, the city's insurance company and their lawyers recommended settling the case. The city's insurance company said the officer's actions could result in some type of award if the case was pursued.

"We aren't happy about a city employee acting that way," Wiesner said. A news release from the city manager's office said that the city itself was not at fault in the case, because the proper training and ordinances were in place, but that the officer used bad judgment by not following the ordinance.

Wiesner acted within his authority as city manager in accepting the recommendation to settle the case out of court. The city will be responsible for the $5,000 deductible on the city's insurance policy. The amount of the proposed settlement has not yet been disclosed, but will be a matter of public record when the settlement is final.

"I don't think the city is racist in any way whatsoever," said Burks and Duhart's attorney, Dick Joseph. "I think this incident got out of hand, and went from bad to worse, for whatever reason."

Officer Myers was demoted at the time of the incident and took a cut in pay. Because he was a seasonal officer, he is no longer with the Charlevoix police department.

City finances win clean audit

By LISA BABCOCK

CHARLEVOIX — A $748,890 tax bill and $338,000 shelled out for other city services paid for two-thirds of Charlevoix's general fund operations, but the city still had to dip into its savings to make ends meet last year.

In exchange, city residents got $510,000 worth of police and fire protection and $478,530 of recreation, according to the annual city audit.

The auditors, Becky Nohel and Mike Konicki of Rehman Robson of Cheboygan, said the audit showed one major change in city funds over the last few years — the city's unreserved cash fund has dropped from $3.6 million in 1989 to $2.4 million in 1992.

The drop was largely caused by $400,000 transferred from unreserved status to a fund to pay off the electrical bond, they said.

Otherwise, the city's bottom line seems to be business as usual.

The audit covered fiscal year 1991-92 and ended March 31, 1992. It compared the fiscal year that ended in 1992 to the previous fiscal year.

Charlevoix spends most of its general fund money on fire and police departments, $510,575; followed by recreation, $478,530; general government, $253,530; and public works, $121,280, according to the audit. The figures are almost identical to 1991, except the city spent $30,000 more on general government and $30,000 less on recreation during the previous year.

Overall, the city spent $50,000 more in 1992 than '91.

City revenue increased, too, but only by $30,000.

The city took in almost half of its money, $748,890, through taxes. Charges for services, like the city ski hill or golf course, raised $337,380; and state funds contributed $247,065. Tax revenue jumped $21,000 between 1991 and 1992.

The city spent about $96,000 more in the general fund than it took in during fiscal year 1992; the audit showed.

Fund equity has dropped to $294,370 in 1992 from $389,700 in 1991.

Auditors pointed to three things the city needs to do: revise electric rates; set up a separate account to pay back the electric bond; and establish a fund with $380,000 for the bond reserve.

The bond reserve fund was created, which caused the $400,000 transfer from the unreserved cash fund, and the separate account was also set up, Nohel said.

The city is changing its electric rates, she said.

Charlevoix remembers

Charlevoix marked Veterans Day with special ceremonies in East Park. The VFW placed wreaths at the Submarine Memorial following a parade through downtown.

The Wild Goose was owned by the Carruthers family of Harbor Springs for 60 years, and was sold to Tom Orr, a local woodworker, three years ago. It is currently being certified by the Coast Guard. Designed by Eldridge McInnes, the small diesel engine schooner was completely rebuilt by Orr.

People around here are talking about buying the Wild Goose — a tall ship, 47 feet long — to be used as a training vessel for both young people and amateur sailors.

Jack Ewing, from Illinois, who has summered in Sequana for ever, is more than enthusiastic. He hopes to launch a Sail Training And Renewal program (S.T.A.R.) to teach advanced sailing, marine safety, navigation and small group cooperation to trainees of all ages. Hundreds of sailing ships, tall and small, already offer sail training in the United States, but this is the first attempt to launch such a successful, established program in Northern Michigan.

The Wild Goose was owned by the Carruthers family of Harbor Springs for 60 years, and was sold to Tom Orr, a local woodworker, three years ago. It is currently being certified by the Coast Guard. Designed by Eldridge McInnes, the small diesel engine schooner was completely rebuilt by Orr, so that it is in better condition now than when it was new, according to Ewing.

Ewing has participated in four tall ship ventures at sea, the most recent being a 14-day trans-Atlantic crossing to the Azores on the schooner, Nina, with a crew of 10.

Ewing, now retired, fondly recalls his early summer in 1950, when he was proud to be a part of the paid crew on Judge Marx's Panchara, captained by the local legend, Allie Moore.

The local program, called Northern Star, is being supported by a committee consisting of Gary Gleason, Rev. Bruce Hamilton, Robert L. Hoffman, Bob Kem, Jackie Merita, John Taylor, Dave Strawbridge and Gordon Van Wieren. The plan is to form a not-for-profit corporation in Northern Michigan and obtain financial support from corporations, businesses, private contributions, grants and memberships.

As soon as the boat is certified by the Coast Guard, it will be able to carry passengers for business meetings and corporate entertainment.

paint, service the diesel engine, inspect electrical wiring and plumbing, and maintain rigging and sails. The teaching program encourages patience, cooperation, leadership and teamwork.

Ewing stresses the importance of feeling your own strength, both moral and physical, as proven by the current training program offered by the Coast Guard Academy, where all cadets are exposed to a stint on a tall ship.

A quote that Ewing is fond of repeating is by Peter Willauer, Outward Bound leader: "We are all better than we know. Once we realize this, we will never be satisfied with less."

Combining a sail training program that helps promote tourism, vocational education and early intervention with kids "at risk" sound ambitious, but there are programs now that do these things. "Pride of Baltimore" combines business and tourism, while working with "at risk" kids. You will see her in port here in 1993.

Round Lake used to be filled with schooners like the Rosabelle. (She sank in a violent storm on Lake Michigan in 1921 with all hands on deck.) Sara Teasdale, a former Michigan Avenue summer resident and renowned poet, may have been mistaken when she wrote of the Rosabelle "resting in Charlevoix Harbor." But oh, the gentle sailing ships, that never will come back!

As they say on the street, "Don't bet on it."

Chamber responds to letter writer

Editor:
In reading the letter to the editor in the Nov. 11 Charlevoix Courier, I feel compelled to reply to the falsehoods stated by Perry Smith. Mr. Smith made a deliberate, intentional, untrue assertion when he stated "You Chamber members who are supposed to represent all Charlevoix residents made a very grave error when you used taxpayer funds to promote a local political candidate at the expense of yet another local candidate."

Mr. Smith should get his facts straight before making such reckless statements. As president of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, not only do I review monthly financial statements with a 12-member board of directors, but I also sign the chamber checks on a two signature check system. I can attest to the fact that absolutely no Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce funds were used in Bill Haggard's campaign. That means absolutely no chamber dollars or taxpayer dollars were spent on political ads, brochures or otherwise. The chamber of commerce's name will not be found on any campaign report.

In reference to the money the city pays to the chamber, it should be made perfectly clear that the chamber does not receive support from the city, but it does receive payment for services rendered. The chamber and the city have an agreement whereby the chamber is contracted to promote and advertise the advantages of the city of Charlevoix. It should be noted that more than 70 percent of Charlevoix's taxpayers are able to pay taxes because they are employed by businesses and industries. By advertising its industrial, commercial and resort advantages, the city is ensuring a stable tax base. In closing, does it really matter whether or not a person is a "Johnny-come-lately" or a "native jack-pine-savage" in order to be a good citizen and share in the responsibility of contributing to the betterment of Charlevoix?

Sincerely,
Robert D. Kern

Letters to the editor

Officer questions payment story

Editor:

I have recently received a copy of an article from your newspaper dated Nov. 4, 1992 written by Laurie Lounsbury which concerns a recent extradition of a suspect from the state of Wyoming. After reading this article, I was appalled at its content and some of the implications this article made concerning what had taken place in this incident. I want to take this opportunity to clear up some facts and explain what actually took place.

On Oct. 8, 1991, the Boyne City Co-op filed a formal complaint against the suspect. On Nov. 6, 1991 an arrest warrant was signed charging the suspect with obtaining money under false pretenses over $100, which is a felony offense. The amount involved in this incident was about $4,200, and further investigation found that the same suspect had also bilked the East Jordan Co-op out of roughly the same amount. There was also another business in East Jordan that was bilked out of a smaller amount of money. This totaled around $9,000 for all three businesses.

On Feb. 20, 1992 a letter was sent to the Boyne City Police Department from Prosecuting Attorney Kraag Lieberman in which he advised that extradition of the suspect in this case would be performed.

In the latter part of September 1992, I routinely checked all of our outstanding arrest warrants and ran the suspects through the computer in an attempt to locate some of the suspects wanted on our outstanding warrants. I found that the suspect in this incident had recently changed his address in Wyoming on his driver's license.

Upon learning of this, I then called the prosecuting attorney's office in Charlevoix. I spoke to assistant prosecutor Karen Nuemeyer and apprised her of the situation and asked her to check with the prosecutor and find out if he still wanted to extradite this suspect. Two or three days later she called me back and advised she had checked with Prosecutor Lieberman, and that Lieberman still wished to extradite this suspect.

I then sent a message out to the proper authorities in Wyoming and advised them our prosecutor had authorized extradition and to attempt to arrest the suspect. Later the same day we were notified the suspect had been arrested, and furthermore, the suspect was waiving his right to an extradition hearing and would return to Michigan.

I then called the prosecutor's office and advised Karen Nuemeyer that the suspect was in custody and inquired to her as to who would make the arrangements to pick him up in Wyoming. I asked her if the prosecutor's office wished to make the arrangements? She advised me that I should go ahead and make the arrangements for extradition.

I then obtained the costs of the air fare, car rental and overnight accommodations and found the price was going to be over $2,900, and furthermore, that the airlines would not accept billing to reserve the tickets, nor would the car rental rent any car unless the person possessed a credit card.

I then called the prosecutor's office again. Speaking to Karen Nuemeyer as Kraag Lieberman was away for the day, I had mentioned to the prosecutor's secretary while waiting on the phone what the amount of the extradition would cost. The secretary informed me then that she thought they only have about $1,000 left in their extradition budget. I advised Karen Nuemeyer of the cost of this, and also advised her of what I'd been told by the secretary. I was advised by Karen Nuemeyer that the county did not possess any credit cards. I advised her that I have a credit card at the police department that is in my name, but is set aside for departmental business only. She advised that I should go ahead and make the reservations, guaranteeing me that I would be reimbursed for this money. I then did in fact make the reservations on this credit card only after going through these procedures.

The total cost of this extradition was as follows: Airline tickets for two officers: $2,260. Airline ticket one way for the suspect: $605. Hotel room in Cody, Wyo., for two officers: $54. Car rental in Cody: $45. These accommodations were coach, and don't even include the costs involved for meals, etc. This totaled about $2,964.

I had explained all of this to Laurie Lounsbury the day she called me inquiring into this extradition. For some reason, it was not printed accurately nor completely. This article makes it sound like I overstepped my bounds and acted in a wanton disregard for taxpayers' money, which I have not, nor will ever do in this position.

Ms. Lounsbury then states further along in her article what health problems the suspect has in this case, and what the costs are for keeping the suspect in the Charlevoix County Jail.

Ms. Lounsbury also states in this article that Sheriff Lasater explained that the sheriff's department normally pursues extradition in major felony assault charges or major drug related charges. I have attached a copy of the letter dated Feb. 20, 1992 from Prosecutor Kraag Lieberman where he advised who he would extradite and who he would not. There are 15 suspects listed on this letter. He authorized extradition on five of those suspects for the following offenses: forgery, forgery, receiving and concealing stolen property over $100, obtaining money under false pretenses, and obtaining money under false pretenses. There were also two suspects listed for drug offenses, and neither of those were authorized as extraditions.

The prosecuting attorney is the chief law enforcement officer with- out in every county in the state of Michigan. He or she is the person responsible for the decisions regarding extradition of suspects from out of state. Individual police agencies can ask the prosecutor to authorize extradition, but it is the prosecutor's decision and responsibility to provide funding when extraditions are performed.

I was upset that this article would lead people to believe that I acted in such a reckless manner, when the truth is that I followed appropriate procedures and was following direction given to me by the prosecuting attorney's office.

I therefore request that this letter either be printed as a letter to the editor or a correction/retraction be printed in the Charlevoix Courier at the earliest possible edition.

Sincerely,
Jeffrey L. Gettel, assistant chief
Boyne City Police Department

FAMILY

Singles Supper club focuses on camaraderie

It was a gathering of old friends and familiar faces in a warm, congenial setting. Folks chatted and laughed comfortably over cocktails before they sat down to dinner together. The gathering bore no resemblance to a stereotypical singles' group. They were all single people, and there was a group of them, but that was where any similarities to the stereotype ended.

Singles Supper is the name of the group that gets together for dinner on the first Friday of each month. The group was founded five years ago by Kellison King, a relative newcomer to Harbor Springs. When King moved to Harbor Springs five years ago, she wanted to find a palatable way to meet single people like herself. "I wanted to meet self-sufficient, independent singles that didn't necessarily want to hang out in the bars to meet people," King said.

KING started the group with a membership of three people. They got together for dinner on the first Friday of the month for two months in a row. The group slowly grew to six people, and the naysayers in the bunch doubted if the concept would ever work. King refused to advertise for participants, preferring to go with word of mouth recommendations for the group. Just as chain letters suddenly grow to large proportions, so did King's singles group. Inside of two years, the size of the dinners had grown to an average of 50 people per dinner. Today, there are over 700 people that have attended the Singles Supper. Singles drive from Cheboygan and Traverse City to attend dinners held in Charlevoix, Petoskey, and Harbor Springs.

THE GROUP charges no dues and members are not required to RSVP for the dinners. There is a five dollar charge at the dinners, which pays for mailings and the meals. Members take turns hosting the dinners at their homes, and typically, the host prepares the meal as well. Sometimes the duties are shared, and a host may provide the home while someone else prepares the meal.

Singles Suppers are not designed to be a dating service or a lonely hearts club. The monthly flier for Singles Supper clearly states, "This is not a club, and not a losers support group." King said of the group, "It is absolutely about camaraderie. This is not a dating thing. It's a way to meet other singles. You'll meet new bridge partners, or new tennis partners."

While romance isn't the driving force behind Singles Supper, it isn't precluded from the program. King told the story of a widowed man who was about to move downstate in order to meet people when he learned about Singles

Supper. He had attended a couple of dinners and was thrilled to be able to get together with other single people. A few months later, King met a single woman while riding up the chairlift at a local ski area. The woman casually asked King if she knew anything about Singles Supper. King invited the woman to the next dinner. The woman met a widowed man at a singles Supper, and now the two are married.

Sally Lignell of Charlevoix is a frequent hostess of Singles Supper. She concurs that the get-togethers are primarily for camaraderie. Lignell said, "It's that you meet some nice friends. I've expanded my friendships with women through this."

THE GROUP is in a constant state of flux. King estimates that the turnover is around 35 to 40 percent at each dinner. There is a central core of people who attend the dinners, and the faces change according to the seasons as well. Summertime attracts a whole new crowd to the dinners. Lignell also said that quite a few spin-off parties have developed from the monthly dinners. Smaller groups of people have held cross country ski parties and New Year's Eve parties with friends they have met at the Singles Supper.

One problem the group faces is finding hosts for the party. Typically, single people scale down their living accommodations when they're on their own. Finding a home large enough to accommodate 50 or 60 people is always a challenge. "I don't know where it's (the Singles Supper) going, because of the hosting situation," King said. Anyone interested in attending a Singles Supper should contact Kelly King at 526-9961.

OF BLESSINGS

Please allow me a moment of personal reflection in this week's Beacon of Blessing. As I write this article I am surrounded by boxes and numerous office items "out of place." By the time you read this article I will be unpacking these boxes in a new office and home 200 miles away attempting to put all these items "back in their place."

Many of you have likewise experienced moves and transition in your own experience. Perhaps you are in the midst of such change now as I am.

I have discovered that often in such times of change and displacement when so many things are "out of place" and there is so much that is new and unfamiliar I seek to draw even closer to the One who is unchanging, ever present, and graciously loving. Psalm 121 teaches us that God "will be present in our going out and in our coming in."

Thomas O. Chisholm in his hymn based on Lamentation 3:22-23 sings "Great is thy faithfulness... all I have needed thy hand hath provided. Great is thy faithfulness Lord, unto me."

I invite you to place your faith in Christ this day. It doesn't matter what crises, problem or fear you are facing. God's grace and mercy are more than sufficient to see you through today and grant you "bright hope for tomorrow. Great is thy faithfulness Lord unto thee!"

Our family bids the community of Charlevoix farewell with deep appreciation for the many fine people we have come to know. "Keep the Faith. (1 Timothy 3:7)."

The Rev. Benton Heisler is pastor of the Charlevoix United Methodist Church. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Heisler and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

Russian dancers touch hearts of Northern Michigan residents

by Ralph McRae

It was a brilliant occasion when the Russian dancers from Kazan presented their lively program to almost 900 Charlevoix people. That was almost 10 days ago — Saturday, Nov. 7 — and people are still talking about it.

It was an outstanding performance by dedicated young Russians, their fast moving skirts accented each time by different colorful costume changes. These costumes, both for the women and the men, were all designed and then handmade in Moscow.

Each of the nine onstage performers had their own specialties that had required many years of training and countless rehearsals. Interspersed with the various dances were Russian songs and guitar solos. They had arrived in this country without guitars, but a very impressed Petoskey fan generously presented them with two expensive musical instruments.

The 90-minute program had 18 segments, all of them vigorously applauded by a very receptive audience. And when it was all over, there was a wild, enthusiastic standing ovation. While the performing art students were breaking down the stage settings, young children and their mothers were seeking and getting autographs from each of the proud actors.

Previously, they had performed in Sault Ste. Marie, East Jordan and Petoskey. From Charlevoix, they moved on to Traverse City and last Saturday night the Boyne City middle school auditorium was filled with a very receptive audience. This week, Cheboygan will be the last to see them.

In every town spectators were thrilled with seeing a foreign theater production. The print media was a tremendous help in giving their readers photos, information and appearance dates and times, especially the Petoskey News-Review, generously gave much space and reporting for this unusual kind of public entertainment.

In all the cities, the dancers visited many of the schools. And in each and every school they gave brief previews of their dancing and singing programs. It was amazing how eager they responded to all requests, so thousands of students of all ages were given the opportunity of seeing these very cooperative dancers.

Here in Charlevoix they also appeared before the young students in St. Mary school and to all the appreciative patients in the Boulder Park nursing facility.

While in Charlevoix, the day by day activities of the visitors were guided by Bern Cannan. In our community scores of people became involved. Even the smallest details were important to the overall success of their stay here. There was the Zonta Club, the 10 home stay hosts, the parents and students of the performing art class. It was wonderful that so many people wanted to help.

Attendance-wise and financially supportive, Charlevoix was the best, the tops, of all the stops on the tour. Generous donors, plus 26 sponsors and 72 patrons all contributed to the funds for this challenging project. This was not intended to be a money making venture. It will be a most surprising achievement if it becomes a break-even enterprise.

We hope that all of the 10 members of the group will receive at least $200 for personal spending. At this time, they have been given $100 each.

The writer, and Roger Strigley of Creative Marketing of Petoskey think we have given hundreds of people in Northern Michigan entertainment that is normally seen only in very few cities of our country. The losers in this interesting spectacle, unfortunately, were those people who were unable to see these energetic and talented folk dancers from Kazan.

Our overseas friends will soon be back in their hometown of Kazan, Russia. Will they miss us? We, with our oversized residences, stores jammed with thousands of goods and many families with three automobiles. Not one of the eight families of the dancers own a car. They will be returning to a country that is hard for Americans to comprehend, to mentally understand or to know. Where a small apartment with all utilities rents for less than a dollar a month. The train fare from Kazan to Moscow, 400 miles, was 75 cents. There is no tuition charged by the Kazan University. And health care is free (not as good as ours), but their life span equals ours. Seventy percent of the doctors are women and they receive the same monthly wage as given factory workers.

And, of course, every one of our young visitors deeply loves their country and respects their own history and culture. Not many of them attend church.

Russia has a multitude of problems, mainly their currency. It will take many years to become almost even with us. Perhaps we have too much.

Each of them was concerned about the future. Charlevoix and the whole world hope the process of change will be peaceful.

We will miss them very much. Addresses are available for anyone wishing to stay in touch with any particular dancer from Kazan.

Community Christmas Project under way

As the Thanksgiving Holiday approaches, we realize that Christmas can't be far behind.

Our "thanksgiving" can be shown by making plans to share time, energy and whatever largess we may have with those who can use a little TLC this Christmas. At least that's the thinking of area church members and other generous people who are launching the 1992 annual Community Christmas Project.

All the committees have been set up and are looking for people who are willing to contribute ideas, time and energy, material items, and/or money as we join hands and hearts in this effort. Last year 406 people from 154 homes received the components of a Christmas dinner along with some extra items. One hundred seventy-five children and 48 senior citizens age 75 and over received gifts. Individuals, businesses and community organizations gave $4,576.20 as well as a countless number of material items to the cause.

The nation's economy may be in trouble, but Charlevoix area people stand ready again to share God's gifts in the spirit of Him whose birth we celebrate. Anyone who hasn't already signed up is invited to "come aboard" by calling Kay Smith (547-2920), Mary Helen Riggie (547-9515), or Rosemary Horton (547-2359).

Dozens attend SCORE meeting

Tuesday, Feb. 4, on the campus of North Central Michigan College 75 local citizens either interested in starting their own small businesses or others already owning a business, but wanting to manage it better, attended a seminar entitled "How To Start And Manage A Small Business Successfully." There was simply no more room for the at least 15 more who wanted to attend, but had registered too late to claim one of the limited seats.

The program consisted of a clear and concise, professionally produced video presenting a step by step guide on how to start. En-

New doctor joins Charlevoix hospital staff

Anna G. Young, M.D., a family practitioner, has joined the active staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital. She is associated with the East Jordan Family Health Center in East Jordan.

Dr. Young received a bachelor of political science degree from Grand Valley State University and a bachelor of science in microbiology from Eastern Michigan University. She received her medical degree from the University of Michigan in 1989. Her three-year residency was completed at Valley Medical Center, University of Washington Affiliated Program, Renton, Washington in June of this year.

She is certified by the American Board of Family Practice. She and her husband John and 10-month-old baby Kathryn reside in East Jordan. Young and her husband are both Michigan natives having grown up in the Detroit area. "I'm really excited about being here and getting to know more people in the community — and becoming a part of the community," Young said. "It seems like a nice place to raise a family."

Dr. Young will be serving residents of Charlevoix and northern Antrim County. She brings the Charlevoix Area Hospital active staff membership to 20.

trepreneurs such as the original owners of Pizza Hut and Crate & Barrel, as well as smaller businesses, shared with the viewer all the emotions, concerns, pitfalls, and secrets of success that allowed them to grow a business from humble beginnings to eventual prosperity and success. The video was followed by a question and answer discussion of the program led by the sponsors of the event - SCORE.

SCORE stands for Service Corps of Retired Executives and is made up of retired business executives (10 of the 13 counselors are Harbor Springs Kiwanis members) who offer free and confidential business counseling to small business people. SCORE is a non-profit, nationwide organization sponsored by the United States Small Business Administration and locally coordinated by the Petoskey Chamber of Commerce.

Because of the enthusiastic response to Tuesday evenings program, SCORE indicated it will repeat the event in a few months. For more information, contact the Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce office at 347-4150.

Dr. gains certification

Steven Wisniewski, M.D., recently completed exams and was approved by the American College of Internal Medicine for certification in geriatric medicine.

Wisniewski, who is associated with the East Jordan Family Health Center and on the medical staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital, is board certified in internal medicine. To be eligible for geriatric certification a physician must have a special interest in geriatrics and the majority of his or her practice must involve geriatric patients, and they must pass the board exam.

He is now qualified as an expert in the diagnosis and treatment of the specific medical problems relating to elderly patients. Wisniewski received his medical degree from Michigan State University in 1984. His internship and residency were served at Wm. Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, MI. He has practiced in the area since 1987.

Slow second quarter dooms Charlevoix girls

They lose to Harbor, 58-46

A slow second quarter put Charlevoix girls' basketball team too far behind to catch up Monday.

The Rams (8-6 league, 12-8 overall) trailed 14-13 after one quarter but used a 22-8 second quarter advantage to take control at the half, 35-25.

"We just let them score a lot in the second quarter and couldn't spark up and come back," said Charlevoix coach Toni Felner.

For Charlevoix (9-11 overall, 6-8 league), sophomore Liz Grunch had 21 points, plus she added three steals and a blocked shot. Also for Charlevoix, Becky Bragg had a season high 17 rebounds.

The Rayders hit 17 baskets with five of those 3-pointers, were seven of 10 in foul shooting and had 10 fouls.

The girls' basketball team got a good effort from several players in beating Grayling 61-48 Nov. 10.

Becky Bragg and Jodi Allison played well in the paint while Liz Grunch, Mary Jane Grunch and Sheila Siegart patrolled the open court. Bragg led the team with 18 points and 11 rebounds. The junior forward's 18 points against Grayling followed a 35 point game against Kalkaska four days earlier, giving her an average of 26.5 points for the two games.

Allison, a senior center, had one of the best games of her high school career with 17 points and 12 rebounds. Liz Grunch played a well-rounded game with 13 points, four steals and seven assists. Mary Jane Grunch and Siegart spearheaded fullcourt defensive pressure and made burdens of themselves for the Grayling ballhandlers throughout the evening.

Charlevoix led for most of the game although they didn't break the game open until the final quarter. At the end of the first quarter, the Rayders led 17-11. Throughout the season the Rayders have been plagued by scoring slumps. They've had several games where their offense played well for three quarters, but failed to function for one quarter, normally the second or third. Against Grayling, the Rayder offense opened slowly in the second quarter, but finished well to give the Rayders a 28-14 halftime lead.

In the third quarter Charlevoix utilized good open court defensive pressure to create turnovers. Off the turnovers they ran well and got the ball to Liz Grunch who did an exceptional job of avoiding turnovers while getting the ball to open players on the fly.

The win raised Charlevoix's season record to 9-10.

Charlevoix won the junior varsity game 46-37. Melissa Anderson led the team with 11 points. Kris Blanchard added eight points while freshman Liz Kelly had seven rebounds.

Villager, Waste Management win rec games

CHARLEVOIX — Villager Pub and Waste Management won games in the Charlevoix Men's Recreation Basketball League Monday.

Villager downed Village Inn Pizza, 76-46, leading 36-17 at the half. For Villager, Brandon Kanoff had 22 points and Mike Ruhlman, 21, while for VIP, Pat Anderson had 16 points. Waste Management downed Sears of Charlevoix, 69-39, leading 29-19 at the half. For Waste Management, Randy Holecheck hit 20 points, Mike Dennis, 16, and Kevin Somero, 10, while Rich Grant had 18 points for Sears.

League play resumes Wednesday, Nov. 18, as Russell's Auto Body faces Charlevoix County Construction at 7 p.m. followed by Townhouse against Hoopers.

Groups work together to seek pool grants

Several community groups are working together in an effort to seek grants to fund construction and operation of a swimming pool.

The Charlevoix Township Board recently approved a resolution stating its willingness to provide year-round ground maintenance and water for the proposed area pool, in exchange for use rates equal to those assessed city residents.

In addition, Mayor Dave Novotny has agreed to serve on the special gifts committee of the pool fund-raising effort and new council member Don Meggison has been appointed to serve on the pool study committee, according to Bruce MacArthur of the pool committee.

The township resolution, passed unanimously, calls for the township to take care of annual mowing and plowing of a community pool, at a city-estimated cost of $2,515. Also covered will be cost of water, estimated by the city at $5,277.

The board limited the township's annual obligation to $8,000. The resolution was passed subject to approval of pool management and contingent upon the city's receipt and acceptance of a DNR grant. The city has applied for a $500,000 DNR grant to help build the pool.

Friends of the Pool, which recently changed its name to "Friends of the Charlevoix Health and Fitness Center," requested commitment by the township as a part of its community-wide effort to reduce annual operating expenses and thus lower the size of an endowment fund necessary to cover those expenses.

In March the township formally agreed to share pool expenses, however the township's specific contribution was not determined until Monday's meeting.

Friends of the Pool is seeking cooperation from the city, township and school district in the establishment of a pool in response to a survey it conducted. Responses clearly favored a cooperative effort in seeking grants and funds for the pool to avoid a tax increase to build or operate the pool.

In addition to the township, organizations which have committed to help offset annual pool operating expenses include the Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis clubs of Charlevoix.

Each has committed $1,000 annually.

Members of the crews of the U.S. Coast Guard station and ship have agreed to provide lifeguard duty in exchange for use of the pool by their families. Estimated annual operating expense reduction resulting from this is $30,000.

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful and the Belvedere Club have agreed to contribute $1,000 a year. Both the Chicago Club and Sequanota are in the process of determining the amount of their annual contribution. LexaLife International recently gave $2,500.

An additional 23 pool charter members also have contributed to operating funds by pledging their annual membership fees for three years in advance, at a 10 percent discount. Charter membership fees are limited to 50, and cost $250 a year for families and $150 for individuals. Charter memberships can be reserved by calling the Friends of the Pool headquarters at 547-1991.

According to Friends of the Pool co-chair Ken Weller, a total of $54,000 toward increased income and reduces expenses has been committed already, and other sources have expressed interest in giving support for a total estimated at over $100,000 per year.

Friends of the Pool has approximately $300,000 in cash and pledges which may be transferred from the Kiwanis Club to the newly-established Charlevoix County Community Foundation. This will be handled as an agency endowment in a designated fund; the interest from which will be used to offset operating expenses.

All of the recent pledges are contingent upon receipt and acceptance of the DNR grant.

The Kresge foundation will be asked to provide $175,000 as a challenge to the Charlevoix community to raise $325,000 to match the DNR grant of $500,000 for the construction of the center, which will cost a total of $1,000,000. Charlevoix will know about results of the DNR grant application in December. Results of the Kresge grant application will be announced in March 1993.

Courier Guru suffers another tough week

Courier Guru, last week 6-4. Season record 35-19.

This week's picks:

Miami-Syracuse. This will be a close one, but I have to go with Miami in a tight one. Pick: Miami.

Michigan-Ohio State. Will the Wolverines disappoint us again? No way. Pick: Michigan.

MSU-Illinois. Illinois got some big breaks last week, but State won't fumble out of a bowl bid. Pick: MSU.

Detroit-Cincinnati. Detroit gave one away last week, but not this time. Pick: Detroit.

Muskegon Reeths-Puffer - East Lansing. East Lansing has one of the best backs Michigan has seen in a while. East Lansing blows past Muskegon. Pick: East Lansing.

Traverse City-St. Francis-Coleman. Good luck Coleman, you are going to need it. Pick: Traverse City.

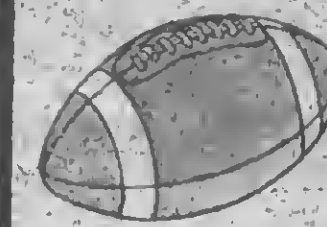

Montague-Battle Creek Pennfield. This one is a toss up, but the ground game of Montague will get them to the Silver Dome. Pick: Montague.

USC-UCLA. This one is always a good match up. Pick: USC.

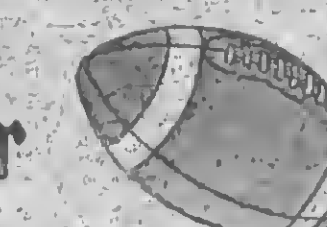

Houston-Miami. Houston had a big win over Minnesota last week, but lost Warren Moon in the process. Pick: Miami.

Tampa Bay-San Diego. Both teams are coming off big wins. Look for the Bucs to make it two in a row. Pick: Tampa Bay.

Denver-LA Raiders. The Raiders have had quarterback problems all season long. The Broncos haven't. Pick: Denver.

Kusina soil tests will become public when city buys land

The results of soil contamination tests done at a downtown site will become public if the city purchases the site.

The site is the former Kusina Motors property between Mason and Antrim streets. The city has agreed to purchase the property for $365,000, provided that it has an environmentally clean bill of health.

Environmental tests have been done on the property. Two wells are visible near Mason Street and soil has been hauled away. The purchase agreement between property owner Dennis Kusina and the city's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) calls for environmental testing, but also contains a clause saying the test results will be kept confidential. The contract calls for Kusina to initially pay the full cost of the assessment. However, if the city goes ahead with the purchase, then the city will reimburse Kusina for 50 percent of the assessment cost.

The Courier questioned city officials about the propriety of the confidentiality clause in a public purchase. City manager Mike Wiesner discussed the matter with city attorney Jim Young and had Young contact the Courier. Young said that in negotiations for the property purchase, the property owner wanted the confidentiality clause. He said his research indicates that the clause is legal and does not violate the state Open Meetings Act or federal Freedom of Information Act.

When asked what the parameters of the confidentiality were and who among the city staff members would be able to see the information before it became fully public, Young explained that the information would be available to members of the DDA board and staff members working under the board's direction.

Young said that although the purchase agreement doesn't directly address the question of the information being released if the city does go through with the property purchase, his initial inclination is that once the transaction is completed and Kusina is reimbursed for a portion of the assessment cost, then the assessment results become public information.

Kusina's attorney, Scott Beatty, was asked by the Courier if that is also his understanding of the matter. Beatty essentially agreed with Young's assessment, saying that once the deal for the property is closed then the release of the assessment results becomes the city's call.

Earlier, in describing contamination at the site he said, "There are some slight problems that are being remedied."

Charlevoix will miss brothers

one loved him." Brother Louie Edwards never married, but that didn't exclude him from a life filled with children. Louie devoted most of his adult life to the boy scouts in Charlevoix. When Louie was asked to be the scoutmaster back in 1958, he was handed a uniform and a handbook and was told, "Congratulations. You're the new scoutmaster." by Pete Burns. Louie agreed to fill the position on a temporary basis until they could find a permanent replacement. Louie held the position for the next 33 years.

Kay Chase saw three of her sons go through the scout program under Louie. "Louie never turned a boy away," Chase said. "Louie always put not just boys but other people first."

Dave Novotny is a former scoutmaster and long time supporter of the scouts who knew Louie well. "Louie was a man of simple means who never lost sight of his purpose in life," Novotny said. Novotny felt that Louie's purpose in life was to help others. Louie had a poem on his refrigerator that spoke volumes about the man. It said, "100 years from now, it will not matter what my bank account was, the sort of house I lived in, or the kind of car I drove. But the world may be different because I was important in the life of a boy."

Louie was also a member of the Charlevoix Historical Society, and had a great love of trains. He was instrumental in getting the Charlevoix Depot for the museum.

Novotny said that Louie's idea of a perfect day would be to take a group of boy scouts, hop a train, and catch a circus. "That was Louie. Helping others, and retaining a part of his childhood," Novotny said.

20-year scoutmaster Dave Phillips said of Louie, "He was a scout of scouts, the term isn't used frequently because it applies to so few."

"Davida Blake had been a friend of Louie's since their childhood. As she attended his memorial service, she said she looked around the crowded room and said, "I never realized how many lives he had touched over the years. He influenced so many people, people from so many walks of life."

Louie and Dick Edwards will be dearly missed.

Seven apply for school board seat

By Laurie Lounsbury

The Charlevoix school board has accepted the resignation of long-time board member Doris Pearl, but at the Nov. 16 board meeting board president Max Novak announced a decision to delay the appointment of a replacement.

Pearl was recently elected to the position of Norwood Township Clerk, and resigned from the school board to avoid a conflict of interest. After resigning, Pearl spoke to the other board members, "I urge the board to appoint someone who has been active throughout the strategic planning process. Someone who has served on a strategic planning committee. That shows the person is committed and has interest in our school district and that's imperative."

Pearl added, "You don't have time to play politics with this. You've got work to do." Pearl recommended to the board that they make a decision on a new appointment right away. When Pearl was finished speaking, Novak announced that the board had decided to wait two weeks before appointing a new board member. It was not clear when the board decided to delay the appointment, since it didn't come up for discussion at the meeting.

Audience members were not happy with Novak's decision to delay an appointment. "I want to express my disappointment with the board, that without reason, you have set this aside," said Traver Wood. Other audience members asked to know the names of people interested in filling the board position. Novak said he didn't want to reveal the names without the people's permission. Board member Scott Beatty said the names were no secret as far as he's concerned.

Market closing ends 80-year tradition

By Laurie Lounsbury

The Wharfside Market closed its doors for business last Friday, ending an eighty year tradition of grocery business in the harborside location. Owners Mike Greeley, Dennis Kusina, and Mahlon A. Benson III decided to liquidate their party store business and maintain the building as property for rent or lease. Greeley, Kusina, and Benson have owned the business for the past 16 years, with Greeley acting as business manager, while the other two remained silent partners.

Greeley said that in those 16 years he has made a lot of friends and seen a lot of the store's regular customers grow up.

"Kids that were eight are now 25," he noted. Greeley said the busiest day of the year for the store has always been Venetian. He noted that in that one night, the store did 50 percent of the business that it did for the entire month of January.

In regard to the decision to close the store, Greeley said, "It was a number of things." He cited increased competition as gas stations became convenience stores, the State eased up on liquor licenses and allowed more of them, and people are drinking less.

The store's central location in the community allowed Greeley to keep an ear to what was happening in the community. His new job as a mortgage banker will have him on the road quite a bit.

"The thing I'm going to miss the most is I'm no longer in town so I can't be as involved in the community as I'd like to be," he said. "I've always prided myself on being very involved." Greeley is a former city council member and Charlevoix Rotary Club President.

Prior to the trio's ownership of the building, it was owned by Gordon Neff for 20 years and functioned as a traditional grocery store. Neff was preceded by grocer Milkon Block, who owned the business for 34 years.

...store closing marks the end of 80-year tradition

Neff recalls that business was a lot different during his and Block's grocery tenure. When Block owned the business, four or five other small grocery stores thrived in the downtown area. Neff took over in 1950. He said that it was not unusual for his store to make 200 to 250 deliveries a day in the summertime. He employed 15 people, and ran two delivery trucks to service the customers. "Our biggest asset was pleasing the customers," Neff said. "We really went overboard on service."

Neff ruefully remembers when he owned 29 feet of lakefront property that went with the building. When the city made plans to put new docks into Round Lake, Neff donated his lake frontage to the city. He figured the dock slips would be good for business. "I didn't know what I had back then," Neff said.

Three heart attacks forced Neff into retirement from the grocery business. "I had to give it up. I was dying," Neff said. Neff's brother Bob Neff ran the business for a year before selling it to realtor Ken Peterson. Peterson renovated the building and restructured the business from a traditional grocery store into a party store/deli operation. Greeley, Kusina, and Benson bought the building and business from Peterson, and ran the business until it's closing last Friday. "It was a fun time, and very interesting," said Kusina after the Wharfside closed. "We're very thankful for all our loyal customers, and enjoyed doing business in this place."

After 80 years as a Charlevoix grocery store, the shelves at the Wharfside Market location are now empty. A number of things led to the close of the store. Gas stations have become convenience stores. Grocery stores are now large stores, and the State has loosened up on liquor licenses. On Venetian night the Wharfside would be packed. This past Venetian night required five electronic cash registers to keep up with demand.

...school board to appoint new member at Nov. 30 meeting

Wood said after the meeting, "This would be the board's first step in involving the community if they would reveal the names of people interested in being on the board. By not revealing the names, it defeats the goals they've just been telling us they've established."

On Monday, November 23, the superintendent's office released the names of people who have expressed interest in being appointed to the board. They are: Mary Lee Campbell, Larry Boog, Wayne Boss, Dan Barron, Don Brown, William Supernaw, and Bruce Hamilton. The board will make a decision on the new appointment to the board at a special meeting Monday, Nov. 30.

Earlier in the Nov. 16 meeting, Superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson updated the board on changes taking place in the school system. Jackson spoke of steps being taken to comply with Public Act 25, which mandates certain changes in schools. She explained that Charlevoix has met some of the criteria established in P.A. 25. Charlevoix provides an annual report to the community, and has developed a core curriculum. Charlevoix also has a plan for educational reform. "Many schools get as far as the plan, but no further," said Jackson. "As superintendent, I would encourage you to implement the plan."

Jackson said that for the plan to be implemented, there would need to be community involvement and understanding between the schools and the community. "We need to have a continuing dialogue on our beliefs," she said.

This won't take long: city police find stolen car in less than an hour

Two juveniles apprehended and charged with joyriding

City police recovered a car Saturday evening less than an hour after it had been reported stolen.

Ray and Nancy Wood parked their car, a maroon 1988 Caprice station wagon, on Mason Street at approximately 7 p.m., Nov. 20 to attend an event at the Masonic Temple. The keys were left in the car. At approximately 10 p.m., they discovered the car missing and reported the problem to the city police.

Less than an hour later City Police officer Paul Iyan and auxiliary officer Brian VanMeter were northbound on U.S. 31 near Michigan Avenue when they saw a maroon station wagon going the wrong way on Michigan Avenue with its headlights off. Michigan Avenue is a one-way street. At the time the officers spotted the car, it was near the intersection of Michigan Avenue and Crowder. The officers pulled the car over and apprehended two juveniles.

The car has been returned to the Woods. The juveniles, a 14 and a 15-year-old female, were charged with joyriding and turned over to probate court.

Christmas project can always use an extra hand

As the Thanksgiving Holiday approaches, we realize that Christmas can't be far behind. Our "thanksgiving" can be shown by making plans to share time, energy, and whatever largess we may have with those who can use a little TLC this Christmas. At least that's the thinking of area church members and other generous people who are launching the 1992 annual Community Christmas Project.

Anyone who hasn't already signed up is invited to "come aboard" by calling Kay Smith (547-2920), Mary Hellen Riggie (547-9515), or Rosemary Horton (547-2359).

Letters to the editor

Peace on earth begins at home

Editor,

We are rapidly approaching the time of year when many of us stop and think about the importance of our families and loved ones. "Peace on Earth" seems to be a common refrain.

In light of the upcoming holidays, we would like to take this opportunity to reach out to women in the community who are subjected to abuse at the hands of a loved one.

A woman is physically assaulted every fifteen seconds in the United States. Battery is the single major cause of injury to women, more frequent than auto accidents, muggings, and rapes combined. The goal of abuse is for one person to have power and control over his partner. There are many forms of abuse, including: intimidation, isolation, emotional, economic, verbal, sexual, and physical. Abusers use one or more of these forms of abuse to dominate their partner and get their way.

Children, too, are greatly affected by domestic violence. At least 70 percent of men who batter their partners also sexually or physically abuse their children. Children may react to seeing violence in their homes by acting out aggressively or by becoming shy and withdrawn. They may develop learning and/or emotional problems. All children are negatively affected by witnessing abuse.

Probably the most commonly asked question is, "Why doesn't the battered woman just leave?" There are many reasons why it is difficult for her to leave an abusive partner. The battered woman may feel that no one will believe her. (The abuser is usually abusive only toward her. He may be a "great guy" according to everyone else.) She may be embarrassed to let people know the truth. She may be financially dependent on him. Many battered women, when deciding whether or not to leave the relationship, must choose between living with the abuser or living in poverty. She may lack adequate education or job skills for employment. She may fear the unknown. She may feel that the children need their father. She may love him and want to believe him when he convinces her he will change. She may be isolated from friends or family and feel she has nowhere to turn for help. There may be some cultural or religious restraints keeping her from leaving. Maybe her partner has threatened to kill himself or injure or kill her and/or the children. In fact, the risk of being seriously injured or killed by the abuser goes up 75 percent when a battered woman tries to leave the situation. Her fears are real. Listen to her, believe her, and support her. Don't judge her or offer help only if she decides to do what you think is best for her.

For women who are in an abusive relationship, there is help available to you. There are people who will listen to you, understand you, and believe you. Call the Women's Resource Center at (616) 347-0082. They can offer a safe place for you and your children to stay, counseling, information, and referrals for legal and financial help. You deserve happiness and a life free of fear. We know, we have experienced abuse too. Remember this time of year and all year through, "Peace on Earth" begins at home.

Louie Edwards made Charlevoix a better community

Editor,

It was with great sadness that I learned of the passing of Louis Edwards. Anyone who came into contact over the years with this man knows of the caring and kindness he gave to the youth of Charlevoix. His many years in the Boy Scouts gave youth a glowing example of what a caring adult should be. He was always there for his scouts, day or night. There was never a time he turned someone away who needed help in any way. While most people knew of his good deeds in scouting, few knew that he carried his kindness past scouting. There are many adults out there now who owe their lives to Louie because he took the time to listen to their problems and offer anything he had to help make the world right for them. Nothing he had was held back; his time, his money, even his home were all available to youth who needed something to help make it through troubling times. He was one of those people that came around once in a lifetime and I thank God He came around in mine. The people of Charlevoix owe Edwards a debt that they will never be able to repay. But because of him the community will be a better place to live. Good-bye Louie, we will all miss you.

Christmas cards benefit Hospice

The Charlevoix County Hospice is proud to announce that they have a new Christmas card for 1992. This card was designed by Lynn Osterbeck of Boyne City. The card's theme is again based on the Lights of Love Tree, an event sponsored each Christmas by Eta Nu Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, Boyne City. The theme is "This Christmas Give your Heart." Inside, "Wishing you happy times with those you hold close to your heart." The cost of printing of these cards were shared by BOYNE USA RESORTS, estate of Lillian S. Hawley, and Poinau Woodworkers, Inc.

The cost of the cards are $12 for 20. They are for sale, with hospice Christmas cards from other years, at Kaden's and The White Rose, Boyne City; The Clothing Company and Trademark Clothiers, Charlevoix; and Busy Bridge Antiques and Gifts, East Jordan. They are also available at the hospice office at the East Jordan Family Health Center.

Letters to the editor

City resources used by Chamber

Editor,

The election is over, the facts still remain. The Chamber of Commerce still made a grave error when it took sides and spent money endorsing a local candidate at the expense of another local candidate.

Most people have taken basic bookkeeping and know you can publish a set of books to reflect what ever you want them to. This is in no way a knock against the bookkeeping profession, just another fact.

The Bridge Beat publication of Sept/Oct 1992 and Business Focus of Oct. 1992 paid for by the Chamber of Commerce are clear examples of political ads. Yet in the Kern/Chamber letter in Courier issue of Nov. 18, 1992, this sentence is very noteworthy - "The Chamber of Commerce's name will not be found on any campaign report." Isn't that beautiful?

If an object looks like a duck, waddles like a duck, quacks like a duck and acts like a duck, chances are it is a duck. Many, many taxpayers think it's a duck also and are of the opinion that if you continue with these same principles, you'll be dead ducks as well.

When planning your political actions did you use the City-owned C of C building? Were all the lights burning brightly? How much rent do you pay for these accommodations? Was all the booth rental money from City owned property and all other income from City property carefully separated from political expenses? Yeah, sure it was!

Mr. Chamber President Kern accused me of making a "deliberate, intentional, untrue assertion." I won't dignify this with an answer but will leave that judgment to you readers. One more fact stands out - I HAVE NO AXE TO GRIND. I'm just an old, retired, rural carrier who thanks God he can still stumble around a golf course, pick up a fish pole on occasion and still has a keen interest in the welfare of our lovely community.

Historians will no doubt some day discover that Ananias was president of an early chamber of commerce and was also a late arrival and hopefully, a short term.

William Shakespeare described Kern and his letter best in those famous words he penned - "Methinks he doth protest too much."

Again, thanks for your time
Perry Smith

Tree decoration Friday

City electric department workers will be on hand with the bucket truck to give children a lift to the top of the community Christmas tree Friday afternoon. In recent years, decoration of the community tree has become one of Charlevoix's nicest holiday traditions.

The children in the photo above were among the many who participated in last year's community Christmas tree decoration in East Park. This year's tree will be decorated Friday, Nov. 27 between noon and 5:30. At 5:30, the tree will be lit. All area children are invited to bring handmade ornaments downtown to help decorate the tree.

Barbara Cook, Life Management teacher at Charlevoix Middle School recently participated in the statewide conference for Michigan Life Management Educators, Oct. 29-30 at the Grand Plaza Conference Center in Grand Rapids.

"LIFE MANAGEMENT EDUCATORS: FOCUS ON CHANGE" was the theme of this year's fall conference, attended by more than 350 educators from the state of Michigan. The goal of the conference was to help maximize the potential of Life Management Education students, teachers and programs.

Matas Quintilliano of Charlevoix, a freshman at Northern Michigan University, was selected as a National Merit Scholar for the 1992-93 academic year.

Quintilliano is the son of Lenore and David Quintilliano of Charlevoix. He is majoring in outdoor recreation and his minor is earth science.

He was one of the 13 NMU students who were either National Merit semi-finalists or had an ACT score of 30 or higher. Students with these scores are in the top one percent in the country.

New prosecutor acquires grant for victim's rights advocate

Richard May, newly elected Prosecuting Attorney for Charlevoix County, is pleased to announce the receipt of grant funding from the State of Michigan for Crime Victims Rights Services.

May has received $14,500 from the State of Michigan to fund a Charlevoix County Victims Rights Program.

One of the main emphasis of May's campaign Charlevoix County Prosecutor was to be an aggressive advocate for Crime Victims Rights, including priority treatment for victims and receipt of victims input in handling cases. During that campaign he indicated that he would push hard to obtain grant funding for a Victim Advocate.

Working in cooperation with the Charlevoix County Commissioners, a grant application was filed with the State of Michigan, Department of Management and Budget on September 3, 1992. That funding request was approved by the Department of Management and Budget on September 11, 1992.

With those funds, May will employ a Victims Advocate who will be responsible for insuring that victims receive proper notice of their rights, assisting victims in applying for compensation from the Crime Victim's Compensation Board, send victims notices of court hearings, obtaining victim input concerning case disposition, arranging meetings between the victims and prosecuting attorney, help the victims secure restitution, processing of restitution monies received through the prosecutor's office, notifying victims of available counseling services, matching the victims with a volunteer advocate sponsored by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, help prepare victims and witnesses to testify in court, especially child witnesses, assist victims in making statements before or at sentencing, and informing victims of final case disposition.

The grant funding will provide additional staff for the Prosecutor's office to effectively communicate with victims and improve responsiveness to the victim's needs.

The Charlevoix Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) chapter recently hosted an appreciation dinner for area law enforcement officers at Terry's Place in Charlevoix. Officers from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, Michigan State Police Post and Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City police departments were invited along with their spouses. Approximately 40 people attended. MADD secretary Joannie Carlson said the group hopes to make the dinner an annual event. This past weekend MADD members passed out red ribbons as part of their Tie One On for the holidays campaign. The purpose of the campaign is to remind people not to drink and drive during the holiday season.

Local students celebrate Education Week

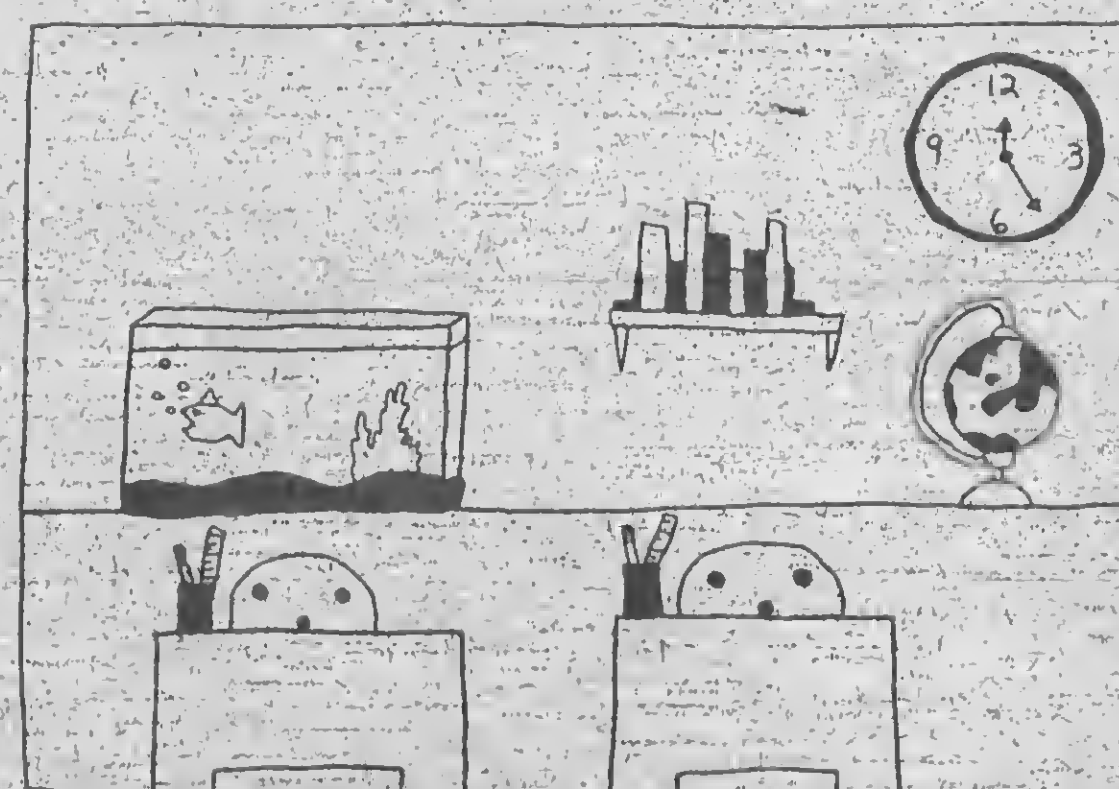

The American Education Week, from Nov. 15 to Nov. 21, didn't slip by the elementary school unnoticed. Teachers Beth McGraw and Marina LaBlance incorporated lessons about the importance of education in their art and music classes. LaBlance's music students learned a rap song called, "Knowledge is Power." Kids clapped, danced and rapped their way through the lyrics saying, "Yo! Hey You! Hey listen to me! You have the freedom to choose what to be!"

In McGraw's art class, students drew pictures for posters to be put up in all of the schools during American Education Week. Top poster entries were done by Adam Wood, Susan Agnello, Jennica Webster, Sarah Norton, and Brad Nortley.

Big Rock employees lose half a ton for charity

Dieting brings food to three area agencies

Employees at Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point plant have reduced their weight by more than one-quarter ton after completing a wellness program. As a result, three area agencies will benefit in the form of food donations from the employees.

Pledging a pound of food for every pound lost, the 59 participants in the eight-week wellness program lost a total of 606 pounds, an average of more than 10 pounds each. Points were awarded for exercise completed and obtaining a weight loss goal. As part of friendly competition among the 10 teams, the first place team won the right to decide where the food would be donated and a task for the last place team.

Winning team members Nancy Postma, Theresa Mosley, Dick Burdette, Randy Bearss, Chuck Barscy, Dawn Johnson and Bill Hoaglund have chosen the Womens Resource Center, the East Jordan Food Pantry and the Charlevoix Food Pantry to receive the food, along with $100 collected during the program. The task selected for the losing team is to contribute their time and cook a meal at one of the donation locations.

Interested participants at Big Rock are now entering a maintenance program to keep off the weight. A new weight loss and exercise program will begin in January.

Big Rock Point was the world's first high power-density boiling water reactor and an important research site for the nuclear power industry. The plant has generated electricity since 1962 and was named a Nuclear Historic Landmark by the American Nuclear Society.

Girls' basketball team closes season with district final loss

Rayders fall to Harbor Springs 71-51

Charlevoix's varsity girls' basketball team completed an up and down season with a 71-51 loss to Harbor Springs in Friday evening's district finals game at East Jordan.

A familiar nemesis hindered Charlevoix in the Harbor Springs game. The Rayders' offense went stagnant for much of the second quarter. Several times this season, the Rayders found themselves playing even with or better than the opposition for much of the game only to come out on the low end of the final score due to a scoring drought in either the second or third quarter.

Senior guard Mary Jane Grunch finished her high school basketball career with a flourish scoring 18 points. She stalked the Rayders to a 4-0 lead at the beginning of the game on back to back jump shots.

However Harbor Springs weathered the storm and by the end of the first quarter had surpassed the Rayders and taken a lead which they never relinquished.

Another recurring problem the Rayders this season was defending against tall players. Charlevoix's tallest players were in the 5'7" to 5'8" range. Opposing centers who pressed the 6' mark gave the Rayders match-up problems. Earlier in the season the Rayders had problems with Ellsworth's Tricia Drenth and East Jordan's Danielle Looze. Against Harbor Springs, Charlevoix had trouble with Michelle Calouette who came off the bench and dominated the glass, collecting 20 rebounds.

Despite losing by 20, the Rayders kept the game within reach until early in the fourth quarter.

Early in the third quarter, the Rayders trailed 36-30, but scored five straight points to draw within one. But once again Harbor Springs answered the challenge, this time with a seven point run.

In the fourth quarter the Rams pulled out to a double digit lead and put the Rayders away.

The Rayders finished the season with a 10-12 record overall. In addition to Grunch, two other Rayder seniors closed out their varsity careers. Sheila Siegwart and Jodi Allison were both third-year varsity players.

Siegwart, a guard, scored a few points, primarily off fast breaks, but the strong point of her game was pressure defense. She utilized the same speed which has made her one of the top hurdlers on the Rayder track team to play end to end basketball and mercilessly harass opposing ballhandlers in the open court.

Allison, a center, blossomed midway through her junior season. During her sophomore season she appeared to have physical ability, but often played too timidly. The progress she made from her sophomore to junior and senior season was like night and day. She not only became more aggressive, but demonstrated better court awareness and became a stabilizing force in the Rayders' inside game.

Despite the loss of the three seniors, coach Toni Felter has a nice nucleus coming back next year.

Liz Grunch will be a third year varsity player as a junior next year. As a sophomore he has the Rayders' best ball handler and one of the area's most feared outside shooters. During games this year, the most frequent instruction opposing coaches could be heard giving their players was, "Get out on her."

Junior forward Becky Bragg will be back for her senior year. Bragg is the Rayders' version of Dennis Rodman when he has his head in the game. Despite a slight build, Bragg is one of the Rayders most effective players in the paint. She makes up for a lack of muscle with intensity. Her point production also picked up near the end of the season.

Jamie Doan and Shannon Rowell were Charlevoix's other two junior forwards this past season. Both played well by streaks. Guards Carrie Waklat and Carrie Cunningham were the other two juniors on the team. They played limited minutes this season, but occasionally provided a spark off the bench.

dozen apiece. Mike Crain led Russell's with 18 points while Dave Norton had 17, Larry Brock 12 and Mike Dobulis and Corey Crain each had 11.

Recreation league play resumes Wednesday Nov. 25. At 7 p.m. Villager Pub will play Charlevoix County Construction. At 8:15 p.m. Sears of Charlevoix will play Russell's Auto Body.

Monday, Nov. 30, the first game will match Villager Pub against Townhouse while First State Bank will play The Hoopers in the evening's second game.

All games are played in the Charlevoix Middle School gym.

For winning the contest, Reinhart will receive a free six-month subscription to the Courier.

Choices getting tougher as season goes on Courier Guru. Last week's record 6-4. Season record 41-23 going into the final week.

This week's picks: Traverse City St. Francis vs. Harper Woods. Note that two of the three teams which beat Charlevoix this year are in the state finals. Pick - Traverse City St. Francis.

Montague vs. Detroit St. Martin DePorres. The annual joke of DePorres being in class C. Pick - DePorres.

Saginaw Arthur Hill vs. Redford Catholic Central. Can we avoid a parochial school sweep? Pick - Arthur Hill.

Miami vs. New Orleans. This could be one of the better pro games of the season. Pick - New Orleans.

Florida State vs. Florida. That Bowden guy who coaches Florida State has a lot of tricks up his sleeve. Pick - Florida State.

Miami vs. San Diego St. Wasn't there some Marshall somebody who used to play for San Diego St.? Pick - Miami.

USC vs. Notre Dame. USC has better looking cheerleaders, but as for the people on the field, well, that's another story. Pick - Notre Dame.

Tampa Bay vs. Green Bay. The Pack is coming back. And that Farve guy is a great new quarterback. Pick - Green Bay.

Mississippi vs. Mississippi St. There are too many sssss in this game. Pick - Mississippi State.

L.A. Raiders vs. San Diego. The Chargers are an improving team with a solid defense. Pick - San Diego.

Philadelphia vs. San Francisco. Apparently Eagles are a migratory bird since they've gone south this year. Not as far south as the land of the Giants, but south all the same. Pick - San Francisco.

Counseling center offers help for eating disorders

Many men and women have developed patterns of eating that are at best inadequate and at worst dangerous to health and potentially life threatening. Statistics indicate that a growing number of individuals, perhaps as high as 25 percent of the population, suffer from some form of compulsive eating behavior. Those who experience the cycles of binge-purge syndrome, compulsive overeating, starving, or a combination of these eating patterns, have an addiction to this behavior and to the foods they use in that they show signs of tolerance and withdrawal when practicing these behaviors. In addition, the compulsive eater often has a distorted body image, and may obsess about their weight and body size.

It looks like the hunters at Camp Good Luck had plenty of it, judging by the number of deer hanging behind them. We don't know what year this photo was taken of the hunting camp in the Upper Peninsula. It looks like it was before the days of limits on the number of deer a person could shoot. Any information on the date, exact location, and men in the hunting party will be welcomed at the Courier. Call 547-6558.

Keep the holidays safe

Over the next few weeks, many families will begin to decorate for the Holiday Season and family doctors around the state are reminding their patients and the general public to review these safety tips before they hang that first strand of lights.

For starters, old strings of hot lights can be an invitation to raging fire. Treat yourself to a string of new tree lights that barely get warm.

Second, fuses that blow and circuit breakers that trip mean "overload." You may need to move an electrical appliance from one circuit to another that can handle more appliances.

Third, lights that dim and TV pictures that shrink may signify bad contacts in the electrical system. Call the electric power company for help.

Fourth, switches and plug outlets that get hot are signs of potential fire hazards. Stop using them and call an electrician to make repairs.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission suggests:

* Smoke detectors are the best means to save your life in case of fire. Put a detector on each floor of your home, make sure that one can be heard from each of your bedrooms, and test the detector batteries each month and keep spare batteries on hand. (Even better, have your smoke detector wired into the electrical system in your house.)

* Don't take your electrical system for granted. Check the fuse box door or circuit breaker panel to find a record of your home's electrical inspections. If your last inspection was 10 or more years ago, an inspection is advisable.

mode of transportation.

When Parton started recycling bikes he had to go to garage sales and sidewalk sales to find tires and other spare parts. Now he receives enough donated bikes to carry the operation without looking for outside sources. Parton said that one bike in fair condition will get four or five other bikes back on the road.

Parton's 13-year-old son began helping work on the bikes last year. "It's good mechanical, hands-on training for him, and it's a good application of his Sunday school training," Parton said of his son's work.

Parton insists that he and his son are only cogs in the wheel of community goodwill. He points to all the people who donate bikes and all the people at the Department of Social Services who distribute the bikes. "It's a good funnel program," Parton said. "We funnel the good feelings of people."

Vasco Zucchiatti, director of volunteer services at the D.S.S., is grateful to Parton for his efforts. "These kids wouldn't have something (for Christmas) if it weren't for these bikes," Zucchiatti said. He recalled one visit he made to a family to deliver a bike. The little girl that received the bike was jumping up and down with excitement, and said to Zucchiatti, "This is the only bike I ever got."

Parton has repaired more than 100 bikes during the last five years. He will deliver another ten or 15 bikes next week to the Department of Social Services. And those bikes, while they're not shiny-new, will make some children very happy when they find them under their tree on Christmas morning.

Two tireless bicycles anonymously appeared by the curb of Bill Parton's home.

It's official: Charlevoix man referees in State Finals game

By L. Scott Swanson

Although the Charlevoix High School football team failed to make it to the state finals, Charlevoix was represented on the field. Randy Holecheck of Charlevoix officiated the Class DD finals game between Lake Linden Hubbell and Sand Creek. For those who watched the game on PASS, Holecheck served as umpire, the official who lines up in the midst of the linebackers.

Holecheck was nominated to do state playoff games by the Top Of Michigan Officiating Association. He was assigned to the finals game by the Michigan High School Athletic Association. He said he felt honored to be chosen for the finals. "There are a lot of good refs out there who haven't gotten the chance to do state finals," he noted. As an example, he cited Kirk Kujawski of Boyne City who is the lead official in the crew Holecheck works with during the regular season.

One of Holecheck's goals when he got into officiating about six years ago was to be able to do a state finals game. With that now accomplished, his next goal is to officiate some college games. He says there's a possibility that he will be able to do that next year.

Prior to officiating, Holecheck played three years of high school football at Ellsworth and later, played in the Michigan Charity Football League. That league was an adult league which fielded a team from this area for a couple of years before the team folded. After the team's demise, there was no longer an opportunity to play football, but Holecheck still liked the game and wanted to continue to be involved with it. He said he got talking to the late Bob Drenth, a long-time official of both high school football and basketball, and Drenth told him about officiating.

For the first two years, Holecheck filled in on crews with Drenth, Kragg Lieberman and the late Del Terrill. Drenth then heard about a regular opening with the Boyne City based crew of Kujawski, John Juday and Bill Korthase and gave them Holecheck's name. He's been with that crew for the past four years.

Holecheck has enjoyed working with that crew. "When you're working with a good crew, you know where everybody is going to be and what they're watching," he explained.

Coaches and athletic directors rate game officials on a one-to-five scale with a one being excellent and a five being poor. An official has to have a season average of two or better to be considered for semifinal or final playoff games. Holecheck had a 1.7 average and the rest of the crew also had excellent scores. In addition to varsity games, the crew also officiated some junior varsity games. By the time all is said and done, they will have officiated between 16 and 18 games on the year.

Holecheck said the crew's philosophy is to throw the least amount of flags possible while still keeping the game fair and under control. As an official, if you wanted to nitpick, you could find something to throw a flag on in almost every play of the game, Holecheck explains. But the officiating crew he works with believes it's best to "let the kids play good, tough football."

In the state finals Holecheck wasn't with his regular crew. Instead, he and officials from other crews were matched up by the state athletic association. The lead official was Jim Lamoreaux of St. Ignace. Dennis Phelps of Petoskey was also assigned to the DD finals crew.

Holecheck officiated in his normal umpire position. As umpire, lined up a few yards behind the defensive line. Holecheck's primary responsibility is watching for holding penalties. He says of holding penalties, "It always seems like when you call a hold, the guy runs for a touchdown."

Holecheck also officiates basketball games. He notes that one of the nice things about football is that if you do make a call some of the officials in the stands don't agree with you're out on the field far enough away where you really can't hear too well when they're holler-ing.

An umpire, more than any of the other officials, will find himself in traffic. In fact, it's not unheard of for running backs to try to use the umpire as something to hide behind; almost like another blocker.

"The best thing to do if they're running at you is just to stay right

Pool grant recommendation will be known Friday

The city council and Charlevoix Friends of the Pool will learn Friday whether the city's application for a $500,000 will be recommended by the DNR staff.

The staff's decision will become public then, at which time the list of recommended grants will be submitted to the legislature, according to Jeanne Powers, regional DNR Recreational Bond Program representative.

Earlier the DNR's Recreation Bond Division chief and the DNR's deputy director and director privately reviewed the final list of recommended grant recipients.

The staff has the option of recommending the approval of all, part or none of the funds requested for each project.

In a phone conversation with the Courier Monday, Power indicated that in application such as the pool grant it's likely the allocation would be all or nothing because it would be difficult to reduce the scope of the project.

The legislature usually concurs with the department's recommendations.

The city council is not required to take any action on the grant until the legislature approves the projects recommended by the DNR, and the governor signs the appropriations bill. Power speculated that would be sometime around June of 1993.

When the City Council approved making the application for the grant, council members indicated that pool proponents would have to come up with cash or letters of credit, rather than pledges for match money and additional construction money.

Friends of the Pool in Charlevoix have obtained written commitments of specific dollar support for annual operating pool expenses from organizations and businesses throughout the area. They have also received pledges of services to help reduce annual operating expenditures.

Organizations pledging money or services include Charlevoix Township, the U.S. Coast Guard station and ship, service organizations and most recently the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The bureau has already provided a $5,000 cash payment to the pool, and the board of directors at its last meeting pledged to give $2,000 a year to help offset operating expenses.

All of the recent pledges are contingent upon receipt and acceptance of the DNR grant.

An additional 27 pool charter members, more than half of those type memberships being issued, also have contributed to operating funds by pledging their annual membership fees for three years in advance, at a 10 percent discount. Charter membership fees are limited to 50 and cost $250 a year for families and $150 for individuals. Charter membership can be reserved by calling the Friends of the Pool headquarters at 547-1991.

The Friends of the Pool recently voted to rename the pool the "Charlevoix Health and Fitness Center."

His funeral was Saturday, Nov. 28, at the Ellsworth Wesleyan Church with the Rev. William Lyons officiating. Burial will be in Sunset Hill Cemetery, East Jordan.

He was born June 12, 1918, in Banks Township, the son of J.M. and Mae (Schopf) Ingalls. He worked on the family farm and attended Ellsworth Wesleyan Church.

Screening clinic offered for three-year-olds

There will be a three-year-old Developmental Screening Clinic for all children who will be entering kindergarten in the fall of 1994. This clinic is sponsored by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District. The purpose of this clinic is to provide parents information regarding normal child development, an opportunity to interact with parents of other three year old children, and to have your child informally screened to identify any potential learning difficulties which may arise during the school years. This is a free service with appointments made on a first come, first served basis.

The clinics are scheduled as follows:

East Jordan - Dec. 9, East Jordan Family Health Center.

Petoskey - Jan. 13, Cross of Christ Lutheran Church.

If you are interested in attending the above clinic, or reside in a district other than the one listed above, please contact Pat Gauthier, 547-9947, at the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District for an appointment or for further information.

This clinic is free of charge.

Child's birthdate must be between 12/2/88 and 12/1/89.

BEACONS

by REV. LOWELL ANDERSON

NO ROOM

It was nearing midnight and I had been traveling for several hours. The thought of a comfortable bed and a warm room on this cold winter night was uppermost in my mind. I turned into the driveway of a nationwide motel chain establishment that had a reputation for comfortable rooms at affordable prices. It was a rather large complex for the small town in which it was located, and I assumed there would surely be a number of rooms available. It was most discouraging to hear the desk clerk say, "Sorry, we're full." It meant having to settle for accommodations that night which were far less inviting and comfortable.

With only a few days until Christmas, we're reminded of the well-known words of the innkeeper at Bethlehem who informed Joseph and Mary there was "no room." The less commodious stable was all that was available. The Lord of Life, the Prince of Peace, the King of Kings, Jesus Christ was given the last of the least for His birthplace.

This Christmas season, what place are you giving Jesus in your life? Don't place Him last after Santa Claus, merry making, and self indulgence. Don't make him last in your celebration, gift-giving, and activities. Make him the center of your Christmas observance. Give him the best "room" in your activities... in your life.

A line in a modern Christmas song, which focuses on the plight of Jesus not to have had a proper room in which to be born, says "O come to my heart, Lord Jesus, there is room in my heart for thee!" That's my prayer. I encourage you to make it yours.

(Rev. Lowell Anderson is pastor of the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Anderson and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

Santa Claus will ride across the bridge and into Charlevoix on a sleigh at noon, Saturday, Dec. 5. He will be downtown throughout the afternoon Saturday passing out candy canes at stores participating in the Open House sponsored by the Retail Committee of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Stores will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. for Christmas shoppers. Many merchants will have refreshments available. From 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. there will be a free movie matinee at Cinema II. The movie is sponsored by Charlevoix County State Bank.

Above: As decorated by local children in the City's bucket truck, the Charlevoix community Christmas tree often ends up decorated a bit top heavy. But a lot of kids have a lot of fun.

Market Mall undergoing major renovation

By L. Scott Swanson

The Market Mall complex in downtown Charlevoix is undergoing a massive renovation. When the renovation effort is finished there will be a third floor on the complex.

Terry Salmonson purchased the southern end of the building last June and Charles J.K. Properties purchased the remainder of the building in August from former owner Mike Barnard. The renovation project had been initiated by Linda Mason.

Bill Koucky is overseeing the renovation which is being done by Gregg Wright and Built Wright contracting of Boyne City.

Koucky said that when the building was purchased, one of the first things the new owners discovered was that the roof needed major repairs. That need led to a decision to put a third floor on the building. When completed, the third floor will be made up of four residential condominium units.

Adding a third floor required structural work which is being done now. Koucky and Wright said they hope to have the third floor on as soon as possible with the front of the building being completed by spring. Although the structural work has raised a lot of dust on the inside of the building, shops in the mall are still open through the holiday shopping season.

Koucky said that although the basic structure of the Market Mall is sound, the whole building has been modified in bits and pieces over the years. The massive work being done now, which is expected to cost between $350,000 and $500,000 will get everything current at the same time.

In recent years, the second floor of the Market Mall has housed offices and apartments. That will continue with the ration of office space to apartment space being determined by market demand.

The first floor will be divided into front and back sections with separate entrances for each. In the front, there will be three large retail spaces. Koucky said he has a tenant lined up for one space and is currently seeking tenants for the other two.

There will be seven spaces at the back of the store. Most are already spoken for, but there are a couple of vacancies. Three of the shops in the back section are expected to complement each other nicely. The Biceps Health Club will open in late December or early January. When it opens, it will join two existing Market Mall shops, The Beach tanning salon and and P.S. The Added-Touch beauty shop, in serving health and beauty needs.

Fuller Nichols Association of Harbor Springs is doing the architectural work for the front of the building. Koucky said one of the objectives of the project is to keep the front of the building architecturally harmonious with other buildings in the community.

...Campbell to fill school board vacancy ruled out a lot of people if they required a background of prior involvement. Czerkes said he had not been involved with the school board before running for a seat.

The board voted four to two against Wieland's nomination of Don Brown. Levensgood then nominated MaryLee Campbell, who has been active in the school's strategic planning committee. Before a vote was taken, Levensgood addressed the board, saying that while the board had not appointed a potential school board candidate in the past, it didn't mean that it couldn't be done. Levensgood said that sometimes a board has to change the way they do things, because it's time for change. Campbell was voted in on a five to one vote, with Wieland casting the only dissenting vote.

Campbell said after the meeting, "I'm very pleased that the school board has the confidence in me to fill this vacancy." She added that she has no plans for tackling any specific issues immediately, saying "I'd like to sit quietly and get my feet wet first."

In other business, the school board voted to hire Steve Ketrer as the Saturday and Monday in-house supervisor. The in-house supervisor works Saturday mornings from 8 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. supervising students who need to make up school time or are serving detentions. Students who cannot or do not attend the Saturday morning session must make up the time on the following Monday. The job was being done by one of the library aides, which was taking away from her library duties.

Novak reminded board members that the Dec. 7 board meeting has been canceled, and the next board meeting will be held Dec. 21.

Middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder announced the dates for the middle school Christmas band concert, which are: Dec. 15 at 7:30 p.m. for the eighth grade band concert, to be held at the high school, Dec. 17 at 7:30 p.m. for the sixth and seventh grade band, to be held in the middle school.

Board members Czerkes and Beatty commended the performing arts team for their excellent performance on the fall show.

Pool grant turned down

Supporters of a proposal to build an indoor community swimming pool received word from Lansing Friday that an application for a $500,000 grant to help build the pool has been turned down.

The grant application had been sponsored by the City Council. A similar grant application sponsored by the Charlevoix School Board was turned down in May, 1991. The grant was being sought through the State Recreation Bond program administered by the Department of Natural Resources.

In March, when the City Council agreed to sponsor the application, council members stipulated that no local tax dollars would be used to fund pool construction and operations and that before the City would accept State grant dollars and incur accompanying obligations pool supporters would have to raise approximately $3 million to cover remaining construction and operational costs.

DNR officials noted that one reason for turning down the application was that support among city leaders was limited in how far they would go.

Volunteer efforts bring Christmas cheer

This is the second in a series of stories about people who try to make Christmas a bit nicer for others.

By Laurie Lounsbury

They sat huddled in the basement of the Congregational Church, looking like a pair of jolly Mrs. Santa Clauses hard at work. They are Kay Smith, chairman of the Community Christmas Project, and her assistant, Mary Helen Riggle. At this time of year, the two have their work cut out for them. "During the month of December, I don't plan on doing anything except this," said Riggle. What they'll be doing is organizing the many volunteers and the overflowing rooms full of donated items that will be presented to the low income families and senior citizens of Charlevoix for Christmas.

The Community Christmas Project began ten years ago as a way to provide a Christmas dinner, gifts, and needed items to low income families. The Charlevoix Ministerial Association founded the project, although today the project receives assistance from many different individuals and organizations.

Smith and Riggle begin working on the Christmas Project in October. The first step is to gather names of low income families from the food pantry, the Department of Social Services, school nurses and local ministers. From there, they contact all of the families to ask if they would like to receive a food basket. Last year the project gave food baskets to 160 households, and they expect to go over that number this year.

The term food basket is a misnomer. Instead of a food basket, small families will receive at least two bags of groceries, gifts, and canned goods, while the larger families will get as many as six to eight bags of goods.

The Christmas project doesn't limit the gifts to food and canned goods. They provide a few toys, a pair of socks, mittens, and a hat for each child, a vast food gift certificate for teenagers, and a small, personal gift for every senior citizen older than 75. The practice of giving gifts to senior citizens and people in the area nursing homes is new. "It's just a tender loving care gift, a remembrance for them," said Smith. Gifts given to the senior citizens are carefully selected by

It's a coordinated effort by many

Packing and preparing approximately 640 bags of groceries, gifts, and toys for Charlevoix's needy families is no small undertaking. The Community Christmas Project depends on the help and donations of many organizations and volunteers. The Webber Cub Scouts will prepare all of the grocery bags for the heavy contents by double bagging them. Charlevoix High School honor students will be on hand to carry and load groceries into the cars of recipients. "They're so efficient, and they're so strong," said Kay Smith. Middle school students will be having a canned food drive in December. A special volunteer crew will start early on the morning of

...grant application turned down

The Recreation Bond grant program also is designed to have a benefit of $6.50 per person in a projects service area. Mathematically, that means a grant of $500,000 for a pool would mean the pool would have to benefit almost 77,000 people.

Last week, prior to Friday's announcement, Jeanne Powers, the DNR staff member who did the field work on the application, said the application award was likely to be all or nothing rather than a portion of the amount requested because it would be difficult to reduce the scope of the proposed project.

Grants from the program are awarded on a regional basis. Charlevoix is in a region which encompasses the northern half of the lower peninsula. The Recreation Bond grant program is expected to award a total of $7.2 million to projects in the northern lower Michigan during the life of the program. Through the last round of funding, approximately $5 million of that $7.2 million had been awarded. Charlevoix's application was among not more than 20 which were competing for the remaining funds.

While expressing dismay at the setback, pool supporters have still not determined exactly where they will go from here. Roger Srigley, a public relations consultant working with the pool group, said pool board members met this past Saturday and discussed several possibilities, but didn't settle firmly on any one course of action. They will meet again this coming Saturday.

Smith and Riggie. Like Santa's elves poring over children's letters, they study a list of names and their interests before selecting the gifts. "Here's a guy who likes cars, horses, and country music," Riggie said. "And here's one who likes elephants and fishing. What are we going to get him?" she added, shaking her head with a little chuckle.

While cash donations are coming in a little slowly this year, volunteer helpers are in abundance.

"The volunteers really get the most out of it," said Riggie. "It's such a good feeling to help." Last year, the project drew more than 125 volunteers. Riggie said she could probably sleep better at night if donations were coming in a little more quickly, but she added, "We have great faith it will all work out." Smith nodded her head and added, "It's so rewarding to be here at the end when people come to get their things. They're so overwhelmed, so grateful."

delivery day to pack up the perishable items. The Rainbow Shoppe paid for all of the chicken, which comes to about $1,000 worth of fowl. The VFW organization donated $1,000 from their bingo proceeds. St. Mary's Parish, headed by Mark and Donna Cross, donates new mittens, hats and socks from their Giving Tree church project. Mittens are also knit or bought and donated by the Barnard Grange. The Charlevoix County State Bank will accept canned good donations at the bank, and they will match all donations that come in. First State Bank of Charlevoix will make a cash donation.

Anyone wishing to make a donation to the Community Christmas Project may send a check to: Community Christmas Project, care of Barbara Gallagher, 8622 Old U.S. 31 North, Charlevoix. Anyone wishing to donate canned goods may take them to the Charlevoix County State Bank. Gifts of new tube socks, hats, and mittens may be taken to St. Mary's.

Bands to present concerts

Instrumental music students from the Charlevoix schools will perform in two concerts during the week before Christmas. Tuesday, Dec. 15, the Charlevoix High School and eighth grade bands will present a concert which will include music for the holiday season. Among the selections to be played will be a concerto for solo instruments based on Christmas Carols; a light-hearted parody of the "The Twelve Days of Christmas"; and an arrangement of "The Saints' Hallelujah" by The Canadian Brass. The concert will be in the high school gym at 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Dec. 17 the sixth and seventh grade bands will perform in the Charlevoix Middle School Gym beginning at 7 p.m. More than 250 students are involved in these two concerts. There is no admission charge for the concerts, however, donations will be accepted at the door.

Pool proposal is a story with many twists and turns

(Editor's note: Word from Lansing last Friday that an application for a $500,000 grant has been turned down is the latest twist in the ongoing story regarding efforts to build and operate an indoor community swimming pool in Charlevoix. It is a story which has had many twists and turns. A quick check of Courier files turned up approximately 50 articles which have been written in regard to the latest pool effort which got its start more than four years ago.)

The story of the proposed pool (more specifically the funding for the proposed pool) has been controversial. The proposal for a pool has both its advocates and its detractors. But regardless of which camp a person found themselves in, the twists and turns have provided interesting reading and fodder for conversation.

Following is a brief summary of the path the pool proposal has taken during the past 20 years.)

Sept. 12, 1974 - School district voters reject a $600,000 bond proposal for a pool by a vote of 1,403 to 481. The proposal was on the ballot with a $6.99 million bond proposal for a new high school building. That proposal was also rejected, 1,363 to 518.

June 11, 1984 - In a straw vote, school district voters rejected three pool proposals put forth by a group known as SPLASH. A two mill request for two years to cover pool construction costs failed 474 to 250. A .33 to a .50 mill request for three years to pay for operational costs failed 466 to 269. A question which asked if the Charlevoix School District should own and operate a community pool received a vote of opposition 425 to 226.

September, 1985 - A proposal for a pool to be constructed in conjunction with the Charlevoix Health and Fitness Center (a private health center) failed to materialize.

October, 1988 - A group of service organizations, led by the Kiwanis Club, sent in a preapplication for a Neighborhood Builders Alliance Neighborhood Grant. The grant program was administered by the State. At that time the plan was to build a pool in the City electric plant building at an estimated cost of $600,000. The plan called for $100,000 in grant money, $200,000 in city Tax Increment Financing Authority (TIFA) funds and $300,000 from community fund raising. The plan unraveled quickly when the grant application was denied, the City had already obligated TIFA funds to other projects and the City had no immediate plans to vacate the electric plant building.

November, 1988 - A pool steering committee was formed to look into the possibility of constructing and operating a community swimming pool. Sites being considered included: the elementary school, the high school, a location near Ferry Beach and the old Inn Garage (the big white building near the City tennis courts on the north side).

January, 1989 - Pool proponents established the spring of 1989 as a groundbreaking date. At that time the primary site being considered was the elementary school. Funding alternatives being considered were: fundraising; a real estate transfer tax; and property taxes. The pool steering committee established four subcommittees: design; programming; public relations; finance; and executive.

April, 1989 - Pool steering committee members addressed the Charlevoix School Board. They said survey results showed support for a pool. Funding discussion centered on property taxes of half a mill to construct a pool and a fourth of a mill to fund operations. The school board took no action. Meanwhile, the pool's design committee interviewed architectural firms.

June, 1989 - Pool steering committee members again came before the school board to update board members about pool plans. Stakes had been placed at the elementary school with a proposed lay-out of a pool addition. Board members questioned pool proponents' funding plans. Pool proponents said the pool committee had chosen to pursue private financing. Audience members pointed out that the pool committee appeared to be proceeding on the assumption that school property could be used for a pool. The board took no position. Keep Charlevoix Beautiful also announced that benefits from the annual Labor Day auction would go

A Macomb County Circuit Court judge's ruling limiting the financial damage that the state can do to school systems such as Charlevoix's through plans such as Tax Base Sharing is a step in the right direction, but falls short of a complete solution.

Tax Base Sharing, also known as the Robin Hood bill (perhaps more appropriately referred to as the Robbin' Us bill), is a bill passed by the Lansing legislature in 1991 at the behest of Governor John Engler. The bill allows the state to take property tax revenues from out-of-formula school districts such as Charlevoix and transfer the money to in-formula school districts. In-formula and out-of-formula are terms derived from the state's school aid formula. The formula is based on the amount of property tax dollars available per student in a school district. The formula works out well for downstate school districts and is detrimental to northern Michigan school districts because it conveniently neglects income levels and economy of scale in providing educational opportunities to students.

The state aid formula and the Tax Base Sharing are nothing more than Lansing rationalizations for taking northern Michigan tax dollars and using them to educate downstate students.

The Macomb County judge's ruling weakened Tax Base Sharing to a degree, saying that school districts could not be penalized by the state for choosing not to go along with the program. However, it did not address the philosophical impropriety of the state's taking property tax dollars which voters approve for local education and using them for another purpose. That impropriety is something Lansing legislators must recognize, or be forced to recognize.

Fortunately, Sen. George McManus and Rep. Ralph Ostling (Charlevoix's state legislators at the time Tax Base Sharing was voted upon) recognized the problem and opposed the legislation. In fact McManus accurately dubbed it an "act of piracy." Unfortunately, Gov. John Engler supported the legislation. Although Engler has made several tough, but wise decisions while in office, the position he took on Tax Base Sharing continues to stand out as a glaring error which has yet to be rectified.

Court ruling probably won't bring any money back from State to Charlevoix school system

By L. Scott Swanson

A recent court ruling regarding the state's Tax Base-Sharing (TBS) law probably won't be a lot of help to Charlevoix in the long run.

The TBS law allows the state to take property tax revenue from out of formula school districts and redistribute it to in formula districts. Charlevoix is an out of formula district. (Out of formula means that a school district exceeds a tax base per pupil figure derived from the state educational aid formula.)

Last year Charlevoix was required to send $94,000 to the state for TBS. For every $2 that was sent in, the state provided an additional $1 in state aid so the net cost of TBS to the Charlevoix school district was $47,000.

Money sent in to the state by Charlevoix and other school districts was not redistributed due to lawsuits filed by the out of formula districts and taxpayers from those districts. Instead, the money, which totals somewhere between $20 million and $27 million, was put in an escrow fund where it still sits.

Last week Macomb County Circuit Judge Lido Bucca issued a ruling saying that the state can take cash from one school district and give it to another, but that the state can't punish school districts that refuse to share their revenues.

While people on both sides of the issue were calling the ruling a victory, Charlevoix school district business manager Rich Kelly was skeptical.

"Even if we get that (TBS money) back, I believe the state is just going to reduce other money," Kelly said.

Despite expressing pessimism about the financial ramifications of the ruling, Kelly said he would like to see TBS overturned by the courts. "If Tax Base-Sharing is overturned, I believe it's a real plus philosophically," he said. "I just don't believe in taking the local taxpayers' dollars and sending them out of the community."

Although the lawsuit has frozen TBS for a year, unless there is a change in Lansing's attitude more northern Michigan money is likely to be sent downstate.

"They're (the state) going to get the money one way or another," Kelly said.

...pool proposal has traveled 'a long and winding road'

toward pool funding.

July, 1989 - Pool supporters asked the school board to consider sponsoring a grant application for a Recreational Bond grant administered by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR). Pool supporters proposed seeking $750,000 in grant money, matching that with $350,000 in contributions to cover construction costs and raising additional money through other grants and contributions for an endowment fund to cover pool operational costs. School board members expressed reservations and did not sponsor the grant application. Later in the month, pool supporters approached the City Council saying they wanted to make the pool project happen with money from outside the tax sector. Council members said they supported having Charlevoix Township sponsor the grant application since the elementary school is within the township.

March, 1990 - Pool supporters launched a fundraising campaign. Their objective was to raise a total of $1.85 million: $1.35 million for pool construction and $500,000 for an endowment fund for pool operations. Pool supporters also brought a panel of people before the school board meeting again seeking board sponsorship of a grant application.

June, 1990 - Pool fundraising efforts received a boost with a pledge of $70,000 from the Frey Foundation. They also collected items for a July fundraising auction.

July, 1990 - A fundraising auction for the pool generates $40,249.

November, 1990 - Money raised by the pool fundraising drive totals approximately $354,000 in cash and pledges.

January, 1991 - Pool supporters ask the school board to sponsor a grant application seeking $500,000 from the DNR administered State Recreation Bond Grant program and to hold a special election asking school district voters to approve a $1 million bond to build a pool.

February, 1991 - Pool supporters repeated their request to the school board for school sponsorship of a grant application and a special election.

March, 1991 - The school board agrees to sponsor a grant application and to host a public meeting, but decides the bond issue request should be for $2.29 million rather than $1 million so that money will be available to fund construction and operational costs without relying on the DNR grant.

April, 1991 - The school board decides on an 11-year and 10-month payback schedule for the pool bond if it is approved by voters May 13. The total payback cost on the money borrowed plus interest will be $3,459,583.

May, 1991 - The grant application is denied by the DNR and voters also reject the bond proposal. The bond proposal is defeated by a vote of 1,163 to 717.

December, 1991 - The city council agrees to discuss the establishment of a swimming pool authority to apply for grants.

February, 1992 - At this time the site being discussed is a piece of city-owned property just north of the elementary school. Later in the month, council members and pool supporters discussed estimated construction and operational costs for a pool and how those costs might be met.

March, 1992 - The city council agrees to sponsor a pool grant application, but stipulates that pool supporters must raise in excess of $3 million to cover additional construction and operational costs.

Council members stipulate that the money raised must be in cash or letters of credit rather than pledges. Council members say that if the money is not raised, then the council will not accept state grant money.

April - November, 1992 - Pool supporters continue to look into other grants. Although they fail to raise anywhere near the $3 million stipulated by the council, they secure commitments of time and money from various local groups to reduce anticipated operational costs.

December, 1992 - Pool supporters received word from the DNR that the grant application has been denied.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

Two times in my life I have enjoyed the privilege of putting on the red suit, stuffing in a pillow and crowning it with a white beard and hat. I continue to be amazed at the wide eyed wonder that young children show in the presence of old St. Nicholas. It is not that I think we grown-ups should still believe in Santa Claus, but we grown-ups had better not forget that we need to believe in someone.

It is something to have a little child sit in your lap and share how they have been good. It gets you when they apologize for things hoping that Santa Claus will forgive them. It is intriguing to look up at Mom or Dad for clues on their child's wish list and then look back into those young eyes to say, "wait until Christmas morning!" I have heard about every toy you could imagine. I also cried when some kids spoke of wishing Santa could get their Dad a job or bring their family together again. We really do need to believe in someone.

Where has our own wide eyed wonder gone? The world should not be allowed to rob us of the precious joy of seeing God at work around us daily. If we want to believe that all things work together for good, we need to live like they do. Instead of lamenting over troubles and problems, we need to be more active in looking for ways to turn them into blessings. One of the carols we sing says, "let every heart prepare Him room." If we would indeed make room for God, you would be amazed at the wide eyed wonder He would unfold before us.

The Christmas story is more than just a tradition laden tale that we share year after year. It is the greatest holiday gift that any hurting heart would ask for hope for; God really did cloth His Son in human flesh. He shared in the same heartaches and joy, sadness and love that you and I do. He knows where we are in our life's journey even now. He knows just what we need to make each day's steps a little easier, a little more confident.

I have heard all kinds of debates over believing in Santa Claus. I know more than a few grown-ups who felt let down. My wide eyed wonder is still intact because "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." Given another chance, I would wear the red suit again in an instant because you never know when a young kid who sits in your lap may just grow up to have the faith to preach the real Christmas story to the next generation.

City Recreation Director Ike Boss welcomes Jay Neff to his new position of pro ski patroller at Mt. McSaubia.

Ski patroller hired to make McSaubia a safer place to ski

By Laurie Lounsbury

Mt. McSaubia will be a safer place to ski this winter with the addition of National Ski Patroller Jay Neff. Neff will be acting as a full time ski patroller whenever the local ski hill is open.

City Recreation Director Ike Boss said that the city budgeted for a paid, professional ski patroller a year ago. The numbers of volunteer ski patrollers kept dwindling over the years, until last season they were down to one volunteer ski patroller. "We could see we were in trouble and had to do something to get a ski patrol re-established," Boss said. "This way we'll know that we have one ski patroller there every hour that we're open."

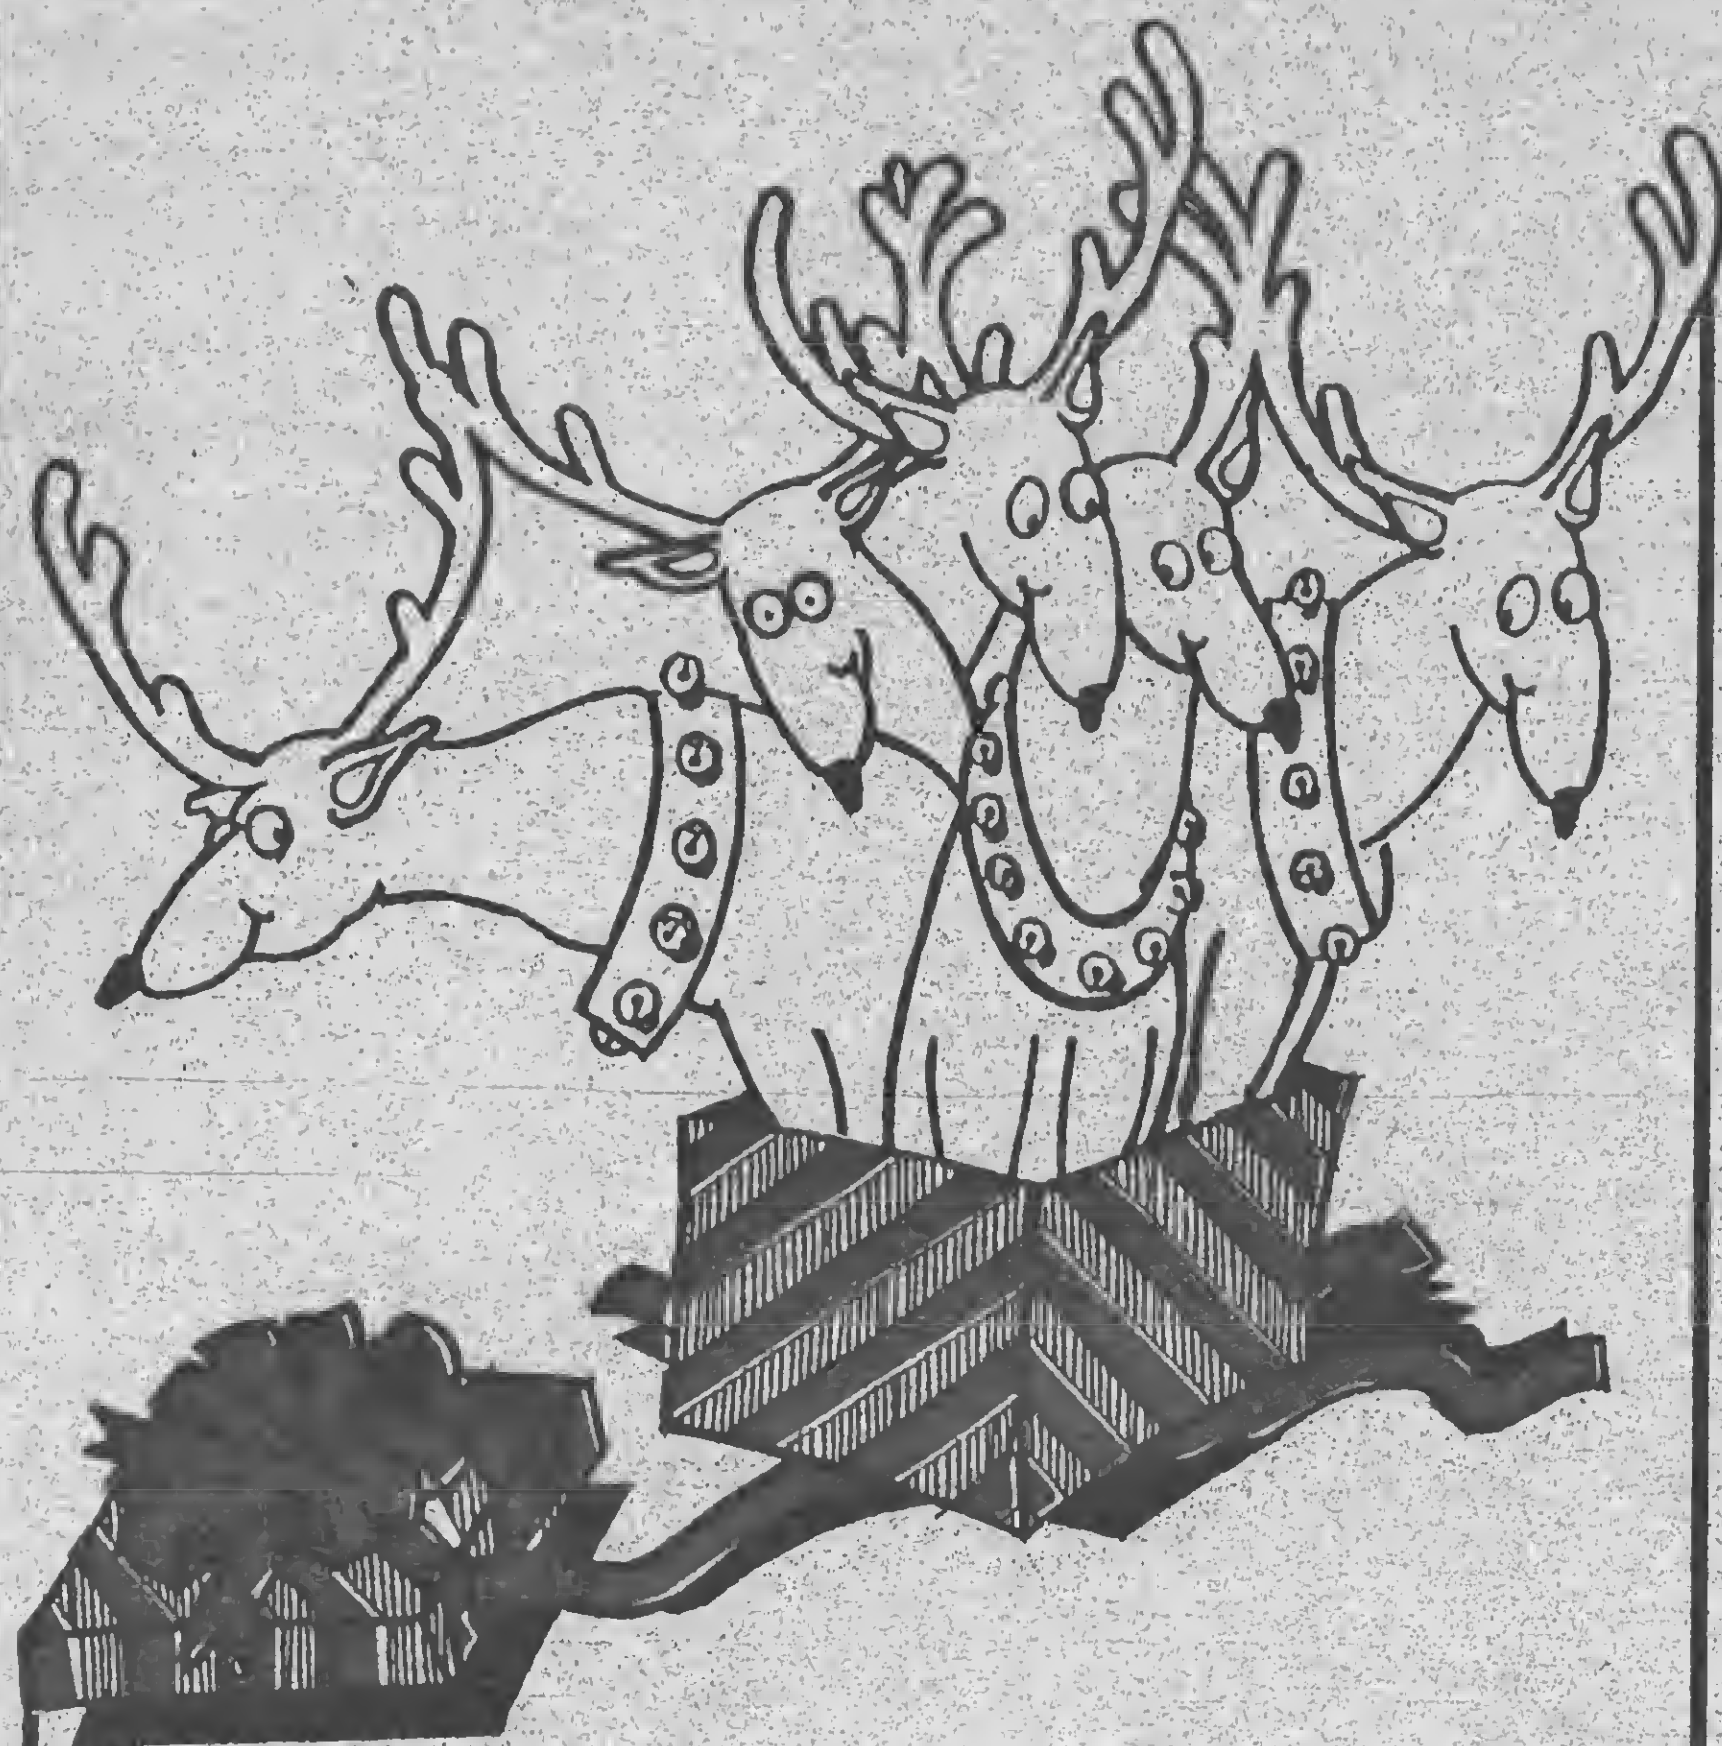

Boss is looking forward to having Neff coordinate a more efficient, organized, volunteer ski patrol. Boss also said it's time for the ski patrol to get stricter with the kids.

Neff says he's had experience with seven to 14-year-old kids, and is prepared to work with them. He teaches sailing at Camp Daggett during the summer. "I think I'll see a lot of familiar faces at Mt. McSaubia," Neff said. Neff said his approach to teaching safety to kids is to spend time talking to them. "I like to stop them (the kids breaking safety rules) and ask, 'Why do you think I'm here talking to you?' I like to let the kids figure it out for themselves. I want to explain why it's wrong, rather than telling them it's wrong," Neff continued.

Neff will spend time organizing a volunteer ski patrol, and is looking for any interested people. He stressed that being a ski patroller is a safety issue, a job of protecting the public from themselves. "It's a dangerous sport. When you mix gravity and a slippery surface, it's hazardous."

Neff wants to work with ski patrol volunteers on safety procedures, and send them to training programs at other area hills, where candidate training and ongoing training of ski patrollers is always taking place. Neff stressed that ski patrollers don't have to be capable of performing expert skiing feats. "You don't have to be a fancy skier. You have to be a controlled skier to be a patroller," Neff said. Neff explained that much of a patroller's duties are done without skiing. Lining up safety hay bales, check-

Young wins final football contest

Jim Young of Charlevoix won the final 1992 Courier football contest. Young correctly selected eight of 11 winners and will receive a free six-month subscription to the Courier.

The final contest was decided by the tie breaker game. Young and Hugh Mayne of Charlevoix each had eight correct selections. The tie breaker required participants to guess the total points in the San Francisco - Philadelphia game. The total was 36. Young guessed 30 and Mayne guessed 46.

Not to gloat, but the Courier Guru, offering pointers which last week's contest entrants apparently chose to ignore, correctly selected nine of last week's games. Last week's 9-2 record left the guru with a 50-25 season record.

In winning the season's final football contest, Young joins previous winners Keith Carey, Judy Carey (who won twice), Norm Layson, Larry Nunemaker, Tom Meggison and Bruce Reinhardt.

Sponsors for the 1992 football contest were: Pat McCown Ford Inc.; Sears of Charlevoix; Paul Bunyan Lanes / Flight Deck Bar; Ace Hardware; Pat McCown's Dodge City; Crown Motors of Charlevoix Limited.

...ski patroller hired for McSaubia

ing safety ropes, setting up marker flags for bare spots on the hill, and smoothing dangerous ridges on the slopes are some of the tasks that are accomplished by a patroller.

Neff is the son of the late Mort Neff, a well-known Michigan outdoorsman. Neff received his national ski patrol certification at Michigan Tech University in 1984. He grew up in Harbor Springs and has been skiing since he was four years old. He's worked the last two years at Nubs Nob as a pro patroller.

Neff will also bring to Mt. McSaubia his emergency medical skills as a paramedic. Neff works for Life Link and Emmet Emergency Services. Hew said it was his goal to be able to combine a work schedule of emergency services work and ski patrolling.

Anyone interested in being a volunteer ski patroller at Mt. McSaubia may contact the city recreation department 547-3253 and leave your name and number.

Health Department receives reports of head lice outbreaks

They're not pleasant, but they're not due to unclean living conditions

Sporadic outbreaks and cases of head lice have been reported to the health department. For some parents, it is a shock to be told their children have head lice because they associate head lice with filthy living conditions. Head lice (pediculosis) is a common condition and is not related to home hygiene habits nor housekeeping. It can occur at all social and economic levels and is not related to uncleanliness. Frequent bathing will neither prevent head lice nor eliminate an infestation once it has become established.

Children get head lice from close contact with an infested person or by sharing their hats, clothing, combs and hair brushes. Lice are small insects that live on the head and hair. Intense itching can occur when lice suck blood while feeding on the scalp. Head lice do not transmit diseases to humans. Scratching can result in bacterial infection.

The favorite site for lice and nits are the nape of the neck and behind the ears. If you suspect your child has lice, examine this area using a magnifying glass and a flashlight. Actual head lice are hard to see because they are tiny and few in number. Nits are found on the hair close to the scalp. Nits are gray white and silvery in color, oval in shape, and the size of a poppy seed. If one person is infested, all family members should be checked and treated at the same time.

There are a variety of medications that will treat head lice. Some are available by prescription and others can be bought at the local pharmacy or store. Medications should be applied according to the manufacturer's instructions. Never use home remedies such as kerosene or vinegar. They don't work and may be very dangerous. Nits should also be removed with a special comb. This may take several hours. At the time of treatment, all bedding and clothing used within the last 48 hours should be changed and laundered in hot soapy water. The hot setting on the dryer should be used for drying. Dry cleaning is also effective. Non-washable items can be sealed in a plastic bag for 14 days or left in below freezing temperatures for 12 to 24 hours. Insecticide sprays, aerosols, and fumigation of the home is not recommended. The floors, furniture, and beds should be thoroughly vacuumed.

Anyone with questions about head lice can call their physician or the health department at 547-6523.

Advice offered about keeping students healthy

Brian L. Youngs, M.D., Medical Director for the District Health Department, is stressing the importance of practicing good health habits, especially during this time of year. During the winter-spring months, viral diseases such as influenza, influenza like illnesses, measles, and chicken pox, and bacterial diseases such as streptococcal sore throat and meningitis increase in frequency. Many of the diseases are spread by nose and throat secretions from infected individuals.

Good health habits are an important factor in staying healthy. They help by preventing the spread of disease, and are especially important during the school year. Most good health habits are those common sense things taught to us as children: by our parents and include: washing your hands before you eat; washing your hands after you use the bathroom; not sharing common personal items such as eating utensils, glasses, combs, towels and food; keeping your fingernails clean and trimmed; not biting your fingernails; covering your mouth when you cough or sneeze; staying home when you are sick; avoiding others who are ill; and keeping small children from putting objects in their mouths.

Parents should not send ill children to school to day care to a nursery. This is very important because many respiratory and intestinal diseases are contacted in the day care/nursery setting. Parents need to be aware of their child's health status and be alert to signs and symptoms of illness which include fever (100 degrees Fahrenheit or higher); cold like symptoms with fever; sore throat and difficulty swallowing and swollen glands; coughing and difficulty breathing; nausea, vomiting and diarrhea; stomach aches and fever; yellow eyes or skin; pink eye; unusual rashes or infected skin patches; headache and stiff neck; severe itching or scratching of scalp; body aches and pains; and marked congestion, localized pain and fever.

Students should be kept out of school or day care when they are identified as having a communicable disease. The times of isolation vary but information can be obtained from the family physician or public health nurse. Unfortunately, with most diseases the child is contagious before he/she becomes ill and has effectively spread the disease for several days. Students can return to school when well, or when a physician states they are not contagious, or when local school policies allows them to return.

Many times the decision to keep students out of school by parents due to illness is difficult and may present a family hardship. Nevertheless, obviously ill children do not belong in school.

There are other measures involved in preventing disease such as receiving childhood immunizations and following your family physician's advice. Yet, a simple measure like washing your hands or keeping an ill child home will help prevent the spread of illness from one person to another.

December birthdays are always hard on kids, since they frequently get overlooked in the excitement of Christmas. Bobby Warner's mother made sure that his December birthday was celebrated properly more than 20 years ago with a birthday party. Attending the party, from left, were Guy Carter, Richard Russell, Robert Russell, Tim Zeitler, Michael Whitley, Bobby the birthday boy, Gary Pettis, Robert Ritt, Chip Wood, Scott Swanson, and Danny Wells. Kevin Wilks arrived late.

City and insurer pay $30,000 in settlement

The City of Charlevoix and its insurance company have agreed to pay $30,000 to avert a civil rights suit. The city's share of the $30,000 will be a $5,000 deductible.

The case involved an arrest made by city police officer Charles Myers on July 15, 1992. Myers arrested a 15-year-old black youth named Jerry Duhart for riding his bike on the Bridge Street sidewalk. Myers handcuffed Duhart and took him to the Charlevoix police station. The city's ordinance regarding this violation calls for the youth's bike to be confiscated rather than arresting the minor.

The incident continued when Duhart's father, Reggie Burks, came to the police station to retrieve his son. According to the police report, Burks became very agitated. A verbal and physical dispute ensued and Burks eventually was arrested and charged with escaping lawful custody, drunk and disorderly behavior and resisting and obstructing a police officer. While Burks was being held at the county jail, Duhart was released to his mother and the complaint against him was withdrawn by Police Chief Dennis Halverson.

The charges against Burks were eventually dismissed by the prosecutor's office. Burks retained attorney Dick Joseph. Joseph notified City Manager Mike Wiesner of the potential for a lawsuit alleging civil rights violations. Wiesner contacted the city attorney and the city's insurance carrier, which is the Michigan Municipal League pool.

Myers was demoted shortly after the incident and took a cut in pay. Since he was a seasonal officer, he is no longer with the city police department.

Former commissioners gave themselves benefits

Current county commissioners debate whether those benefits should continue

By Laurie Lounsbury

Health benefits for retired county employees including former county commissioners and their dependents continue to confound current Charlevoix County commissioners. A proposed resolution that would limit benefits for retirees' dependents and for retired part time employees was shelved at the last

Wednesday's board of commissioners' meeting. The proposal called for terminating retirement benefits for retired part-time employees or retirees that worked fewer than five days a week. It also would limit the amount of a retired dependent's benefits based on the years of employment by the retiree.

The board of commissioners that passed the retirement health benefit plan nearly six years ago was made up of Don Smith, Lee Moerland, Ralph Harmon, Larry Matthew, Tom Breakey, and Oral Sutliff. Four of those commissioners are currently retired and receiving retiree health benefits for themselves and their spouses. Smith is still serving as a county commissioner and Sutliff still works for the county with the transit department.

Active commissioners are regarded as full time employees and receive full health benefits while they serve as commissioners.

The Charlevoix County Clerk's office reported that $2,600 a month is currently being paid in benefits for retirees and their spouses, for a total of $31,200 a year. There are 17 retired employees receiving benefits, including the four retired commissioners and retired drain commissioner Clayton Healey.

Chairman Don Smith was prepared to terminate the benefits currently being paid to retired county commissioners, but he met with opposition. Newly elected commissioner Richard Gillespie, who attended the meeting as a citizen said, "If someone is retired and

Prosecutor receives $7,440 pay raise

Before he takes office

By Laurie Lounsbury

The new Charlevoix County prosecutor will take office in 1993 with a new 14 percent raise in salary. Richard May will be earning $60,000 a year as opposed to the current prosecutor's salary of $52,560. The new prosecutor's salary was one of the 1993 county budget items that was approved by the Charlevoix County commissioners at the last Wednesday's board meeting. Other county employees will receive a 4 percent raise.

Prosecutor Kraag Lieberman, who will leave office at the end of the month, questioned commissioners about the increased prosecutor's salary. Lieberman pointedly asked commissioner Phil Johnson if he

Santa establishes Charlevoix branch workshop

Boss family creates Christmas display with imagination, elves, music and thousands of lights

(Editor's note: The following was written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city council member who continues to be active in a number of civic matters. He has traveled extensively with contacts extending clear to the North Pole.)

By Ralph McRae

In the early 1980s, Santa Claus had a problem. There were a large number of very nice little girls and boys in Charlevoix, but with Charlevoix being so far from the North Pole, it was tough for Santa to pay enough attention to them. Transportation and shipping from the North Pole were also problems. Reindeer are wonderful things, but they have their limitations.

What to do? What to do? Luckily, at about the same time, Dale and Marilyn Boss of Charlevoix became aware of the situation and decided to help Santa Claus. An arrangement was worked out to allow a Santa's Workshop branch office in Charlevoix. The workshop was founded in 1986. Fortunately, no federal, state or local governmental units became involved. With no bureaucracy or red tape, decisions made one day could be carried out the next.

The workshop has been a successful venture. With the guidance of Santa Claus and in the spirit of the holiday season, the Bosses proceeded to build an ambitious fantasy shop. At Santa's suggestion, the Bosses designed their own little north pole. Right from the beginning, Dale and Marilyn realized they were going to need the help of elves, lots of them. So, inspired by children's stories she had read through the years, Marilyn Boss designed a cast of characters. Each and every year since 1986 the workload for the elves has increased, consequently more elves have been employed. Presently the Charlevoix Santa Shop is up to a 175-elf operation.

The Boss' property at the corner of Mount McSaub and Maple Streets is an ideal location for the Christmas display. The large well-decorated A-frame home provides just the right back drop. Covering three lots, the spacious lawn gives the elves enough room to separate into groups and work comfortably. The elves appear to get along well with each other. This season they have been joined by a brilliantly lit big bird. The bird is four-feet wide and 12-feet high and towers above the elves.

The big bird, elves and various holiday settings are not only illuminated with lights, but are also surrounded by pleasant Christmas music. The display attracts hundreds of people every year - many of them are families with young children. In addition to the many people who drive past the display, some people also get out of their cars so they can get face to face with the elves. Elves in the display are very dependable, standing strong and secure in all kinds of weather.

Each Christmas Eve, two moving Santa Clauses pass out pieces of candy to children who visit the display. Prior to that, local kindergarten and nursery school students visit the display.

The whole spectacle, from A to Z, is put together by Dale and Marilyn Boss. They design, build and erect the elves and install the light and sound systems. They do all the work, pay all the bills and enjoy themselves immensely.

Due to the scope of the project, the display isn't just a seasonal endeavor. In the summer time, Marilyn works on four by eight sheets of plywood, designing and using a jigsaw to cut out various characters. After being cut out, they are painted, sealed and weatherized.

Big bird was a project above and beyond normal elf construction. Marilyn Boss joined two pieces of plywood, painted the bird's feathers and then drilled 1,050 holes to hold small light bulbs. Big bird's design and creation was a four-day project for Marilyn Boss.

Although they have never counted, the Bosses estimate there are more than 4,000 light bulbs and numerous spot lights in the display. When the A-frame house was built, only the normal number of circuits were installed. The Christmas display is now approaching the point where the elves, bird etc. are drawing all the power the house system can provide.

had promised May a higher salary as a means of enticing him to run for prosecutor.

"It was talked about, but nothing was promised," Johnson said. Johnson later said that he had talked with May about the prosecutor's salary before May decided to run for prosecutor. "I didn't promise him anything, but I told him I had no problem with a higher salary," Johnson said.

Lieberman said later, "If they even talked about it, it means they negotiated with Richard." He added, "It may not be illegal but it you're giving them a benefit, I just don't see how that can be stripped."

A new resolution was tentatively agreed upon that will maintain retirement benefits for retired, full time employees. Present retired commissioners will receive benefits but not their dependents. Present employees will receive benefits upon retirement and their dependents will receive benefits according to the formula based on years of service. Future employees will not receive any retirement benefits. The new proposal will be drafted and ready for a vote at the Dec. 30 commission meeting.

Commissioner Walt Hufford, who will be replaced by Gillespie in January, said of the new proposed resolution, "Personally, I don't like it much more than the original one five years ago. You still have an unknown amount of unfunded liability. It hasn't been dealt with properly because you still don't know what it's going to cost."

Smith replied to Hufford, "We're looking for the light at the end of the tunnel. This is a step to-certainly is unethical to negotiate county taxpayer's money without an open forum or public meeting."

Commissioner Don Smith said the higher salary was justified because May would be doing work on the sheriff's department deputies' new contract. When asked if May's work on a deputy contract might be a conflict of interest since the deputies backed May in his campaign for prosecutor, Smith said that May would only be helping with the wording of the contract. "There are language issues and there are economic issues," Smith said of the contract negotiations. When Smith was then asked if May's help with some contract wording was worth an additional $7,000 a year he said, "He could be involved in economic negotiations too."

There is no formal agreement between the county and Richard May regarding his help with the contract negotiations. "It's possible that he may do nothing with the deputies' contract," commissioner Carl Price said after the meeting.

The prosecutor's salary was discussed and agreed upon by the commissioners at a special committee-of-the-whole meeting held the day after Thanksgiving. Public notice of the meeting was posted at the county annex building the Wednesday before Thanksgiving which satisfied the 18 hour advance notice requirement. No one from the public or the press attended the meeting.

A public hearing was held before the commissioners voted to adopt the 1993 county budget. During public comment Wednesday, South Arm Township supervisor Harold Pleitz said of the prosecutor's salary, "As far as I'm concerned, they (elected officials) should come in at a lower rate. I find it very objectionable. You should run for this office knowing what the salary is."

Commissioner Walt Hufford said, "I think we should pay for the job, not the person. The job is worth $60,000." Lieberman agreed earlier that the job was worth $60,000, and had been worth $60,000 while he was holding the position.

Both Lieberman and May turned in budget proposals for the 1993 prosecutor's office. Lieberman said that he set the prosecutor's salary at $48,000, based on the premise that new employees start at a lower salary and work their way up. He said that May's submitted budget included a salary of $72,000. "I don't think you'll find a case where a person comes in higher than their predecessor," Lieberman said.

OPINIONS

Editorial

Neither former nor current county commissioners should receive tax funded health care benefits

Whose interests are the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners serving? Theoretically, they are supposed to be serving the interests of the public, the people who elected them. But some actions of the board in recent years, months and weeks lead one to wonder whether the board is serving the interests of the public or serving the interests of county board members.

Many county taxpayers may not be aware of it, but in addition to paying meeting fees and mileage reimbursement to county commissioners, taxpayers are also paying health benefits for county commissioners. Generally speaking, county commissioners consider themselves as part-time county employees. But for health benefit purposes, they've decided they should be treated like full-time employees. This doesn't happen in the private sector and for that matter, in most other governmental units, it doesn't happen in the public sector. In fact, in northern Michigan, health benefits for part-time elected officials is for the most part limited to county officials. Apparently, county commissioners find themselves to be somewhat more deserving than the people they are elected to serve. And you thought that Revolutionary War thing rid the continent of a ruling elite.

About six years ago, it dawned on county commissioners that they weren't going to be able to stay in office forever. Being out of office was one thing, but losing taxpayer funded health care benefits was another. In order to stay in the taxpayers' pocket even after leaving office, county commissioners voted to extend county funded health care benefits not only to "retired" county commissioners, but to their dependents as well. How they got by with that without a taxpayer revolt remains a mystery.

RECENTLY, current county commissioners have been grappling with a proposal to terminate county health benefits to "retired" county commissioners and their dependents. They've debated this issue off and on for the better part of the past year, but they haven't acted. One of the things which held them up last week was the argument that it would be unfair to take away benefits from people already receiving them. On the surface, that sounds like a reasonable position, but a little investigation makes it clear that current commissioners should terminate these benefits without qualms because the benefits should never have granted in the first place.

According to information from the County Clerk's office the board of commissioners that approved county funded health care benefits for "retired" commissioners was made up of Don Smith, Lee Moerland, Ralph Harmon, Larry Matthew, Tom Breaky and Oral Sutliff. "Retired" commissioners currently receiving county funded health care benefits are Lee Moerland, Ralph Harmon, Larry Matthew and Tom Breaky. (Smith is still on the board. Sutliff was replaced on the board by Phil Johnson in 1988 and was appointed to a position with the County Transit department.)

What it boils down to is that former board members put self-interest above the public interest in passing a benefit that only they would benefit from. They should not have done that. Current board members should not only revoke county funded health care benefits for "retired" commissioners without qualms, but they should also stop county funding of health care benefits for current commissioners. The position of county commissioner is part-time. It should not be seen as a matter of employment, but as a matter of public service. The term "retired" commissioner makes no sense. You retire from full-time employment, not part-time public service.

It's very peaceful in this little corner of the world. Walk down town at night and the red and green Christmas tree lights shine brightly in the park. The trees along Bridge Street are lassoed with a circle of white lights, and the stores look festive and inviting. Many homes are lovingly decorated with a variety of twinkling, blinking red and white lights.

All this week there have been holiday functions to attend. The Historical Society had a lively dinner at the Argonne. The Chamber of Commerce had its annual award party at the Grey Gables. Vacation Properties hosted its usual elbow to elbow affair in its office, and there are many more celebrations planned right up to Christmas. That's what life is like in LaLaLand, as my visiting children call Charlevoix.

One would never guess in the starchy stillness of our town that all is not well with the world. It's a shock to come home and turn on the TV and see the man-made devastation, the deadly fighting, the slow starvation — not only in Somalia, but in what we used to call Yugoslavia, now Bosnia. Change channels and one is faced with Irish bombings in England, burning cas-

Life saved through CPR

By Laurie Lounsbury

Mike Pearsall has already given one wonderful gift this holiday season. Pearsall gave Agnes Olson the chance to keep on living.

Pearsall was in Mariner's Laundry and Dry Cleaners at Captain's Corner, Nov. 1 when the 69-year-old Olson crumpled to the floor. Pearsall immediately began performing CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) on Olson. While Pearsall was doing chest compressions and mouth to mouth breathing for Olson, he asked another customer to call for help. Pearsall continued to work on Olson until Bob Roloff of the City ambulance department arrived.

"I don't know how long it took, I was just counting compressions," Pearsall said when he recalled the incident. Pearsall and Roloff estimated that Pearsall probably performed CPR for at least ten minutes.

Olson is doing well now with an automatic, implantable, cardioverter defibrillator. Olson apparently didn't collapse with a heart attack at the laundromat. She had sudden death syndrome, where her heart simply stopped beating. Olson's daughter, Karen Dickinson, said that the implant has gone off once, signalling that her mother's heart stopped beating again, but the device kicked in and restarted her heartbeat.

Pearsall, the school maintenance supervisor, received his CPR training through Charlevoix Heartstart when they were giving classes at the high school. Patty Sitzema of Charlevoix Heartstart presented Pearsall with a plaque in appreciation for his courageous actions. The plaque reads, "It takes someone with a big heart to intervene to save the life of a stranger." Sitzema also gave him a new Charlevoix Heartstart T-shirt that was designed specifically for Pearsall. The T-shirt says on the front, "Charlevoix Heartstart, CPR saves Lives." Sitzema said that the new T-shirts are for sale, and all proceeds will be used to buy an infant Annie for the Charlevoix Heartstart CPR classes. Anyone interested in buying a T-shirt may contact Sitzema at 547-6548.

...we need to restore hope

ties, and the marriage mess in the once stable royal family. Change channels and the domestic news reports earthquakes in California, tornadoes in the midwest and hurricanes in Florida, leaving innocent people homeless.

I used to wonder every morning when I woke up and walked to my kitchen, what it might be like to be homeless — without a piece of toast or hot cup of coffee, or without the ritual of reading the morning paper. What's it really like not to be able to turn up the heat — take a shower — and put on clean clothes? What's it like not to get the daily mail or receive a phone call? Now I wonder even more what's it like not to be able to market because there is no food? Not to be able to turn on a light because there is no electricity. Not to know if a loved one is alive or dead?

Restore Hope is the code word for our aid in Somalia. Perhaps this should be our prayer this year for all the suffering people overseas and at home. We need to restore hope to the homeless and unemployed in Michigan too. Good people who have been laid off through no fault of their own, we need to restore hope to reduce genuine wasteful practices in our government offices as outlined in the Grace report. We need to restore hope to the uninsured sick who cannot afford medical attention. We need to restore hope to our youth so they can be educated in a drug/gun free society to compete in the world market. And most of all we need to restore hope that we may leave this world a better place for all people to live in peace and freedom. It may not be LaLaLand, but close to it!

Performing Arts students compete in pentathlon

Charlevoix High School Performing Arts pentathlon team returned from an Ann Arbor competition with several trophies. John Parish received a first in dramatic interpretation. Mindy Noiro a first in story telling.

The idea in the pentathlon is to be well-rounded in all events not necessarily to receive all ones. For example, Parish, Mindy Noiro and Liz Browe all received the same rank yet Liz received no firsts.

The pentathlon consists of five different events. Students chose readings from story telling, prose, poetry, dramatic interpretation and humorous. The top six receive trophies.

"All the kids did marvelous," said coach Connie Ford.

The pentathlon team consisted of Kim Solomon, John Parish, Mindy Noiro, Keith Parish, Paul Keehan, Liz Browe, Jesse Wheat, Colleen Slattery, Wendy Jacobs, Megan Crain, Ellen McKinney and David Skeel.

Debate teams have also completed their league competition.

The varsity team of Nancy Dammann, Dorsey Sherman, Megan Bickerseth, Amber Phillips and John Parish received a first. Dammann received a first speaker in the division and Sherman received a third speaker in the division. John Parish was named all conference. An all conference award is given to each team. Only the top three speakers are recognized. The team came in third in their division with eleven wins and five losses.

The second varsity team was Kaylee Manker, Bethany Martinus, Lisa Berths, Angela Buday, Mark Schairbaum, and Becca Chamberlain. Schairbaum received a third speaker award and Manker received all conference recognition.

In the novice division, Allison Beatty was named all conference.

FAMILY

Gagnon - Drapeau

Michelle Gagnon and Edward Drapeau were married August 29 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Reverend James Gardiner performed the double ring rites witnessed by 125 wedding guests.

The bride is the daughter of John and Carol Gagnon of Charlevoix and the groom is the son of Armand and Anita Drapeau of East Jordan.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a satin gown featuring a low V-neckline in front and back, a fitted basque bodice embellished with pearls, sequins and bugle beads, and Juliet sleeves accented with large satin bows, lace and pearls. The cathedral length train was enhanced with window-pane lace and the entire hem was edged with lace. The bride carried a colonial bouquet of white and burgundy rosebuds accented with galax and ivy.

Cris Cunningham served as maid of honor and Leslie Cunningham was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Cheryl Gagnon and Mary Beth Gagnon, sisters of the bride, and Carol Drapeau, sister-in-law of the groom. Each of the attendants wore long, black and white dresses. They each carried a single long stemmed white rose with baby's breath.

Flower girl was Kristina Drapeau who wore a white dress with a black satin collar and bow.

Best man was Louis Drapeau, brother of the groom. Groomsman were Jay Peck, Charlie Drapeau, brother of the groom, Michale Graham and James Moeller. Helping seat the wedding guests were David Gagnon, brother of the bride and Brad Poirie.

Michelle Drapeau

Organist was Don Neiderl. A reception for 250 guests took place at the Knights of Columbus hall in Petoskey. It was given by the parents of the bride and assisted by Laura Christensen, sister of the groom, and Gail Addy, aunt of the bride.

The rehearsal dinner was August 28 at Alexander's Restaurant in Charlevoix, hosted by the parents of the groom.

The newlyweds spent their honeymoon on a trip through the mountains of northern New York

Decorating the halls for the holidays

Charlevoix Fourth Graders were on the receiving end of a recent act of generosity. A large, gift wrapped box appeared in Mrs. Chew's class, with a Christmas card that read, "Dearest All, With the first 24 days of December being the longest days of the year, it is hoped that this gift helps them go by quickly. This box contains the world's best way to occupy your time. Never stop believing in yourself. Never stop believing in each other. Bill." The gift-bearing Bill was none other than Bill Parton, his wife Bea, and son Bill, a former student of Mrs. Chew's.

Mrs. Chew's fourth graders carefully opened the package that stood nearly as tall as themselves. Inside, they discovered a beautifully crafted, gingerbread style wooden house. Tin soldiers guarding the doors swung open to reveal bookshelves filled with Christmas books. The selection of hard bound books was geared for every reading level to please any child. One beautifully illustrated book told its entire story with pictures, needing no words to relay its charming message. Another book, entitled Christmas in America, is filled with photographs of different Christmas traditions in America.

Beacons of Blessings Church to present Christmas program

by REV. LOWELL ANDERSON

Every name on our list of guests at Christmas time is significant because this will probably be the biggest and best celebration we'll host all year. It's a very special time; so preparation is detailed and elaborate. As we painstakingly prepare we check the list again... are all the special friends and loved ones included... did we forget anyone?

The Advent season is a time of special celebration with those who are most dear to us. The significance of the painstaking preparation lies not in the celebrating, but in the people with whom we celebrate.

I think it is significant to notice the "guest list" of those the Heavenly Father invited to celebrate the birth of Christ. If our guest list for the Advent celebration is important, His must have been also.

In Luke 2:8-20 we are told that Angels brought an invitation to that first Advent celebration to a group of Bedouin shepherds. And how appropriate that they should be on the guest list. To them came the announcement that Christ was born The Savior! Christ's birth was announced to "common men" because they symbolize the truth that Christ came as the SAVIOR TO ALL.

It is likewise significant that the Wise men should be on God's guest list. The Magi are representative of the wealthy and powerful. They were invited by a guiding star to celebrate the birth of the King! (Matt. 2:1&2) And so, to men of status and authority, Christ is born King of Kings. Christ's birth was announced to "noblemen" because they symbolize the truth that Christ was born as LORD OF ALL.

Yes, the Christmas guest list is important. There is special significance attached to everyone on the list... on our list... on God's list. God had carefully planned and prepared for the event of the ages! The celebration had to be just right, shared and enjoyed with just the right people! And so it was: "GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST, AND ON EARTH PEACE TO MEN ON WHOM HIS FAVOR RESTS!" Luke 2:14 NIV.

Charlevoix students get with the program

K-5 school now has a computer in every class

By L. Scott Swanson

(Editor's note: This story is the first in a series concerning computerization efforts in the Charlevoix School System. Although the initial intention was to do this in one story, an abundance of information makes it necessary to present this in multiple stories. This story addresses computerization at the K-5 school. Subsequent stories will discuss computerization at the Middle and High schools.)

Information is knowledge. Knowledge is power. We give our children knowledge so they will have the power to make the world of the future a better place.

A short anecdote as related by K-5 principal Vane Smith:

One day Smith was watching a third grade student working on a computer hooked up to a CD ROM. (A CD ROM is a disk which contains massive amounts of information.) As he watched, Smith wondered just exactly what kind of information the kid could find out on this computer. So he gave the kid a topic - dogs. The kid tapped the keyboard and brought up a list of various kinds of dogs. I've got springer spaniels, Smith told the kid. Tap, tap, tap. The kid used the keyboard again and within seconds the computer screen was full of information about springer spaniels. And it was pretty interesting information. Run me off a copy of that, Smith said. No problem, the kid ordered the computer to print and within minutes the information was in hand.

In 1991, people involved with the Charlevoix school district looked things over and discovered that in terms of the use of computers in education, the Charlevoix School System needed to do more to get with the program.

So the school asked voters for about $500,000 dollars to buy computers and other technological equipment. Even though taxpayers have been pretty close with a buck these past few years, that was one tax increase which passed. In election speak - voters approved a request for .59 of a mill for three years by a vote of 399 to 303.

Now we're moving up on 1993 and as a taxpayer it's reasonable to ask - Hey, remember that half million we agreed to cough up for school computers. What happened there? Did they get some computers and are those teachers and kids using those things?

Every Charlevoix student in the first through fifth grades now spends at least half an hour a week in the computer lab, plus whatever time they can get on the computer back in their regular classroom. The K-5 school now has an Apple computer, either an LC or a IIGS, and a printer in every classroom. There are also about a dozen computers in the computer lab and there are two on order for the learning center and another computer ordered for the library. Kindergarten-ers are exposed to the computers a little bit, but the real computer education effort begins in first grade.

And not only are the kids learning to use the computers, so are the teachers. Most of the K-5 computers which had been purchased by last June got a summer vacation. They were all sent home with teachers. The teachers' mission - Learn to use these things.

Judy Crook, Cathy Silberhorn, Karen Pierce, Mary Beth McGraw and Pat Miller are among the teachers who have led the K-5 computerization push. Crook teaches in the computer lab; Silberhorn, Pierce and Miller teach in general classrooms and McGraw is the art teacher.

"The kids love it," Crook said of the computers. "Computer education is very active and it's colorful."

Pierce said the kids get a quick response from a computer. If they do something wrong, they find out right away and can correct the problem. If they do something right, they know it and immediately feel a sense of accomplishment. As an example, she cited the dictionary which is included in the computer's writing program. At first glance, a person might wonder if having the computer there to correct spelling errors causes children to neglect to learn how to spell. But in most cases, just the opposite occurs. If a kid botches a word, he finds out right away and is also immediately told how to spell it correctly. And does being corrected by a computer make a kid gun-shy about trying new words. Nope. Again, just the opposite. Kids feel free to experiment with larger words because they know they can use the computer to get the word right.

Pierce also noted that learning center students who may be having trouble learning a particular topic in a normal classroom setting often do well on the computer. It works with them one-to-one at whatever pace they're comfortable. Pierce noted that some of the learning center kids have become so proficient on the computer that they're now able to help other kids.

Getting the students to use the computers hasn't been a problem. "With the kids, it's not the fear of using, but wanting to get into (on the computer)," McGraw said.

K-5 teachers are using the K-5 computer lab instructor, Judy Crook looks over fifth grade student Jeremy Antaya's shoulder and helps him work through a brief computer hang-up.

computers to teach science, reading, art, math and word processing (which prior to the age of computers was simply called writing). Although the Apple computers have a mouse, the primary means of communicating with the computer is a keyboard. That being the case, the school also has a keyboarding program. As an adult walking into an elementary computer class, one of the first things that strikes you is that unless you're an adult who uses a computer or typewriter in your job, odds are that within a few years the average 12-year-old will type far better than you do.

While the computer is useful as a teaching tool, it is also useful for teachers in record keeping. Silberhorn said she's tried some record keeping on her classroom computer and does all of her parent communication letters on the computer.

Silberhorn and Crook offer an interesting perspective on the Apple versus IBM debate because they have used both. In regard to the IBM - Apple debate, the K-5 and Middle schools chose Apples because staff members felt there are more educational programs available and Apples are easier to use. At the high school students are using IBMs because IBMs and computers similar to IBMs are more common in the business world.

Although computers are able to help teachers in some ways, in other ways they also make teaching more challenging. When several kids are on the computers, it's possible for them to not only all be working on different things, but to be working at different rates of speed on different things.

When a group of fifth graders came into the K-5 computer lab last Wednesday morning, they hit the class flying. Within minutes all of the computers were fired up and in use. In one corner of the room, Tiffany Fisher was typing something for the school newspaper. Asked how she felt about the computers she gave an answer completely devoid of technical jargon. "They're pretty cool," she said. Next to Fisher, Lindsey Carland was typing a story about a visit to the Raven Hill science and nature center. In the far corner of the room, Ryan Vogelheim and Adam Wood both had intense looks on their faces as they collaborated on a project.

All of the kids went as fast and as far as their knowledge would carry them. When they got stuck, their hands popped up. Crook skipped from one raised hand to another. In a way, it kind of brought to mind a person playing that game where the gophers pop up and have to be bopped back down. That's what the scene brought to mind, but in this case there was a distinct difference. In the computer lab, the objective isn't to keep little gophers down. The objective is to let young minds rise to new heights.

While K-5 and Middle School students work on Apple computers, Jeremy Boss and other high school students are working on IBMs.

Basketball team opens season with two wins

Rayders rally from 18 down against Cheboygan and clobber Rogers City

Charlevoix's varsity basketball team rallied from 18 points down to beat Cheboygan 61-46 Tuesday, Dec. 8 and then pounded Rogers City 82-43 Friday, Dec. 11.

Opening their season in Cheboygan, the Raydors came out flat in the first half. At the end of the first quarter they trailed 17-10 and by halftime had fallen behind 35-19.

But the Raiders left their miseries in the locker room and came out like a new team in the second half. Forward Vince Voisin scored eight points in the third quarter and the confidence was contagious. Charlevoix got within three points at one time in the third quarter and trailed 44-37 entering the final quarter.

In the last eight minutes Big Mo as in Mo-men-tum, stayed with the Rayders. Don Jess scored with about four minutes left in the quarter to put Charlevoix up 47-46. After that it was all Charlevoix. Cheboygan mustered only 11 points for the entire second half and in the last four minutes of the game they were blanked completely.

Voisin, Jess and Brad DeGrow shared scoring honors, each with 12 points. David Steel added eight. DeGrow also had 14 rebounds and five blocked shots while Jason Psychopaidas, David Dobulis and Voisin each had six rebounds. Jess had five assists and four steals.

Cheboygan won the junior varsity game 70-48 despite 17 points by Charlevoix's Chuck Pon.

At home against Rogers City, early in the game it became apparent that the question was not if the Raydars would win, but by how much.

Jess, who had a nice year quarterbacking the Rayder football team, also accumulated a lot of passing yardage in the Rayder basketball home opener. Early in the game, Rogers City was in a full court man-to-man defense. With Jess inbounding the ball, the other four Rayders would line up at the defensive end and then one of them would fly deep for a long pass. In the opening quarter the play worked time and time again.

Defensively, the Rayders were also pressing. Rogers City had a strong team last season, but losses due to graduation have them rebuilding this season. Early in the game, Rogers City was breaking the Rayder press, but they looked frantic and it was only a matter of time before the turnovers began.

Charlevoix distributed the scoring evenly. Despite a team total of 82 points, only three players were in double figures. DeGrow had 14 points while Jess and Psihopaidas each had 11. DeGrow also had 14 rebounds and three blocked shots. Dobulis had six rebounds. Jess had six assists and four steals while Keith Carey had four assists and four steals.

This Friday evening Charlevoix is expected to face a stern test in hosting league foe Boyne City. The Ramblers also hammered Rogers City and then went to 2-0 with an overtime win at Petoskey.

Brad DeGrow (43) has led the Rayders in rebounding for both of their first two games. Why? Because he's not only tall, but has good hands and is aggressive. As teammate David Skeel (21) will attest.

Lieberman named Outstanding Citizen

Honored for life of civic involvement

With tears in his eyes, an overwhelmed Robert Lieberman accepted the Outstanding Citizen award from Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Jacqueline Merta. Merta presented the award at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Annual meeting last Thursday evening. Merta cited Lieberman's many contributions for the betterment of Charlevoix's youth and the community of Charlevoix. Lieberman was a driving force behind the creation of Mt. McSaubia, a charter member of the Charlevoix Lion's Club, and an original member of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority. Lieberman also served on the Board of Education for eight years and volunteered his time as a junior varsity football coach. Lieberman also served as President of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce for more terms than any other person in the history of the organization.

Other awards presented Thursday, included the President's Award which was given to James Wineman for his generosity and contributions to Charlevoix. He has supported Keep Charlevoix Beautiful and for the last six years has paid for the Charlevoix-Venetian float and the watering truck to be in the Detroit Thanksgiving Day Parade.

New dentist opens practice at Ferry Avenue office

Dr. Paramo plans to offer evening hours for customer convenience

By Laurie Lounsbury

If your favorite excuse for not going to the dentist is that you can't get there during office hours, then you don't have a good excuse anymore. Dr. Glen Paramo, a new dentist in Charlevoix, promises to maintain office hours until 6:30 p.m. or 7 p.m., weekdays as needed. He will also hold office hours on Saturdays. Paramo understands the problems working people have with scheduling dental appointments during their workday.

Paramo received his D.D.S. degree from the University of Michigan in 1990. He has been practicing in Onaway since his graduation. Paramo has vacationed in Charlevoix during the last ten years and wanted to open his own practice in this community.

Paramo's general practice includes preventive dentistry, caps, laminates, and bleaching. Louise Thompson, a local dental hygienist, is working with Paramo.

Paramo's office manager, Tina Mason, hopes to get involved with the school children in the community, teaching good dental habits. She is from Onaway and often gave a dental program for children there.

Paramo is offering a free initial examination for new patients. His office is located at 205 Ferry Avenue, and the phone number is 547-1100.

Dr. Glen Paramo with his office manager, Tina Mason. Paramo recently opened an office in Charlevoix after vacationing here for years.

DNR looking for killers of two elk

Michigan conservation officers are looking for the person or persons who shot an elk cow and calf and two deer fawns in eastern Charlevoix County just before Thanksgiving and left the animals at the site of a deer bait pile.

"We're offering a reward of $2,500 for information leading to the conviction of the people responsible for this wanton waste," said Lt. Harold Hammond of the Department of Natural Resources District 5 office at Gaylord. "We lose some elk every year during the deer hunting season, probably mistaken by hunters for deer, but people who would take this deliberate act are of a different mindset. We want to get them out of the woods."

Anyone with information about this incident may contact Lt. Hammond at 517-732-3541; Investigating Officer Tom Sweet at Boyne City 616-582-6878; Sgt. Jim Genc of Boyne City 616-582-2134; or the DNR's Report All Poaching (RAP) hotline, 1-800-292-7800. All information will be kept confidential.

Bank awards three shopping sprees

Charlevoix County State Bank has made three people's holiday shopping a bit easier by awarding them shopping sprees. The three winners were selected in a drawing which they registered for at the bank.

The winners this year were: Rollen Nichols, $250; Pat Smalley, $150; and Louise Potter, $100.

When this picture ran on the Scrapbook page last month we weren't sure who the hunters were or when the picture was taken. Members of the local Masonic Temple have offered some insight. The Masons have a larger version of the same photo on the mantel above the fireplace at the temple. In the top right corner of the picture is written 1897. At the bottom of the picture frame it looks like there was once a strip of tape. Perhaps the names of the hunters were written on the tape. Another old photo on the walls of the temple is dated 1912 and is a photo of the group's board at the time the building was constructed. One of the men in the 1912 photo looks somewhat similar to the man at the far right in the deer camp photo.

Volunteer fireman Barry Wood (right) describes to Charlevoix County State Bank President Francis Flanders how some of the rescue equipment on Engine 90 has been used by firemen. During the past several years firemen have provided manpower to assemble and disassemble exhibits at the Charlevoix County Industrial Fair which the bank sponsors. The bank has contributed money to equip Engine 90 with a variety of emergency equipment that firemen have used to extricate people from damaged vehicles.

Heavy November rains hold to trend

The Great Lakes basin received more than 1.5 times its monthly average precipitation during November. With the exception of October, above average precipitation has prevailed since July. November, the year-to-date precipitation for the basin is near average. The 30-day outlook published by the National Weather Service projects moderate to heavy precipitation in the Great Lakes region for the month of December.

The forecast, published in the Monthly Bulletin of Lake Levels for the Great Lakes, projects Lake Superior to be near its long-term average levels for the next six months while Lakes Michigan-Huron, St. Clair, Erie, and Ontario will likely remain above their long-term average levels.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows: All elevations are referenced to International Great Lakes Datum, 1985.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of November were at elevation 579.24 feet (179.55 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or 21 inches (53 cm.) above Chart Datum. This was about 6 inches (15 cm.) above what it was a year ago, and about 6 inches (15 cm.) above one month ago. The November monthly mean level of 579.13 feet (176.52 meters) was about 3 inches (8 cm.) above the long-term average for November. The lakes, however, remained about 34 inches (86 cm.) below their all-time high November monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that at the end of December, the level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 1 inch (3 cm.) below what it was at the end of November. The lakes are expected to continue their seasonal decline into February. The water level in May 1993, is expected to be about 8 inches (20 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, and about 11 inches (28 cm.) above what it was in 1992.

Middle School students go high-tech

By L. Scott Swanson

(Writer's note: This is the second in a series of three stories concerning computer education in the Charlevoix School System. In 1991 voters approved a tax increase of $500,000 spread over three years to pay for the purchase of computers and other technological equipment.)

It's a high-tech world. It's a high finance world. It is also sixth grade.

Recently, one of the assignments for Vince Chew's sixth grade computer lab class was to write a program which would calculate the effects of a varying interest rate on a loan payback. On this particular day, many of the students in the class had completed the assignment while others were still mopping up a few loose ends. The 24 Apple LCII computers in the class allow the students to work at their own varying rates of speed.

While the K-5 school is almost exclusively Apple and the High School IBMs, the Charlevoix Middle School system is predominantly Apple with plans to mix in a few IBMs sometime in the future.

Charlevoix Middle School encompasses the sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Chew, who teaches in the computer lab, and has coordinated the Middle School computer program, explained that the current school program gives sixth grade students seven weeks of work on the computers, seventh grade students no work on the computers and eighth grade students one semester (i.e. half of a year) on the computers.

Sixth grade students spend much of the seven-week session learning and refining their keyboard skills. Even though the Apples are mouse-equipped, the keyboard is still the main way of communicating with the computers.

John Chase pauses to explain a project he's working on in the Middle School computer lab. Chase and his sixth grade classmates are working on Apple LCII computers. In addition to working on the computers, the students have also worked with a still video camera and a scanner.

City council ponders fire truck options

New truck to cost about $200,000

The City Council received a micro course in fire truck engineering and design Monday evening. While the City plans to purchase a new fire truck soon, before they do there are still some details to be ironed out.

More than a year ago, the council appointed a committee to come up with specifications for a new City Fire Department truck. The truck, which is going to cost around $200,000 give or take a few thousand depending upon what options the City finally settles on, would replace a 1960's pumper truck and will be the first truck to respond to fires.

Money is in place to buy the truck, but members of the design committee still haven't reached agreement on some key design aspects. Those aspects include the size of the truck's engine, location of the pump control panel, water capacity and the design of a ladder rack.

Fire chief Doug Carver wants a truck with a 350 engine, a top mount control panel, a hydraulic ladder rack and can live with 750 gallons of water rather than 1,000. Volunteer Fire Department Captain Doug Bergmann and other committee members favor a larger engine, a side mount control panel, a ladder rack on rollers and feel strongly that the truck should carry 1,000 gallons of water.

Monday evening Carver and Bergmann both stated their cases before the council members who, if the committee can't agree, will ultimately make the decision.

Carver said the engine size is just a matter of money, approximately $4,000. He said that fire truck sales people and engine manufacturers he talked to told him, and ran computer models indicating, that a 350 engine will suffice for the needs of the Charlevoix Fire Department.

"I could live with either engine," he said. "We're just talking about saving some money."

Bergmann said the larger engine, a 450-horsepower model, is needed for fires in rural areas, particularly where there are hills.

Carver was more adamant about having a top mount rather than a side mount control panel because he feels that is a safety issue. Carver, who came to the Charlevoix Fire Department earlier this year, said he's used a top mount control panel with another department for six years and feels they are safer than trucks with side mount panels. He said he has also known other departments which have used top mount panels for 20 years and when they get a new truck, they always get top mounts again. Charlevoix's present pumper trucks are all side mounts.

Carver explained that he feels the top mount control panels are safer because they place the pump operator up where he can see 360 degrees around him rather than having his view blocked by the truck. He said the top mount panel also gets the pump operator up off the ground and out of the way of traffic.

The primary drawback to a top mount truck is that it requires lengthening the wheel base of the truck and consequently making it less maneuverable in tight places. It

Middle School students collect thousands of cans of food again

(From front) Nick Bogart, Annie Campbell and Amy Kujawski sort through some of the thousands of cans of food the Middle School collects during its holiday community service project.

Charlevoix Middle School students concluded their annual holiday food drive this past Tuesday collecting thousands of cans of food which were donated to the Community Food Pantry program. This was the drive's eleventh year.

Sixth through eighth grade students who participated in the drive were competing for pizza parties and the coveted "Golden Corn" award, an empty corn can stuck on a trophy base.

Even with the glamour and prestige of the Golden Corn award, the students note that there are higher reasons for the drive.

Eighth grade student Nick Bogart, one of the top food collectors, was asked why he participated in the drive and replied: "To help the community and those who are less fortunate than we are."

Last year Bogart, Annie Campbell and Amy Kujawski collected a total of about 1,800 cans of food.

The total amount of food collected last year was loaded into two school buses. Middle school teacher Tom Sothard, who coordinates the program, said that entering the final days of this year's drive things were going well. He said the kids were enthusiastic about the drive due to the situation in Somalia and needs all over. In addition to collecting the food, the students also help load and unload it. Sothard said that takes a couple of hours.

Santa gets all the hype, but it's the elves who work in the trenches

(Editor's note: The following story is one in a series of stories the Courier is doing this holiday season about people and projects working to bring joy to others.)

By Laurie Lounsbury

Santa may capture the limelight during the holiday season, but it's the hard-working elves behind the scenes that make it all possible. Tonia Zellers is one elf who does her best to put gifts under all the trees in Charlevoix. Zellers is the chief elf with the Charlevoix Christmas Elves, a group that provides Christmas presents for children in need. Zellers has a group of 19 elves who buy Christmas presents for all the children in a family that they sponsor. The sponsors may be businesses or individuals. "It's all totally anonymous," Zellers said. Gifts are wrapped and labeled by the sponsoring elf after Zellers provides the sponsor with the names, sizes, and interests of the children. Zellers personally delivers all of the gifts to insure anonymity. She is the only one who knows the names of the recipients and the names of the sponsor elves.

Last year, Zellers and her fellow elves gave presents to 30 children. This year Zellers' list of kids has grown to 40. "Last year was a big year, and this year is a really big year," Zellers said.

Zellers has already delivered presents to seven families. One single father was home with his four-year-old son when Zellers arrived with the gifts. "He just lit up," Zellers said of the four-year-old. "It is just a real thrill to see it."

Zellers gets extra help from her five-year-old son, Jason Wells. Jason provides expert advice on gift selection for other kids.

If Zellers ends up with any last minute donations she buys food and extra gifts for families and wraps them herself. "We're out to help the kids," Zellers said of Charlevoix Christmas Elves.

Toni Zellers and her son, Jason Wells, recently received a $100 contribution from First State Bank of Charlevoix via Santa Claus.

Tree commission revitalized

Three members of the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission are hoping to make the group more active in the long-range planning of planting trees in Charlevoix.

Bob Irving, Barbara MacArthur and John Gaskin say they would like to see the City accelerate tree planting, improve tree-pruning and removal, diversify the species of trees planted, participate in the Liberty Elm program, and organize an Arbor Day project.

"A lot of people don't realize how important trees are to our ecology," MacArthur said.

Gaskin noted that there "has to be a consciousness build up" concerning the value of trees to the community.

Irving is particularly enthusiastic about the Liberty Elm program. The nationwide program which works in conjunction with the Boy Scouts is revitalizing America's elm tree population after it suffered devastating effects from disease in the early 1970s.

"I think it's important for people to know that the elms are on the way back," Irving said.

The Shade Tree Commission would like to see community citizens participate in planting efforts

Prosecutor blasts County Board

(Editor's note: The following letter was initially written as a letter to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and subsequently submitted to Charlevoix Courier.)

Gentlemen of the Board:

I have expressed my opinion, to no apparent avail, about your incredible decision to raise the salaries of the new prosecutor and his assistant by 14 percent or more, while granting all other county employees a maximum four percent raise, and simultaneously cutting some of their benefits.

The air about the Commissioners' Room currently abounds with rancid deceit and discriminatory political favoritism that is totally offensive to me and should be to any taxpaying citizen.

Gentlemen, I served this State for 14 and a-half years as a public prosecutor, nine of which were in this, my home county. My assistant, Ms. Karen Neumeier has served for over five years. Despite this wealth of experience, we were never given more than the traditional three percent to four percent pay raises that all county employees had grown to expect. Although every year I requested raises by way of budget increases or separate communications with the Board, the requests were always denied.

Now, the newly elected prosecutor, Mr. May, has been awarded a 14 percent pay raise. His yet-to-be-named assistant has been given a similar or greater raise. This has been done despite the fact that Mr. May has not practiced criminal law in over 14 years and despite the fact that the incoming assistant is a totally unknown quantity.

Precisely what is it that causes the Commissioners to raise the salaries of those we know little or nothing of, while limiting the salaries of those who have served us dutifully for years? In essence, gentlemen, you have decided to pay a new, inexperienced employee and his unknown assistant grant raises, while compelling proven and devoted employees to plod along at a four percent raise. It must be noted that when Prosecuting Attorney Diane Smith was elected in neighboring Emmet County, she was given a reduction in pay.

The deceit that was involved in this decision is obvious. Although you all approved the decision, I know you were not all the genesis of it. Commissioner Johnson and Commissioner Smith both acknowledged that undeclared candidate May had been "talked to" about a big pay raise. I was never given this courtesy, never told such a blessing was in the offing. More importantly, no one else who may have chosen to run for the job was told of the potential largess. For all we know, several other attorneys may have decided to run for the job if they knew what the financial terms were to be. But, potential other candidates, as well as myself, were never given this "inside" information. The futures of several professionals in the area may have been effected by the Board's unveiled "talks" about salary increases.

Commissioner Johnson claims he only "talked to" potential candidate May and that there were no guarantees. First of all, why did this Commissioner talk only to Mr. May and not me or other attorneys? Secondly, if there were no strong suggestions of the delivery of a greater salary, then why has Mr. May publicly acknowledged that the salary talks effected his decision to run? I suggest the answer is obvious.

Of extreme importance is the fact that the voters of this County were not made aware that the prosecutor's job might carry a large salary increase if a particular candidate was elected over another. This year, many people voted their pocketbooks and it is possible that the knowledge that the incumbents would be paid less than the newcomers, may have changed the way some people voted. But the voters and taxpayers weren't aware that there was a behind-the-scenes deal struck. Now the voters are apparently stuck with paying large salary increases to an unproven prosecutor and an unknown assistant. It would appear that the only voters who went to the polls with this knowledge were the successful candidate and his cohorts. It was a very well kept secret.

The picture that unfolds here, gentlemen, is that one candidate, and only one, knew of the potential pay raises. I was never told of this, and certainly other potential candidates in the community were not informed. More importantly, the voters and taxpayers were not informed.

It is my personal and legal opinion that those on the Board who engaged in this deceitful action have blatantly defrauded the taxpayers of this county. If those involved felt differently, they surely would have discussed pay raises with me or other potential candidates openly and made the voters aware of their plans.

One question I asked of the Board on Wednesday, December 9, 1992, was whether I and my assistant would have received the hefty pay raises if reelection had been won? No one would respond to my question. Later, after the public meeting, Commissioner Smith told me that I would probably not have received a raise over the standard four percent. That, coupled with Mr. May's acknowledgement that the salary increase effected his decision to run for election, clearly

County should repeal new prosecutor raise

At their Dec. 30 meeting the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners should reconsider and rescind their previous action giving incoming prosecutor Richard May a $7,440 pay raise. They must act Dec. 30. The new prosecutor officially takes office Jan. 1. Once he takes office, the commissioners can't reduce the salary for the duration of his four year term.

Commissioners acted inappropriately when prior to the election some of them discussed increasing the prosecutor's salary with May when he was considering becoming a candidate. One would suspect this played a role in his decision to run. If commissioners were going to consider raising the prosecutor's salary, that's something they should have been discussing in the open at board meetings. (And not at special board meetings called at the last minute for the day after Thanksgiving when the County Building is closed and nobody from the public or press is around. No, things should be discussed in the open with members of the public present.)

By discussing the salary increase with only one candidate, and subsequently raising the prosecutor's salary from $52,560 to $60,000 when that candidate won, what commissioners did was use public funds to influence an election. And they kept the public in the dark about this election information until after the election. In other words, commissioners kept voters in the dark about a proposed, or perhaps planned, use of tax funds which might have affected those voters' decision at the polls. That's inexcusable.

To mitigate this, the commissioners should rescind the proposed prosecutor salary increase of 14 percent. They can either leave the prosecutor salary where it is or perhaps increase it at four percent the same as for other county departments.

This is not a comment on May's abilities as prosecutor. May might turn out to be either a good or a bad prosecutor. The jury's still out. He hasn't even served his first day in office. Commissioners should take at the very least take a year to analyze May's performance. If he's good, fine then perhaps a salary increase is in order. But let's not be granting salary increases for political purposes and quietly using tax funds to influence elections. That's nothing but wrong.

...board criticized

indicates that any pay raise was earmarked for one candidate only. In essence, certain Board members, by secret misuse of taxpayers' money, have imposed their individual political views on an unwitting public. The newly enacted prosecutor's office raises will approximate $14,000. This money was "talked about" behind the scenes, without public knowledge, and was later authorized only to satisfy the personal demands of a friend of certain commissioners to induce him to run. As a county employee, a citizen, and a taxpayer this secret action is unconscionable.

An additional issue that the Board must address is the sexually discriminatory aspect of this pay raise decision. In the past, whenever a female department head came into office, she was required to start at a lower pay scale, regardless of her experience or merit as a worker. Are these employees considered lesser in your eyes? It would appear so, since gender is the only notable reason for the discrepancy in the historical treatment the Board has displayed. Various of the female department heads have already approached me to discuss the apparent discriminatory and arbitrary nature of your decision to raise the pay of a new male department head. Future legal action would not surprise me, appears merited, and should be something that concerns you.

The Board has offered two very feeble reasons for justifying the prosecutor's new raises. The first reason is that they feel the job is worth it. I agree, that the job is worth it for an experienced, proven prosecutor, but not for an attorney who has not practiced this aspect of the law for 14 to 15 years, and certainly a raise can't be justified for any unknown, newcomer assistant.

If the job is now worth a 14 percent raise, then why wasn't it worth it a year ago? Or two years ago? Or five years ago? Commissioner Johnson's lame excuse that this is a new Board is an idiotic explanation. The same Board that approved the increase has been in place for two years, and many members, including Johnson, for more than that, yet every attempt I ever made to increase the wages of my office were rebuffed.

The second excuse the Board gave was that Mr. May has given the new duties of working on the deputies' contract for the county. This is nothing but a sham excuse trying to justify the voter-unapproved increase in salary. As the chief law enforcement officer of the county, who relies daily on the deputies for support, many of whom actively endorsed Mr. May, how can the county expect contract advocacy? The conflict of interest is apparent.

Additionally, the Board cites the fact that they had to pay a private attorney $15,000 to negotiate the last deputies' contract. Well, that may be true, but now they have obligated themselves to pay $20,000 over the next four years, while at the same time they are asking him to only "review language" and not actually negotiate? O.K., now if I have this straight, the Board has approved more money than it paid before for everything, just to have the prosecutor "review language" while someone else must be hired to negotiate it?

Finally, and above all else, is how your decision impacts the other employees of the county. For years, you have treated them with outright disrespect and disinterest. I have been in a position to witness this and have marveled at their restraint in confronting the unfairness they have endured. You have people working for you who have served for many years and who have proven their worth time and again, yet now they must endure the further insult of watching new prosecutorial employees begin service with astronomical raises, while they must settle for the traditional four percent raise. How can you look them in the eyes and tell them their years of service are nothing compared to the unknowns coming in? I am astounded by the logic that proven, valuable employees are being denied the simple courtesy of being treated equally with new employees. And you have the temerity to suggest that there was no politics behind the decision to raise the prosecutor's pay.

The Board has not only insulted county employees with the discriminatory and arbitrary pay raise discrepancies, the Board has further denigrated its employees by reducing benefits. It takes no stretch of the imagination to figure the money saved by reducing these benefits will now go into the new prosecutor's budget, as "talked about." The Board's decision is the first step (perhaps better said, the last step) towards unionization of county employees to insure equal treatment.

Gentlemen, as perhaps my last advice to you as legal counsel, I strongly urge you to treat all your employees equally. They deserve the same respect and consideration as do your special interests and your personal friends. You are in elected positions of trust and should be looking out for the interests of all your employees and the taxpayers of this County. Secret discussions with any potential political candidate which involves the eventual commitment of public funds should never occur. The public deserves to know what their elected officials are doing with their money.

Sincerely,
Kraig C. Lieberman

Boy receives award for smelling smoke and waking family before home burns

By Laurie Lounsbury

Four year old Andrew Levitski-Wells awoke to the smell of smoke in the early morning hours of November 23. He quickly made his way upstairs to wake the rest of the family to tell them of the smoke. Because of Andrew's actions, a smoldering couch was removed from the house before a fire started.

Sheriff George Lasater presented Levitski with a Citizen's Award for his actions, telling him that he was a hero. Because he acted quickly, his family was able to extinguish the fire themselves without having to call the fire department.

The couch had caught on fire from a cigarette that fell in between the cushions. Andrew's mother Fran Levitski doused the couch with pans of water after it was removed from the house. Levitski said that the smoldering couch filled the downstairs with smoke. She also said that the smoke alarms in the home didn't go off, probably because the batteries were dead.

Lasater said after presenting the award, "It's nice to be able to recognize positive things." When Levitski was asked if he understood what was happening, he turned and said to his mom, "I got an award for saving us."

St. Mary's completes remodeling project

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, December 23, 1992 - PAGE 7

After almost 30 years, St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix is complete.

A $180,000 capital improvement project recently completed at the church, which included extensive interior work and upgraded energy efficiency, represented not so much a remodeling as a continuation of the process that began when the church was planned and built in the 1960s.

"What we wanted to do with this project was build on the church's past, not discard it," said St. Mary's pastor, Father James Gardiner. "The result is that we were able to retain the architectural character of the structure, while adding several features that will make it a more modern, comfortable and worshipful parish home."

The church refurbishment represented the first phase of a three-part capital improvement program at St. Mary's dubbed Fulfillment '94. The next two phases, to be completed by 1994, will involve improvements to St. Mary's Elementary School, the rectory and convent. Fulfillment '94 was initiated in 1991 when a special planning committee of parish members was convened by Fr. Gardiner.

Much of the church renovation was aimed at bringing St. Mary's up to date with the contemporary Catholic liturgy. Ironically, it was right after the church was dedicated in 1964 that the Vatican II directives were issued from Rome, dramatically changing the Catholic Mass and other aspects of the liturgy.

"In a sense, the church was outdated the day it was built," said Fr. Gardiner. "All kinds of makeshift changes had to be made, such as moving the altar up so the priest could say Mass facing the people. What we have finally done is incorporate all these changes into a permanent, comprehensive interior design that fully accommodates the modern liturgy."

Reflecting the more participatory nature of Catholic worship since Vatican II, pews in the church were slanted toward the altar, rather than facing straight ahead. The altar itself has been liturgically updated, as have a new devotional grotto and baptismal font in the front of the church. The church interior received a new artistic treatment, based on the concept of "elegant simplicity."

Increased comfort and convenience were two other objectives of the refurbishment. After three decades of sitting on hard wooden pews, St. Mary's parishioners now enjoy upholstered pews. Carpeting was installed in the church for the first time, which has not only added to a richer, more home-like atmosphere, but has greatly improved acoustics in the church.

The project included an upgraded sound system and better lighting. A much-needed parish meeting room was incorporated in the new design, as were features to accommodate physically challenged parishioners. This spring, additional landscaping is planned for the St. Mary's grounds to better contribute to the community's image as Charlevoix the Beautiful.

Energy efficiency measures added to the church as part of the project included new doors, improved weatherization and added insulation.

One of the most fortuitous aspects of the project was that the project's architect, Charlevoix native and St. Mary's member Lou Orlovski, was the same person who originally designed the church.

Fr. Gardiner noted, "It is pretty unusual to be able to go back to the same architect thirty years later for help with a design upgrade. This obviously contributed to the continuity of style."

So far, according to Fr. Gardiner, St. Mary's new look has won rave reviews from parishioners. Everyone seems to appreciate the changes, he said, which required more than a few sacrifices. In addition to responding generously to the Fulfillment '94 fund drive this summer (the $180,000 project is completely paid for) St. Mary's had to hold Sunday masses in the adjacent Parish Center for several weeks during the construction process.

BEACONS

By Pastor Merle Wellhousen

Discussions this time of the year seem to center on what we "got" for Christmas. Think about this statement for a moment... Is this not the way some look at this time of the year? If we listen to ourselves when we converse with people following Christmas Day, I believe we could hear ourselves saying something like, "It is more blessed to receive than to give." Listen to your conversations with others: "What did you get for Christmas?" "What did your husband/wife get you for Christmas?" "What did your parents/grandparents get you for Christmas?" Often our post-Christmas discussions center around what we "got."

It is so easy for us to get caught up in the receiving mode. I remember when I was a child, I could not wait until Christmas day when as a family we would open our presents. I would awaken early and sit by the tree until my parents strolled out of their room. Once we began, I would frantically tear away all the wrapping paper to see the gift hidden inside. I would go from one present to another, hoping they would never stop coming. Once I completed opening all my presents, a chilling feeling would come upon me because I wanted to receive more. When I was young, I liked to receive.

However, Christmas is a time of giving. A time not necessarily centered around gift-wrapped presents, though. Christmas is the celebration of a birthday—the birthday of Jesus, nearly 2,000 years ago, God responded with a gift—that the whole world desperately needed: a Saviour from sin and death. God knew we could never save ourselves, so He sent His Son to the world in the Baby Jesus born in Bethlehem, on a rescue mission; to rescue a lost world. The angels announced the good news: "Do not be afraid! For I bring you great news and it is for everyone! The Saviour—yes, the Messiah, the Lord—has been born tonight in Bethlehem." It was God who first initiated giving at Christmas. The gift of His Son, whose birth we celebrate each year on Dec. 25.

This Christmas, I hope you "got" at least one gift: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given." The greatest gift you could ever receive!

K-5 reading program earns encyclopedias

Charlevoix K-5 school students recently completed a reading program which allowed the school to purchase encyclopedias and other informational material worth $14,300 in monetary terms. What the books are worth in terms of knowledge depends on how much and how effectively they are used.

The reading program was a cooperative effort between the school, students, families, Charlevoix PTO and Worldbook Encyclopedias. Students, who began the program this fall, were asked to read books and get sponsors pledging money for each book they read. Worldbook has a Partners In Excellence program in which they will match $1 for every $2 the students raise. The reading project replaced a candy sale which the school and PTO did last year as a fundraising project and got a bunch of flack for. The goal was to raise enough money to put a new set of encyclopedias in every classroom. Not only did the students make that goal, but there was also some money left over for additional materials.

Last week, at the conclusion of the program, the students received certificates and medals for their reading accomplishments.

School principal Vane Smith and PTO officer Kathy Reid were both extremely pleased with the way the project turned out. Smith said that until the project the school's encyclopedias were distributed on kind of a hand-me-down basis. When a set of new ones was purchased, another class got the old ones. Well, information in this world is not a static thing. Time passes and things change. Now, everyone has encyclopedias which are up to date. And what made that possible? Reading. The acquisition of knowledge.

Mrs. McDermott's second grade class receives their awards for their part in the K-5 reading program which earned new encyclopedias for the school.

...middle school joins the world of computers

The Middle School has a typesetting program which allows the students to work at their own pace and indicates their level of improvement. Some of the students are approaching a typing speed of 50 words per minute.

In addition to keyboard skills, the sixth and eighth grade students also branch out into word processing, data base, spread sheets and some basic programming.

Chew said that as the use of computers continues to develop at the Middle School, he hopes to see computers integrated into the rest of the school curriculum. Right now, the computer lab is something of an entity unto itself. Students use the computers when they have computer class. Chew would like to see the computer room evolve into a resource room where the students could use the computer as a tool to assist them with whatever subject they happened to be working on.

Along with the 24 student computers, one teacher computer and one file server computer in the computer lab, there are currently half a dozen other computers in various other Middle School classrooms. Ultimately, there will be a computer in every classroom.

According to Chew, the student response to the computers, at least among those who have the computer class, has been excellent. But students aren't the only ones who are being educated by the new computers. The computers are also requiring staff members to do some learning. Chew said that computer training people are scheduled to come in and work with the Middle School staff in January.

The Middle School has also experimented with some computer equipment beyond the basic computers. Students working on the school newspaper have used both a still video camera and a scanner to put photographs on the computers and then into the newspaper. Chew also has used a modem to hook the Middle School into the America On-Line computer network. He said by using America On-Line, if he has a question or a problem with some computer hardware or software, he can put that question on the on-line system and other people who have had the same problem can respond with answers.

Chew has also experimented with CD-ROM discs (discs which hold massive amounts of information), but he said the problem with using CD-ROM on a network is that it slows everything down.

...council considers fire truck options

also will reduce water capacity by 250 gallons, from 1,000 gallons to 750. It would also reduce some cabinet storage capacity on the truck.

Bergmann said he has never used a top mount fire truck and has nothing against them, but feels that the truck needs to carry 1,000 gallons of water rather than 750. He, and councilman Don Meggison, noted that it's crucial for the first truck on the fire scene to have adequate water. Bergmann said there have been fires where if the first fire truck would have had just a bit more water significant fire damage could have been prevented. In regard to safety, Bergmann said there are also safety concerns about top mount arrangements. He said that in order to keep pump operators from falling off the truck, a special gate must be installed. The gate not only keeps firemen from falling off the truck, but traps them atop the truck.

Bergmann also noted that one of the primary considerations in the truck design has been keeping the truck base small and keeping the truck maneuverable because currently there are some places that the fire department has a tough time getting to. With a top mount control panel the wheel base would increase from 154 to 167 inches if the water capacity was reduced to 750 gallons or from 154 to 183 inches if the water capacity was left at 1,000 gallons.

The ladder issue was a secondary concern. Carver feels a hydraulic system would be easier to unload. Bergman feels that a roller system will work while a hydraulic system will cause the ladders to protrude from the sides of the truck where they can be damaged by tree limbs and other obstacles in close quarters.

After hearing the pros and cons of the differing recommendations and the need for clarification of the bid specs, the council voted to send the matter back to the committee. The committee is to clarify the bid specs and see if they can reach an agreement on the issues where opinions differ. The matter will come back before the council Jan. 18.

Elementary school students gathered in the gym last week for their annual Christmas singalong.

Marina LaBlance led the fifth grade choir, The Lost Chords, through a tricky version of Silent Night that included a separate descante.

Shannon Nystrom and Adrienne Winchester performed a dance to The Nutcracker.

The elementary school faculty gave a rousing performance of The Twelve Days of Christmas. (Ron Cox was a partridge in a pear tree; Vane Smith, Dave Moyer, Stan Martin, and Jim Glynn were ten lords a leaping.)

BUSINESS

Bank merger takes a step forward

The merger of Charlevoix County State Bank and First State Bank moved a step closer last week as the Federal Reserve Board announced its approval of the application of CB Financial Corporation to acquire First of Charlevoix Corporation and its subsidiary, First State Bank of Charlevoix. CB Financial Corporation is a Jackson, MI based holding company which purchased Charlevoix County State Bank last year.

Federal Reserve Board approval is another of many steps involved in the acquisition. Brian D. Bell, Chairman, President and CEO of CB Financial, said that the affiliation of CB Financial and First State Bank is expected to be consummated next month.

Thomas Duke, Chairman of First of Charlevoix Corporation, said, "We are very pleased with the approval and look forward to combining the talents and resources of two fine organizations to allow us to better serve the banking needs of northwestern Michigan."

In addition to Charlevoix County State Bank, CB Financial is also the parent company of City Bank & Trust Co. N.A. of Jackson and City Bank of St. Johns. CB Financial Corporation and its banking subsidiaries reported assets as of Sept. 30, 1992 of $628.3 million. First of Charlevoix Corporation and its single bank subsidiary, First State Bank of Charlevoix, with branches in Boyne City and on Beaver Island, reported assets as of Sept. 30, 1992 of $46.6 million.

Rayders thrash Petoskey

Saturday, one night after losing to Boyne City, 56-50, Charlevoix's varsity basketball team got back on the winning track pouncing Petoskey 80-58.

Charlevoix controlled the paint with center Brad DeGrow and the open court with guards Don Jess and Brandon Webb.

The Rayders led early, led in the middle and led late in the game. By the second quarter the Rayders had established a 12 point lead. At halftime they were up 37-28.

Charlevoix broke the game wide open at the end of the third quarter. With the Rayders up by 10, Jess hit a three-point basket, then stole a Petoskey pass and hit another three-point.

Four games into the season, the Rayders have shown depth to be one of the team's strengths. Jess, DeGrow, Keith Carey, Jason Pshopaidas and Vince Voisin have been starting while Webb, Dave Dobulis, David Skeel and Matt Norton have been making major contributions off the bench.

Against Petoskey, Jess led the Rayders in scoring with 19 points, including three three-point baskets. DeGrow had 16, Webb 15 and Jason Pshopaidas 10. Jess also had eight assists and four steals. DeGrow had nine rebounds and four blocked shots. Webb had five rebounds and three steals. Carey had five assists.

Charlevoix's junior varsity team got obliterated by Petoskey 77-38. Gary Leitner led the Rayders with 15 points.

The Rayders are now off for the holidays until Jan. 8 when they will host Traverse City St. Francis.

...following 56-50 loss to Boyne City

There's only one thing which can really spoil the night when your team plays well. That's when the other team plays better.

Charlevoix and Boyne City both entered Friday evening's basketball games with 2-0 records. Both teams played well in a close game, but Boyne City pulled out a 56-50 win in the closing minutes.

Boyne City led by a few points for most of the game, but pulled even midway through the fourth quarter at 48-48 on a three-point basket by Dave Dobulis.

Boyne City then scored the next two baskets. Charlevoix answered with one basket, but then the Ramblers scored the final two baskets of the game.

Brad DeGrow led the Rayders in scoring with 16 points while Keith Carey had nine. DeGrow also had 14 rebounds. Dobulis had five boards. Don Jess had six assists and three steals.

The Rayders junior varsity team won 55-38 with Mike Bush and Chuck Pop each scoring a dozen points.

School to add soccer and middle school football

High School soccer and Middle School football will be sanctioned school sports in the fall of 1993. The Charlevoix Board of Education approved the addition of the two new extracurricular sports at their Dec. 21 board meeting.

Athletic Director Richard Swenor cited the following reasons for offering tackle football to seventh and eighth graders:

* Other area schools offer football at middle school level.

* The only fall sports currently available to middle school boys are 4H soccer and cross country running.

* Middle school football will help with gate receipts at high school football games. The theory is that if boys start to learn the fundamentals of football in middle school, they will be that much better at the high school level. "People expect quality football when they come to the games," Swenor said.

It will be relatively safe. Middle school football will be played on an intramural basis without kick offs or punts. (The start up costs for middle school football will be around $15,000, with a yearly maintenance cost of about $700.)

Middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder said of the middle school football program, "I'm all for it. In this day and age we need all we can have to keep the (middle school kids) busy and occupied in a positive way."

Middle school parent Sheila Bogart said she agreed with VanGuilder about offering extracurricular programs to middle school children, but she added, "I'm asking the school board - where are you helping the non-athletic student?" Bogart said that football only helps boys, not girls. Bogart mentioned the middle school performing arts program, for which $500 has been allotted by VanGuilder. She expressed the belief that performing arts in the middle school could reach more students, both the athletes and non-athletes, regardless of gender.

Co-ed soccer sanctioned as a high school sport was unanimously approved by the school board without much discussion. New board member MaryLee Campbell did point out to the board that they be prepared to offer girls soccer in the future. With the addition of co-ed soccer, it will probably be a matter of time before the sport will be split into boys soccer and girls soccer.

In other business, the school board voted to lay off part time English teacher Kris Schaperkotter. A full time position was made available at the high school due to English teacher Betty Henney's move to the elementary school as librarian. Henney taught English full time, with Schaperkotter teaching two classes. Henney will now teach two English classes at the high school and work part time at the elementary school as librarian. The full time teaching position was offered to Schaperkotter, who declined the position.

A parent's meeting for the Scheduling, Time and Bus committee will be held Jan. 6 at 7:30 in the high school study hall.

The Jan. 4 school board work session meeting has been changed to Jan. 11 at 7:30 in the high school study hall.

Council approves $208,648 to purchase new fire truck

Approval given in spite of objections from truck design committee

By L. Scott Swanson

By a 4-3 vote the City Council has voted to purchase a new fire truck for $208,648 despite the fact that the truck doesn't meet with the approval of the majority of the committee which drew up the specifications for it. Meanwhile, firemen and audience members who opposed the purchase charged that political maneuvering leading up to Monday evening's decision was "underhanded" and not done in an up-front manner.

More than a year ago, the council appointed an ad-hoc committee to come up with specifications for a new first response fire truck to replace a 1960s truck. The committee's recommendation to the council was not unanimous. At the council's Dec. 21 meeting, the differences in opinion on the committee were explained to the council. Fire chief Doug Carver said he wants a truck with a 365 horsepower engine, a top mount control panel, a hydraulic ladder rack and can live with a water capacity of 750 rather than a 1,000 gallons of water. Volunteer Fire Department Captain Doug Bergmann explained that he and other committee members favor a larger engine (a 450 horsepower), a side mount control panel, a ladder rack on rollers and feel strongly that the truck should carry 1,000 gallons of water.

After listening to Carver and Bergmann explain both positions, the council voted to refer the matter back to the fire truck committee and take it up again at the council's Jan. 18 meeting. Sometime between the Dec. 21 meeting and Dec. 24 those plans changed and at the request of council members Cheri Hoffman, Ted Felter, Jackie Cross and Pat Gaskin the fire truck purchase was put on the agenda for the Dec. 28 special meeting.

Barry Wood, who served on the committee, alleged that city manager Mike Wiesner prompted the matter to be brought up at the Dec. 28 meeting rather than going back to the committee. Wood said that on the day after the Dec. 21 meeting he was talking to Carver

"As far as I'm concerned, if that's what you want to buy, you might as well save your $200,000"

Fire truck design committee member Doug Bergmann and Wiesner joined the conversation. Wood said that Wiesner eventually said that Carver had the expertise in regard to the fire truck, not the committee and that the matter was not going to go back to the committee because the committee was loaded.

Charlevoix one of only 12 cities affected by liquor law

By L. Scott Swanson

A new liquor law passed by the state legislature in July affects only a dozen communities in all of Michigan. Charlevoix happens to be one of them.

The law is section 28 of the Liquor Control Act. It allows businesses that sell gas to also sell liquor provided the business is located in a municipality with a population of 3,500 or less and in a county with a population of less than 31,000. Only a dozen cities and townships in Michigan meet that criteria. They are: the city of Charlevoix and Boyne City in Charlevoix County; Mancelona Township in Antrim County; Clare and Surrey Township in Clare

County; Elmwood Township in Leelanau County; Mills Township in Ogemaw County; Ontonagon Township in Ontonagon County; Gaylord in Otsego County; Roscommon Township and Richfield Township in Roscommon County; and Manistique in Schoolcraft County.

Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said he finds the legislation "curious" for two reasons: allowing more gas stations to sell alcohol despite increasing public concern about drinking and driving; and it affects so few communities.

Penny Fleishman from the Midland-based state office of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) said the legislation was something MADD took notice of when it was being debated in the legislature, but since it affected so few communities it wasn't something MADD aggressively pursued.

The legislation was sponsored by Representative Thomas Hickner from Bay City. Hickner could not be reached for comment.

In addition to the population requirement, gas stations applying for a liquor license under the provisions of the new law must also have an inventory beyond gas and alcohol, with a value of at least $10,000 for a beer and wine (SDM) license or at least $12,000 for a bottled liquor (SDD) license.

Halverson said that in recent Meeting to focus on High School class scheduling

Charlevoix public school students and their parents are invited to attend a meeting to discuss possible modifications to the high school schedule to allow students greater flexibility in selecting classes. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 6 in the high school study hall.

can work into their class schedule. High school teachers have met and formulated a proposal to address this concern. At the Jan. 6 meeting a panel of high school teachers will present the proposal and respond to questions.

Dave Norton will be the moderator for the meeting which will focus entirely on school scheduling. Other concerns may be addressed at future meetings.

... fire truck purchase draws objections

At Monday evening's meeting, Wood said that if that is the direction the council is going to support then the council should disband the committee.

"Do something up front for a change. Do it the right way," Wood said.

Second ward resident Billie Smith asked why council members Meggison and Butch Russell apparently weren't involved in the decision to move the matter up to the Dec. 28 agenda.

Earlier in the discussion, Russell asked what the committee had come up with and was told that since the Dec. 21 council meeting the fire truck committee had not met.

"I thought we voted to send it back to the committee," Russell said.

Hoffman said, "I'm perfectly comfortable with Chief Carver's recommendation."

When Smith was criticizing the council, Hoffman said that following the Dec. 21 meeting she had received criticism for the council allowing a public debate between an "employee and a superior."

Smith said, "I'm sick of this underhanded business."

She said Wiesner is not supposed to tell the council what to do. "Doesn't he (Wiesner) realize that our council is his boss?" she said.

At the opening of the discussion Carver explained that he had talked to the fire truck manufacturer and been told that the top mount truck could be shortened by eight inches and still carry 1,000 gallons of water. (A recurring issue in the debate has been the need to keep the truck short so that it can get down narrow roads with tight turns.)

First ward council member Don Meggison, a retired mechanic and retired volunteer fireman, asked if that truck would be with the 450 engine or the 365. Carver replied that it would be with the smaller engine. At the Dec. 21 meeting, he said he had talked to two truck manufacturers who had recommended the 365 engine.

"You've got to have some power in an emergency vehicle," Meggison said. "I'll go along with the committee. It's got to have a bigger engine than what you have planned."

Bergmann prefaced his comments by saying, "The eighteenth of January sure got here awfully quick." He said that what the truck Carver proposed will have a 30-foot turning radius and be replacing a truck with a 22-foot turning radius. He said the truck will also be underpowered.

"I'm perfectly comfortable with Chief Carver's recommendation."

First ward council representative Cheri Hoffman

"As far as I'm concerned, if that's what you want to buy, you might as well save your $200,000," Bergmann said.

Carver said that on Dec. 22 he and full-time fireman Lyle Gennett checked every private driveway from Iron to Pincherry Road and found none that are passable with the current truck that won't be passable with the new truck.

Wood asked if that driveway survey was done in a fire truck or a pick-up truck. Carver said it was done in a pick-up truck but that approximately a year ago Gennett surveyed several driveways with one of the department's fire trucks. Volunteer fireman Charles Bergmann said that following one such survey in recent years the City sent letters to approximately half a dozen people saying the fire department would not be able to get to their homes.

Meggison said he is willing to accept the top mount control panel, but feels the larger engine and consequent added power is needed. Cross said he agreed.

Hoffman asked what the difference in speed would be. Carver said it would depend on how the truck was geared. Felter explained that there wouldn't be a significant difference in top end speed, but the additional power would allow the truck to maintain speed on hills.

Hoffman then made a motion to purchase the truck as recommended by Carver. Gaskin seconded the motion.

When the roll was called, Russell, Cross and Meggison voted against the purchase. Hoffman, Gaskin and Felter voted in favor. Novotny cast the tie-breaking vote in favor of the purchase.

OPINIONS

Editorial

Power play was unnecessary

Mayor Dave Novotny and three members of the City Council, Ted Felter, Pat Gaskin and Cheri Hoffman, perhaps acting at the behest of City Manager Mike Wiesner, made a curious decision when they chose to short circuit a legitimate debate in favor of a heavy-handed power play.

The debate centered around the purchase of a new fire truck. (See related story on page 1) More than a year ago the council established an ad-hoc committee to draw up specifications for a new fire truck to replace an old one. After the committee was well into the design process, a new fire chief, Doug Carver, was hired. Carver took office at a time when there was a great deal of friction between the volunteer firemen and Wiesner and some members of the council.

As fire chief, Carver joined the design committee. And as things turned out he had some opinions in regard to the fire truck design which differed from the opinions of other members of the committee.

At the Dec. 21 council meeting, Carver explained what he would like to see on the new fire truck and Doug Bergmann, another member of the committee, explained what the other members of the committee want on the truck. At the request of Gaskin, the two men even had a brief mini "debate" explaining the rationale behind their positions. In the "debate" both men conducted themselves as gentlemen and the discussion took place on an intellectual level as they explained why they had arrived at different conclusions.

Council members listened and then, determining that there appeared to be room for additional compromise, sent the matter back to the committee with the understanding that the issue would be taken up again at the Jan. 18 council meeting.

Up to that point, things were going fine. Rational discussion was leading to a decision which, granted probably wouldn't end up making everybody happy no matter what was done, but would be based on all available information.

But sometime between Monday, Dec. 21 and Thursday, Dec. 24 things went awry. Rather than giving the committee time to see if they could work things out, somebody decided the fire truck issue should be put on the Dec. 28 special meeting agenda. The notice for the Dec. 28 meeting said, "Also, at the request of council members Hoffman, Felter, Cross and Gaskin, discussion on the purchase of a fire truck has been added to the agenda." At the Dec. 28 council meeting, volunteer fireman and fire truck committee member Barry Wood charged that Wiesner is actually the one who prompted the move. Wood said that Wiesner told him the truck should be Carver's decision and that the committee would not be involved.

Now, you can make a reasonable argument that under normal circumstances the design of a fire truck should ultimately be the fire chief's call. But this truck wasn't designed under normal circumstances. Former fire chief John Martin was in the midst of a transition to a new job. The council, which Gaskin, Felter, Hoffman and Novotny were all on at the time, appointed an ad hoc committee to work on a fire truck design.

Subsequently, Carver was hired and joined the committee and had some different viewpoints. There's nothing wrong with that.

The council was in a position to be arbitrate, or more preferably mediate, those differing views. Had they waited until Jan. 18, giving the truck committee time to perhaps find some additional common ground, the council would have been in a position to vote based on the merits of the arguments before them. They could have voted however they wished on the issue and nobody would have had much room to complain.

But for some reason they chose not to do that. Somehow they got it in their heads that what was needed was some type of show of power. So they trashed the idea of discussing the pros and cons of the separate proposals in favor of simply bullying something through - be it good, bad or indifferent. The council had an opportunity to perform as an objective and deliberative public body. They passed up that opportunity in favor of acting in a heavy-handed manner that came off looking rather petty and silly.

Letters to the editor

Prosecutor brought about his own problems

Editor,
In response to "Prosecutor blasts county board" letter (from current prosecutor Kraag Lieberman) appearing in Dec. 23, 1992 Courier.

Mr. Prosecutor, you requested raises by budget increases and you were always denied. Now you are angry. Well join the rest of us.

Every time the citizens of Charlevoix County requested something to be done about prosecuting the criminals, not plea bargain, the prosecutor's office always did nothing.

Mr. Prosecutor, don't you think, just maybe, you should take some of the blame for what is happening in your office, and stop blaming your defeat on a raise in pay for the new prosecutor, Mr. May?

Just as you are expressing your disgust because of a pay raise with the Charlevoix County Board and as you said to "no avail," how does it feel to want something, and your request falls on deaf ears?

The citizens of Charlevoix

County have been asking, pleading, and begging you to stop plea bargaining every case that hit your office, no matter what it was, and it fell on deaf ears, yours. We were just not heard.

Don't you think it's your fault you were not elected again, and not Mr. May's for getting a pay raise, and other attorneys who were thinking about running for office?

I don't think money had anything to do with the decision Mr. May made to run for prosecutor of Charlevoix County.

It's my guess that Mr. May could make more in his own practice. Citizens were looking for someone who would do the job the office is supposed to do prosecuting criminals, not letting them off with very limited time.

The Citizens of Charlevoix made a statement when they elected Mr. May for what they want and that is to feel and be safe from criminals in Charlevoix County.

Sincerely,
Ed Germain

EDITH

by EDITH GILBERT

Trying to blend traditions with the do-as-you-please present sometimes leaves one in a mild state of shock.

A tradition that has lasted a hundred years is to present the Nutcracker Ballet during the Christmas season. While attending this delightful performance in Petoskey last week, I was pleased to see such a good turnout. Sitting back and admiring the gorgeous costumes, the flawless set, my eyes rested on three young men seated in front of me. Nice, clean-cut men in their twenties wearing satin baseball jackets and baseball caps. Not another soul in the auditorium wore any kind of a hat. I was pleased that the young men were enjoying the performance — but why did they sit there with their caps on?

If this were the '50s instead of the '90s without a doubt, someone would have tapped one of the young men on the shoulder and said, "Please remove your hat." From time immemorial, the old rule has always been for men to remove their hats indoors or when in the presence of ladies. Even cowboys recognized the protocol that dictated removing one's hat when honoring God, the dead, the flag and the military. They also removed their hats when first introduced and they tipped their hats to acknowledge the presence of a lady.

The popular fashion of wearing baseball caps has swept the country but to my knowledge there are no written etiquette rules regarding the wearing of these caps.

If it were up to my eight year old nephew, Jacob, he would say, "you put it on when you get up and take it off when you go to bed." He never heard of Emily Post who said that "a gentleman never keeps his hat on in the presence of a lady in the house — ever!"

Fortunately most of the teachers across the country tell me that the wearing of baseball caps is banned in the classroom. Teachers can't tell one student from the other when they look down on a sea of baseball caps.

Restaurants today bemoan the presence of caps in white tablecloth restaurants both in major cities and resorts because it denigrates the ambience. Should one ask, "May I check your cap?" the customer is apt to say, "No thanks." Of course, some places still enforce dress codes such as the requirement to wear a tie and jacket, but on the other hand, even the strict "no slack" rule for women went by the boards in the '60s.

Having said all that, I will take courage by the hand, and write my own guidelines on when and when not to wear a baseball cap, Jacob notwithstanding.

Rule 1. Baseball caps may be worn outdoors for any sports event or activity, on the street, while driving a car or in a plane.

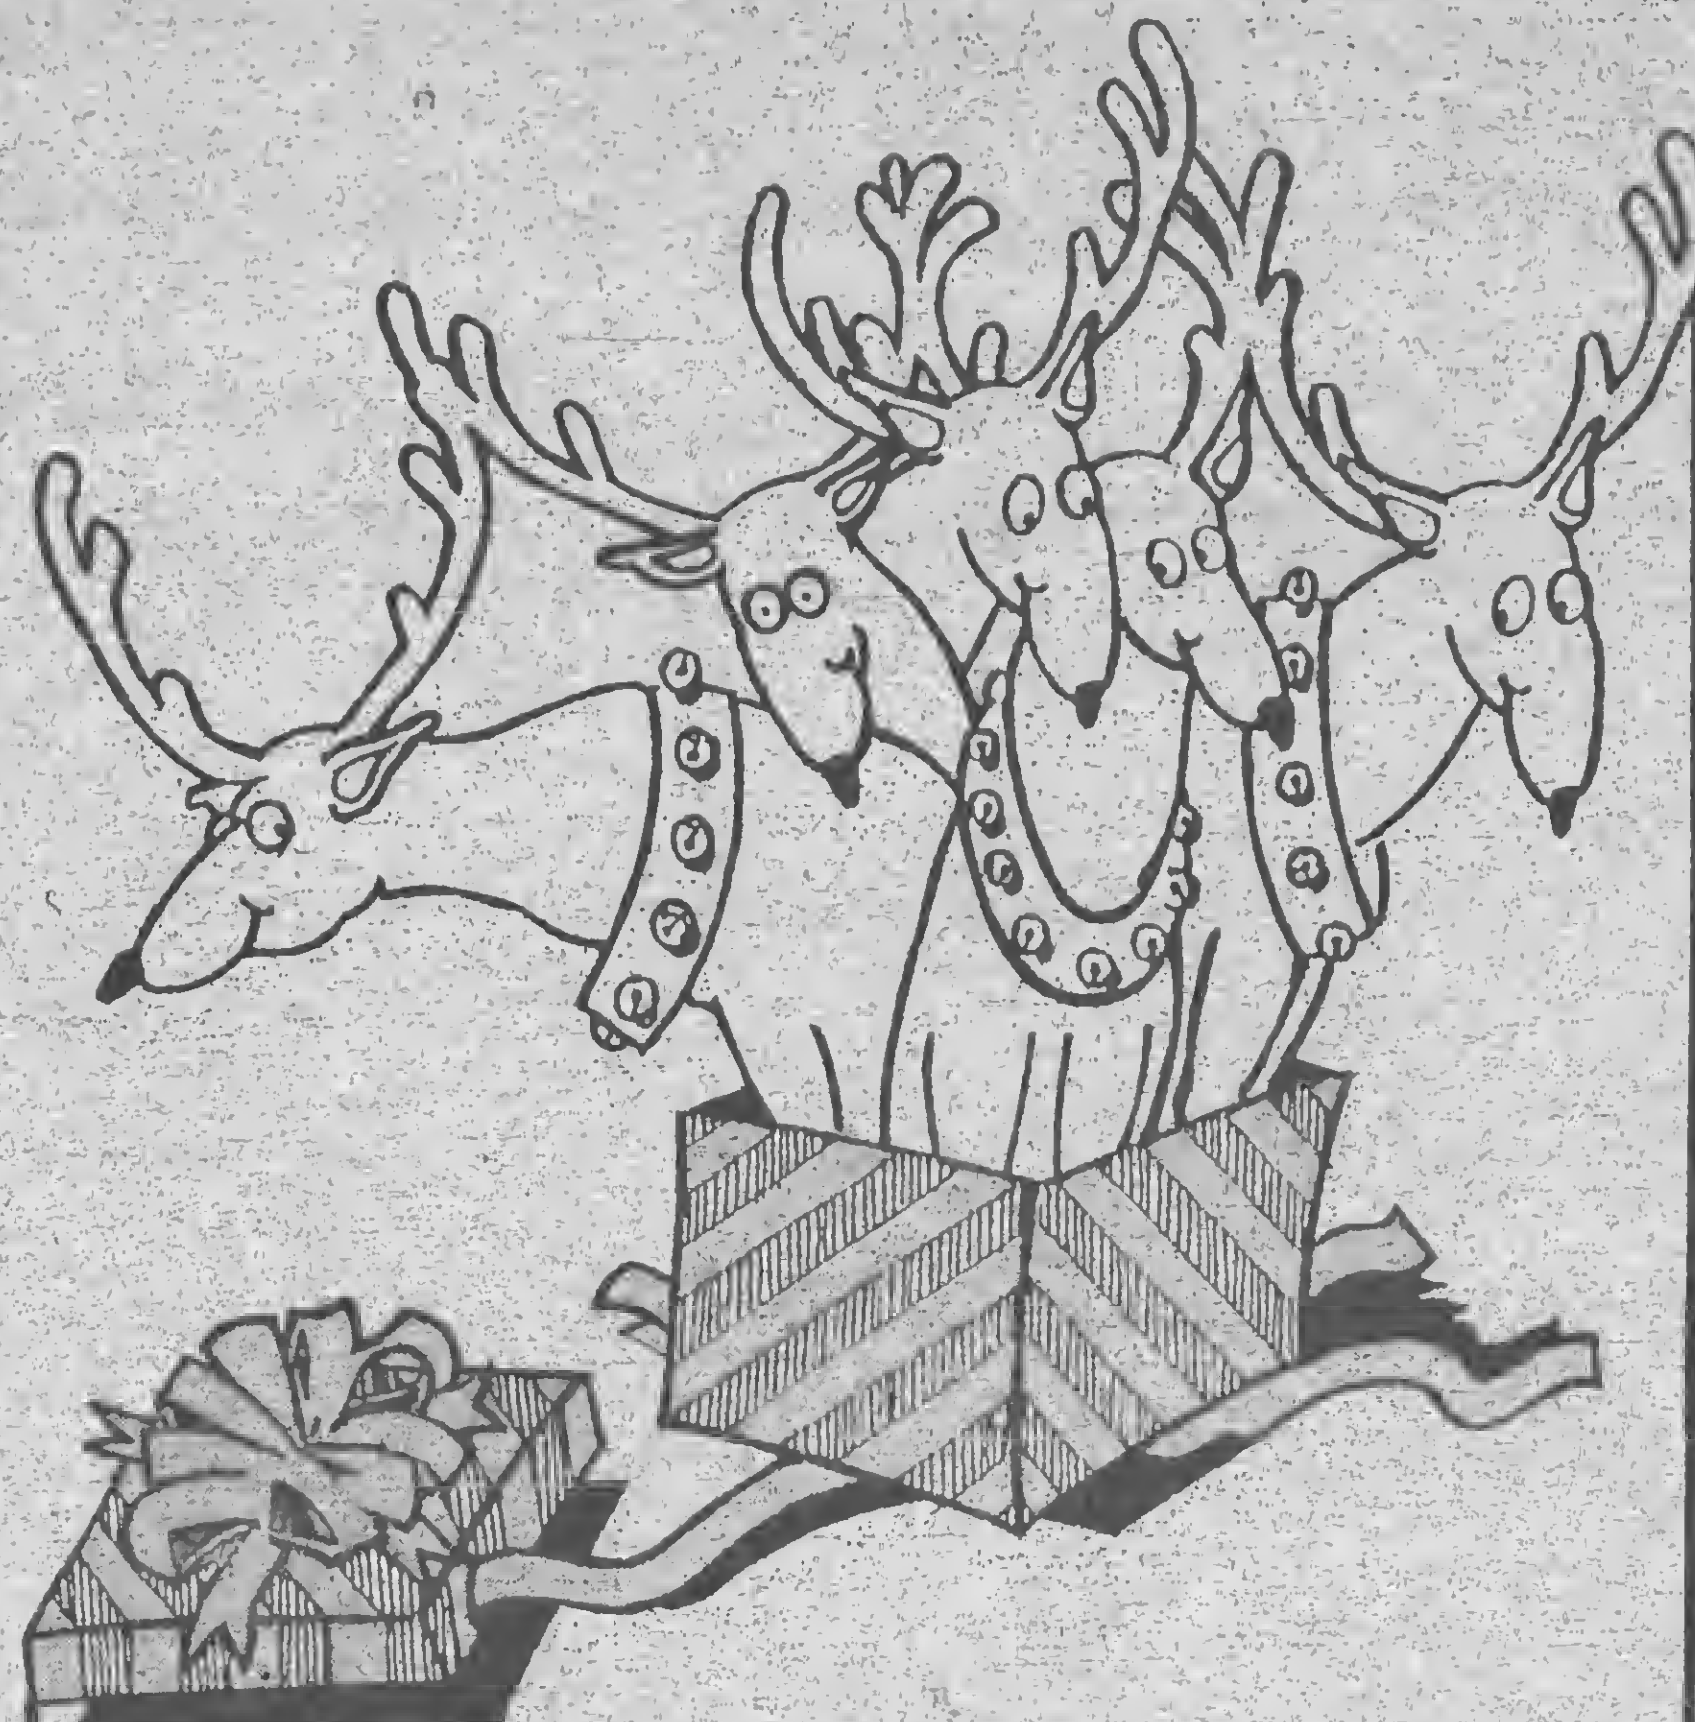

Rule 2. Baseball caps may be worn at rock concerts, super-dome events or under a circus tent.

Rule 3. Baseball caps may be worn in any fast food operation and some coffee shops.

Rule 4. Baseball caps should not be worn in the house or office.

Rule 5. Baseball caps should be removed before entering a movie house, theater or indoor concert hall.

Rule 6. Baseball caps should not be worn at a graduation, wedding, funeral or in church.

BEACONS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

Have you ever noticed when we get to the end of the year, how everybody and his brother seems to spend time looking back. "Time" names a "Person of the Year." CNN does a year in review show or two. Even our friends at the News Review reflect over northern Michigan's top news stories. There's nothing wrong with that at all. I hope 1992 was pretty good for you. I saw an eleven-year dream come true finishing my Masters Degree. Shaking the Dean's hand at CMU is something I did with a relish!

There really isn't anything wrong with looking back and there certainly is nothing wrong with remembering high points. I just wish more folks would invest time in looking ahead. Each day we get is a gift from God to be savored and used to the fullest. Once it is gone, it really is gone and not a single wasted moment can be reclaimed. If we can teach ourselves to be better prepared, new days can hold new joys and find us with even better memories to reflect on when the next year is done.

More people than you may realize are hung up with their pasts. It may be a wrong word either spoken or heard. It might be something that you did or failed to do. A loved one may have died without your having the chance to resolve some things. Once it happens, it can be difficult to make amends. If you have tried your best to seek or share forgiveness, if you have tried your best to offer love and friendship only to be turned back, then go on. If you have done your best, then let God do the rest.

There is a whole new year getting ready to dawn. It offers you new hopes and dreams, new opportunities, maybe even new friendships. Looking back and being concerned over what might have been will rob you of the joys that surely are lying ahead.

I think I would have enjoyed having a friendship with the apostle Paul long time ago. He is one of those folks I intend to look up when I get to Heaven. In his writings, he was one of the first to say that he wasn't always satisfied with the way things turned out in his life. How he handled those moments is what I want to leave with you today. Paul said, "Forgetting what is behind and straining towards what is ahead, I press on toward the goal to win the prize for which God has called me heavenward in Christ Jesus." Enjoy your memories. Learn to let go of the painful ones. Really look ahead. Be encouraged by the blessings God has in store for you in 1993!

Computers bring a hush to typing class

High school typewriters being replaced by IBM computers

By L. Scott Swanson

(Writer's note: This is the third and final story in a series regarding additional computers which have been purchased for the Charlevoix School System. The previous two stories dealt with computers in the elementary and middle schools. This story concerns computers which have been purchased for the high school. In 1991 Charlevoix School District voters approved a $500,000 tax increase over three years to purchase computers and other technological equipment. The purpose of this story was simply to take a look at some of the things that money has purchased.)

Doris Robinson's high school class is much quieter than it used to be. In the nearly 30 years that Robinson has taught at Charlevoix High School, she has seen Charlevoix's high school typing classes make the transition from manual typewriters to electric typewriters and now to computers. In terms of the sound, it has been an evolution of whap...whap...whap, whap...bing to rap, rap, rap...rap, rap...rap, rap, rap to a hushed tick, tick, tick, tick, tick.

"I think we can go through the information faster. Although I don't have as much control over their (the students') knowledge of keyboarding," Robinson answered when asked what the computers have done for her typing and business classes.

There are 25 IBM computers and two printers in Robinson's classroom. The computers are networked together. Robinson said the advantage of the network is that she can put instructions on one computer and have all of the students see it.

In Robinson's classes, students first learn the principals and mechanics of typing and then apply those skills to writing term papers complete with references and footnotes.

There are still about 15 typewriters left in the class, some of them are typewriters with memory. The typewriters are still used to a limited degree, but most of the work is done on computers.

"They've accepted it quite well," Robinson said of the adaptation from typewriters to computers.

Sophomore Melissa Anderson said of the computers, "They're fun because they're easier to correct mistakes."

And speaking of fun, one of the things Robinson and other computer teachers have encountered is students not only working on their computers, but also playing on them. This is something peculiar to computer classes. In no other class do students play with the textbook.

To cope with this Robinson has adopted a philosophy which is likely to serve the students well in later life: First you get your work done then you can play.

While Robinson's classes emphasize typing and business skills, Ken Bartley's classes focus on computer use and programming. Bartley's room has desks and chairs in the center of the room with 20 IBM 286 computers lining the walls.

Computer Literacy, an introductory course, is required for all high school students. Students who choose to continue in computer classes can take additional application and programming classes. Charlevoix High School students can take up to three years of computer programming. Bartley said that's enough to get them as far as an introduction to the Pasquel computer language. Adult education classes are taught on the computers in the evening.

...school computers

Fostering a desire among the students to take computer classes hasn't been a problem. "The problem is usually a conflict with other courses they want to take," Bartley explained.

Jeremy Boss, a junior, is taking his first programming class. Although it's his first class, it isn't his first brush with computers. Boss is one of a growing number of students with a computer at home.

Asked why he took the class,

Boss replied, "Just because everything's dealing with computers now-days. So you've got to learn how to use them."

Jason Psihopaidas, a senior, is taking his second computer class. After taking Computer Literacy, he is now taking a programming class.

"It's all right, but sometimes confusing," Psihopaidas said of the class. He noted that as you go on you reach a level of comfort in dealing with the computers.

Comfort is a word which Bartley also used when describing Charlevoix High School's computer program. He said that with the experience the students are getting on a computer network, after graduation they "can step into any business situation with a (computer) network and be comfortable."

James Conlan (left) and Jason Psihopaidas ponder what their next move should be in a computer class. The students in the computer lab are working on IBM 286 computers.

Council ponders what to do about gas leak and contamination at City garage

By L. Scott Swanson

How far do you trust the State when it comes to funding? The City Council considered that question Monday evening as they debated what to do about soil contamination caused by leaks from street department gas tanks.

The tanks which were buried at the city garage near the corner of Stover Road and Ferry Avenue have been pulled and some preliminary testing has been done. This past April the city sent a report to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. The city also filed an application for a state funding program to help with clean-up costs. At the time the city filed to join the funding program the state said that once the city was in the program the city would be responsible for the first $10,000 of clean-up costs and the state would reimburse the

Now, the city has budgeted $10,000 and is ready to do additional borings and soil testing, at a cost of $30,300, to determine the extent of the problem. And now, the story from Lansing has changed. Apparently state funding for the underground contamination program is running dry and the state may not be able to reimburse the city for costs above $10,000.

"That's sort of a bum deal," said second ward council member Ted Felter at Monday evening's meeting.

said the city has been working with a clean-up firm and an attorney who specializes in underground contamination problems. Wiesner said the state's current position is that all claims for reimbursement should be turned in by Feb. 8 and they'll reimburse as many as funds allow. Wiesner said there is also talk in Lansing of replenishing the reimbursement fund.

Monday evening the council approved hiring McNamee Industrial Services out of Ann Arbor to do additional testing at a cost of $30,300. That cost will be submitted for reimbursement.

Felter noted that even if the city submits a claim for reimbursement, there is no guarantee they will receive all or any of the reimbursement requested. Further casting a dim scenario, Felter said that potentially, the city could eat that $30,000 cost and then have a clean-up plan which could carry a price tag of $200,000 or $300,000. Then the state could attempt to force the city to implement the plan and not reimburse any of those costs either. Council member Butch Russell said he shares Felter's concerns.

Mayor Dave Novotny said that despite those concerns, it makes sense to take care of the problem as soon as possible rather than waiting and taking the risk of having to deal with a bigger problem later.

The council ended up unanimously approving a motion to have the additional work done at a cost not to exceed $30,300.

Donations help Camp Daggett

Ralph Beebe, President of the Friends of Camp Daggett, recently presented a check for $1200 to Bob Brummeler, treasurer of the board of trustees of Camp Daggett. The Friends gave given $5,000 to Camp Daggett this year, and have donated more than $15,000 since the founding of Friends of Camp Daggett in 1988.

The Friends of Camp Daggett is comprised of people interested in the betterment and maintenance of Camp Daggett by providing financial and occasionally, physical assistance to Camp Daggett, so that the low cost of camping can be continued.

Membership fee for the Friends of Camp Daggett is $10 and the recruitment of at least one additional member per year.

Power plant works toward establishing day-care program for employees' children

Receiving a child care grant from the corporate office of Consumers Power Company was simple, thought Big Rock Point Human Resource Director Ellen Zienert. The tough part was to use the money in a truly effective way that benefited employees, the plant and the children.

Zienert first formed an employees committee that subsequently enlisted the services of Deborah Rohe, M.A., a child care expert based in Petoskey. The committee recommended that Big Rock pursue a Child Care Resource and Referral Program for employees. Letters have been sent to licensed day care homes and child care centers requesting information for inclusion into a directory for employees.

"With the labor pool increasingly comprised of working parents, the availability of quality child care services directly impacts employers," said Zienert. "Since employers providing child care services have noted positive impact on working parents we were interested in exploring this benefit more fully." Zienert noted some of the positive influences include reduced turnover, reduced absenteeism, increased morale, tax benefits, scheduling, improved work force and improved service.

"A Resource and Referral program would focus attention on family day care or group day care providers," Zienert said. "With specialty services such as, infant care, mildly sick child care, afternoon care, evening and weekend care, a day care home would be able to accommodate our employees best.

Other area businesses also report the need for child care services. Mike Paliwoda of Hoskins Manufacturing Company attended an organizational meeting for the area employers interested in participating in the Resource and Referral Program. Paliwoda says, "An employee absent due to child care can cost a company as much as 2 and a half times that person's salary for the day. Implementing a child care service would be very valuable to our company."

Zienert and her committee are also exploring drop off care and emergency child care to address when employees have child care arrangements and find at the last moment that the child care provider is ill and unable to care for the children. She said options include assisting child care providers with a substitute provider for the day or possibly maintaining a list of part time home providers.

Companies interested in offering child care, participating in a child care service, or individuals interested in becoming licensed or assisting on a part time basis should call Debbie Rohe at 616-347-8853.

Holiday party helps Salvation Army

months there have been three local gas stations which applied for a liquor license. EZ Mart at the corner of M-66 and U.S. 31 received a license. The Shell Station at the corner of Bridge Street and East Carpenter faces rejection of their application due to opposition from Halverson, the City Council and the school. The Total Station on U.S. 31 north, which has had its application opposed by the City Council.

According to Halverson, approximately two dozen businesses in the city currently hold some type of liquor license. (See accompanying list).

In recent months, the City Police Department has done several liquor control license application investigations. In addition to the gas station applications, Cravings and Rosa's Italian Bakery also had applied for licenses. Cravings received a license. Rosa's application has been opposed by the City Council.

Applicants for liquor licenses are inspected by both the local police and the State Liquor Control Commission (LCC). Local police check things such as the business' location, building and identification of the property owner. The LCC checks things such as the business' assets and inventory.

The ultimate decision as to whether or not the license is granted rests with the LCC, however the local governing body and police chief are asked to recommend either approval or denial. Although the local recommendations are not binding, they are considered to be significant factors in the LCC's decision.

In recent months the council has recommended denial of applications by the Shell station, Rosa's and the Total Station.

At the Dec. 21 council meeting Maria Tripuchio of Rosa's said the business has received requests from customers for imported wines. She said that if the business received an SDM license, all of the wine and beer would be behind the counter where customers couldn't touch it without first having a counter attendant bring it to them. In response to objections from council members regarding the business' close proximity to the high school, Tripuchio said the business already has many high school students as customers and that has not been a problem.

In regard to the Total Station request, second ward council member Ted Felter questioned the amount of space in the facility. First ward council member Don Meggison, a retired mechanic, said he didn't feel gas stations should be selling alcohol.

The council unanimously recommended denial of both the Rosa's and Total Station requests.

Halverson said that in addition to the initial inspection, local police must continue to inspect businesses which receive liquor licenses. Each of Charlevoix's police officers is assigned about six places to monitor. At least once a month a police officer is in each local business holding a liquor license.

Halverson noted that local establishments are for the most part very good about not selling to minors. "They can't afford not to be diligent because of criminal and civil connotations."

SPORTS

Above: Young skiers cluster at the bottom of Mount McSaubia Monday morning. Last week's weather helped in snowmaking, but this week's warm weather has set the program back.

The ski slope is open - so winter's all downhill from here

Snowguns blasted Mt. McSaubia with snow just prior to the hill's opening on December 28th. Warm weather earlier this season made snowmaking impossible. Temperatures need to be at 28 degrees or colder for the snow guns to operate.
